"Words cannot express my thanks and gratitude for such a generous and magnificent gift which I received at Christmas on behalf of our sick and wounded in hospital. The patients were simply delighted and charmed with the various gifts, and especially so when they knew they had been sent by command of Her most Kind and Gracious Majesty, the Queen. If you could only have seen them on Christmas Day, how cheery and delighted they all were, you would then perhaps, realize how much the gifts had really been appreciated. The plum puddings were greatly enjoyed by them, and voted the best they had ever tasted. Also the dressings and comforts sent are so beautifully made in every way."

Mrs. Angus, president of the Queen Mary's Needlework Guild in Canada, appeals to all Canadian women "who ever contributed towards the Queen's Birthday Shower, to repeat their good work, and also to appeal to others who wish to join in this good work, and demonstration of love and loyalty to Her Majesty the Queen." The donations most in demand are: Day, night or hospital shirts, socks, bed linen, handkerchiefs, to be sent to the Canadian headquarters of the Guild, Montreal.

CANADIANS RECOGNIZED

Change in British Attitude Noticed—Tribute to Hero Colonel

Speaking of his own Canadians, General Currie said that British opinion had greatly changed since they first came out. Then they were of course regarded as raw troops. Now they have proved their worth and he repeated with pride some of the many and generous expressions of appreciation that had been so often made by British officers holding high commands.

In speaking of his own personal experiences, General Currie said with deep feeling that the loss of few officers had affected him so much as that of Lt.-Col. Victor Buchanan did, whose valor, cheerfulness under trying conditions and military worth he paid a fine tribute. In his utter disregard of danger, his refusal to be depressed by discomfort, or adverse circumstances and his constant devotion to his duty, Col. Buchanan's presence was an inspiration to all who came in contact with him.

Honey in Tea During War

A Manchester firm of caterers, with branches in several parts of the city, unable to get sugar during the war, is inviting its customers to sweeten their tea with honey, small pots of which have taken the place of the sugar bowl on the tables.

If a regiment of 1,000 men, with equipment of 60,000 pounds, marches ten miles, it does as much work as laborers raising a weight of 260,000 tons a distance of one foot.

"It is with great pleasure that I write to tell you of the wonderful benefits I have received from taking "Fruit-a-tives". For years, I was a dreadful sufferer from Constipation and Headaches, and I was miserable in every way. Nothing in the way of medicines seemed to help me. Then I finally tried "Fruit-a-tives" and the effect was splendid. After taking one box, I feel like a new person, to have relief from those sickening Headaches".

Proud Canadian Record

An English correspondent writes: I have heard of a record that will take some beating. It concerns Lance-Corporal B. Arnold, who is fifty-four years of age, and who has brought five sons and a son-in-law with him from Edmonton, Alberta. One son is a lance-corporal and another a company sergeant-major. All except the old boy have gone to the front, and three have been wounded.

Recruiting the Indians

Recruiting was carried on by the 256th Railway Construction Battalion at the various Indian reserves. Lieut. Lott, an Indian officer, who was also an Indian chief of the Six Nations tribes, having been appointed for this campaign. He spoke all the languages of the Six Nations.

Dangers of Munitioning

It was suggested at an inquest in England on a young woman who had died from T.N.T. poisoning that in future employes should be examined once a fortnight, and the jury added a rider to this effect. Trinitrotoluol is a chemical for high explosive shells.

FARM MANAGEMENT

Good Judgment Necessary to Get Good Crops and Fair Return

No business needs better management all around than farming. So many chances for failure are present that it is the [illegible] farm that is strong in every particular. Most farms succeed in spite of certain weaknesses. Some of these weaknesses can be corrected; others are due to conditions that can not be improved, such as naturally poor soil, short growing seasons, steep hills, etc.

Much worthy effort is expended in producing good crops, but oftentimes a gain in the best of crops is lost by feeding to inefficient live stock. There is no surer way of losing money than by feeding crops to animals the products of gain from which do not pay the cost of feeding.

Some men attribute their successes to the particular kind of crop they grow or the particular way of feeding live stock. More likely their success is due to a good sized farm business, good or average crops, and a good quality of live stock.

On fourteen selected farms where the receipts per cow were less than $40, not a farm made as much as $1,000 labor income. On twenty-four farms in the same district, with only a slightly larger acreage but with the receipts per cow between $101 and $115, only three farms made a labor income of less than $1,000. Half these farms made more than $1,500. The first group of farmers were growing fair crops, but they could not possibly succeed when the other part of their business was so weak. The second group not only produced good crops, but they utilized them efficiently.

Another way in which some farmers fail is in the use of labor, both man and horse. Everything they do seems to take about twice as long as it should, hence they receive only half pay for their work. Farming does not pay for inefficient work any more than any other business. An acre of hay normally requires about ten hours of man labor for each cutting. Some men will waste nearly this much time in just getting started. They may grow good crops and have good stock, but their inability to work lessens their chances of success.

Successful farming calls for hte best of judgment. It means good crops, good live stock well fed and handled, and a thoroughly balanced business in every way.

Canadian Wool

Canadian Sheep Breeders are strong for co-operation in marketing their product, believing that this will put the Canadian wool industry on a proper basis.

Housewives are advised to can vegetables as a means of economy.

MAKING A WILL

Making a will is a simple thing to do but, like most simple things, it should be done properly to safeguard the important matters of the future. In Toronto the danger of using a printed form in making a will was illustrated in a case in which Mr. Justice Middleton declared an intestacy. He had been asked to interpret what purported to be the will of a deceased lady. The will was made on what apparently was an adaptation of a Scotch will form. "In the case in hand it may be that the testatrix intended to give everything to her mother," remarked Mr. Justice Middleton, "but she has not said so."

In the blank where the name of the beneficiary and the property to be conveyed should be placed, all that was written was "Everything I have, clothes, money, etc." No beneficiary was named. The only name which appeared in the will, besides the signature of the testatrix, was the deceased woman's mother, who was named as executrix. Judge Middleton held that there was an intestacy as to the estate.

THE "MOVIE" BUSINESS

How the Financial End is Managed—Big Sums Change Hands

The cost of produting, a moving picture feature may be anything from $10,000 to $50,000. The picture is sold to the Exchange men, for various sums ranging from $5,000 per print and upwards to 10c or 15c per foot. Of course, these prices are realised several times over. For instance, the rights are sold to one man in one State of the American Union and to another in another; to one man in the East of Canada, and to another in the West.

Then the "movie" houses buy from the exchanges. The house which buys the first run in a big city like Toronto has to pay a big price, as much as $100 a day for a production of unusual interest. After a first run, a second run in a big city is generally considered a good purchase, as the first run has added greatly to the advertising of the feature. A second run of a picture for which $100 a day has been paid for the first run would fetch $150 for three days, a third run $75, or perhaps less, for three days. Then the production falls to the smaller houses at $10 to $15 a day in the city. Out-of-town runs are usually paid according to the capacity of the house, or they are sometimes played on a percentage basis.

Separating Tumblers

If two glass dishes or tumblers stick together very tightly, try filling the inner one with cold water and holding the outer one in warm water. They will separate at once.

Dip Gas Mantles in Vinegar

If new gas mantles be dipped into vinegar and hung up to dry before being placed upon the gas fixtures they will give a more brilliant light and last longer.

BARBERS' LICENSE BILL WITHDRAWN BY SPONSOR

Allan Studholme Told by Premier Hearst Same Provisions Can be Put in Health Act.

TORONTO, March 22—In moving the second reading of his bill respecting barbers, which, among other things, provided for a board of examiners to issue licenses to suitable persons, Mr. Studholme said if there was any place which should be clean from the standpoint of sanitary arrangements it was a barber shop.

Premier Hearst said he understood the object of Mr. Studholme in bringing the bill forward was chiefly for educational reasons at present. He hardly thought the House would go as far as Mr. Studholme wanted them to go at present. Nor was the sentiment of the country in favor of the measure. He thought amendments could be made to the public health act that would insure clean and sanitary barber shops.

Mr. Studholme made an earnest appeal for action, after which the bill was withdrawn.

Benefit to Farmers

Hon. I. B. Lucas, Attorney-General, introduced a bill respecting loans for agricultural purposes. He explained that the object was to provide for permanent improvements to farm properties, the loans to be made through the municipalities by the Provincial Treasurer, following out very much the system of the tile drainage debentures. The rate of interest would be fixed by the Lieutenant-Governor in Council. The bill does not specifically set ou the improvements. They are generally described as permanent improvements to be fixed by regulations.

Asked if it would cover the purchase of live stock, Hon. Mr. Lucas replied: "Yes, that may be so, but the act does not contemplate the advance of money for temporary purposes." It was also stated the act would be of general application throughout the province.

PRESENTATIONS TO POPULAR YOUNG COUPLE

(Special Correspondence.)

A number of members of Fraserville Methodist Sunday school, the League and the choir gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Lewers on Monday evening, March 12th, to congratulate and bid adieu to Miss Edythe Lewers and Mr. Harry Deyell on the eve of their approaching marriage.

The following address was read by Mrs. W. A. Kidd and a kitchen shower was presented by the choir and League in which the young couple have been valued workers.

Dear Edythe and Harry:

It is with deep regret that we learn of your removal from our midst, and we feel we cannot let let you go without showing in some way our appreciation of your labors in the choir and League.

We have found you ever ready to assist in any worthy cause, and as we look back over the years you have been in our midst we have pleasant recollections of your association with us as workers in the Master's service.

As a slight token of our appreciation of your work and of our esteem, will you accept these tokens from the Fraserville choir and League.

As you sever your connections with us, be assured that you carry with you our best wishes for the prosperity, health and happiness of you both, and in making new friends in your new sphere of life we trust you will not forget the old, and, although you are leaving our immediate neighborhood, we are glad that we shall occasionally meet you from time to time. We pray that God may ever prosper you through the years to come.

Signed on behalf of the choir and League,

Mrs. W. A. Kidd,
Mrs. (Rev.) Wickett.
Fraserville, March 12, 1917.

Later in the evening they were again called forward and Mrs. Jas. White read the address given below and Willard Waterman presented a handsome leather upholstered rocker from the members of the Sabbath school.

Dear Edythe and Harry:

We, the members of Fraserville Methodist Sunday school, have learned with regret and yet with joy of your intended removal from our school, but we are comforted with the fact that our loss will be the gain of another community and church.

It is, however, with mingled feelings that we assemble at the home of your parents to not only bid adieu but to express to you our very best wishes for your future happiness and prosperity, and to express to you, though in a small degree, our appreciation of your faithful efforts in every department of the church's activity, and especially in our Sunday school.

Therefore we ask you to accept this chair as a slight memento of your faithful labors and your willingness to assist in every good word and work which had for its aim the betterment of the community along the lines of intellectual, moral and spiritual development. And with this token of love and appreciation, as a school we offer a prayer that the blessing of God, which maketh rich and addeth no sorrow thereto, may be showered upon you in your new home, which is indeed the foundation of the church and the state.

May you each be a tower of strength for righteousness and your home life a centre of religious influence and activity, that at last when your work is done and you rest from your labors, your works may follow you. That it may be said of you, "They builded greater than they knew."

Signed on behalf of the school,

James White, Asst. Supt.,
W. Waterman, Asst. Sec'y.

Although very much taken by surprise, both made very suitable replies. The evening was spent in music and games. Refreshments were served, and after singing "God be with you till we meet again" the gathering dispersed with all good wishes for the future happiness of the young couple.

Hot Water the Best Liver and Bowel Medicine

Says Glass of Hot Water Before Breakfast Washes Poisons from System

Physicians the world over recommend the inside bath, claiming this is of vastly more importance than outside cleanliness, because the skin pores do not absorb impurites while the pores in the ten yards of bowels do.

Men and women are urged to drink each morning, before breakfast, a glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, as a harmless means of helping to wash from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels the previous day's indigestible material, poisons, sour bile and toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

Just as soap and hot water cleanse and freshens the skin, so hot water and limestone phosphate act on the eliminative organs.

Those who wake up with bad breath, coated tongue, nasty taste or have a dull, aching head, sallow complexion, acid stomach; others who are subject to billious attacks or constipation, should obtain a quarter pound of limestone phosphate at the drug store. This will cost very little but is sufficient to demonstrate the value of inside bathing. Those who continue it each morning are assured of pronounced results, both in regard to health and appearance.

BILL OF $10 FOR VISIT TO CITY

James Farrell, a munitions worker from Toronto, took a joy ride with a chum to the city yesterday. They came by Port Hope on the G. T. R. and were apparently well supplied with wet goods that were stronger than 2 per cent. Farrell forgot whether his chum got off at Peterborough or not and did not seem to care.

P.C. Blade found him in a very intoxicated condition and took him to the police station to rest up.

Magistrate Dumble made his bill out this morning. It was $10.

TOO MANY DOGS IN OWEN SOUND

OWEN SOUND, March 22—Something is going to happen to many of the dogs in Owen Sound if the town council has its way. The matter was thoroughly gone into and it looks as if the dog population of Owen Sound was going to dwindle within the next few months. A higher tax and a live collector were proposed and more stringent measures re dogs running at large will likely be adopted at a future meeting of the council.

(Special Correspondence.)

MILLBROOK, March 22.—

An enjoyable evening was spent at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred W. The address, printed on satin and framed, was read by Mr. Wm. Earle, and the committee presented the gifts. Mr. Brown, on behalf of himself and family, replied in a few well-chosen words, thanking the donors for their beautiful gifts and kind words as contained in the address. He welcomed all to their home and hoped that all who can will find their way to their new home at Kemptville. A program was then rendered by the following: Mrs. W. Gray, Perrytown, elocutionist; Miss E. Elson, soloist; trio by Mr. and Miss Dawson and Miss Emberson; selections by Millbrook S.S. orchestra, addresses by Reve Henderson, Rev. Grace Church Notes. — Sunday, 10.30 a.m., The Helmet of Hope; 7 p.m., Peter's Great Question; Sunday School and Bible Classes, 2.30; Prayer meeting Thursday, at 8 p.m. ~~St. Enoch's Church service 2.30 p.m.~~ subject. Facing the Cross with a Song.

How is it that troubles seem to be continually associated with Ireland and affairs pertaining thereto? The answer is not easy to give, but the fact remains, nevertheless, for the entertainment last Friday night in the Town Hall was beset with difficulties of various kinds. Sorrow had stricken our community, a farewell presentation to one worthy the honor was being given, and two of the artists failed at the last moment to appear. Dr. Lee presided, and judging from his efforts, he probably would find preaching an easier task, but in one way and another almost two hours of fun and entertainment were given the audience, which was very large considering the circumstances. Mr. and Mrs. Johnston, Miss Walker and Mr. F. G. Clarke acquitted themselves well. The breaches in the program they filled and held with versatility. A pleasing feature of the evening was the presentation to Mr. and Mrs. Johnston of a copy of the Book of Family Worship, with their names on the cover, from a few friends in Grace Church, as a mark of affection and esteem. The recipients were much pleased and made suitable acknowledgment. The singing of the National Anthem brought the meeting to a close.

The annual meeting of St. Thomas' Branch of the Woman's Auxiliary was held on Monday evening at the home of Mrs. Westmacott, eighteen members being present. The officers gave encouraging reports, stating that in spite of the increasing seriousness of the war, work had gone on in this branch much the same as usual. The president urged the members to greater earnestness in prayer for our missionaries as well as our soldiers and sailors. The following officers were elected for the coming year:—

President—Mrs. Allen.
1st Vice-Pres.—Mrs. Spencer.
2nd Vice-Pres.— Miss A. Armstrong.
Treasurer—Mrs. Needler.
Secretary—Mis Macnamara.
Supt. of Girls—Mrs. Westmacott.
Dorcas Sec.—Miss Kells.

Miss White was asked to allow her name to go on the dorcas committee. Delegates to the annual meeting in Toronto were appointed. The serving of refreshments brought the meeting to a close. The April meeting is to be at the home of Mrs George Campbell.

The death of Mr. J. C. Kells which took place on Thursday, March 15, is a serious loss, in the first place to his family, where he was a devoted husband and father, and he heartfel sympahy of the entire community goes out to the wife and daughters in their bereavement; and secondly, to the church and community to which he belonged. His was an attractive and influential personality, large-hearted and brotherly and he had the interests of the village at heart. As a churchman and member of St. Thomas congregation he was an example, seldom absent from his place. The funeral to St. John's emetery on Saturday was largely attended. Canon Allen conducted services at the house, church and grave.

Dr. Lee went to Port Hope on Wednesday to conduct the interment service of the late Mrs. R. Hamill at the Union Cemetery.

Dr. and Mrs. King of Peterboro were guests of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Allen, on Wednesday.

Mrs. Vincent Wetherup of Lindsay is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Johnston.

The joint meeting of the Sunday School workers of our own and neighboring schools held on Monday night, was a great success. The reports given by Miss Burnham and Miss Hatherly were excellent and illustrated in such a way as to make a lasting impression of the truths taught and methods of work recommended. Next Monday evening the missionary department of the league is holding a social evening. A short program will be given and afterwards a social time spent together.

If you are suffering from dyspepsia, indigestion or sour stomach you should try a mixture of Salon Pepsin and Iridin.

This is said to be the formula of Dr. Banta's famous prescription which gave him a world-wide reputation.

HORSE MARKET.

TORONTO, March 21.—The horse trade at the Union Yards was rather unsettled last week on account of the sale of pure-bred Clydesdales and Percherons on Wednesday, but all the horses marketed found a fairly ready sale at steady prices. The Western demand was well sustained and promises to continue so until the end of this month. The early week trade was interfered with by the refusal of railroads to take shipments of any livestock. But with the passing of the railway crisis in the United States the local situation was relieved, and, although shipments to Toronto for Tuesday and Wednesday are light, there is a bright outlook for next week's trade.

Chalk Chase.

Corner or chalk chase is a short after school game and is played much like hare and hounds. There is a hare, fox or wolf, or perhaps two. A boundary of about six city blocks is chosen and well defined. There should be no misunderstanding with regard to boundaries. To the hare or hares is furnished a lot of chalk, preferably in lump; he starts at a signal, goes where he pleases and at another signal from whistle or horn or at the end of one minute begins chalking easily visible marks wherever he bends at a considerable angle from a nearly straight course. He puts a mark on every corner that he turns; if he goes over a fence he chalks the side; if through an old building or an open cellar he does the same at each bend and turn. As many boys may join the chase as can get together, and it means a good, hard job to catch the hares.

CAMELS OF THE DESERT.

Their Peculiar Adaptability to Life In the Sandy Wastes.

The camel thrives only in desert regions. And herein lies its usefulness to man, for by its means alone is he enabled to cross barren tracts otherwise impassable. This ability to live without water and with little food for long periods is due to two natural reservoirs. Water is stored in special pockets in the lining of the stomach, while a large mass of fat is stored on the back, forming the characteristic hump, though, according to popular belief, it is here that the water is held.

Though it will manage to subsist for long periods on the thorny scrub such as forms the only vegetation of desert areas and with very little water, its complacency in these matters may be overtaxed, as was disastrously shown during the first expedition to Khartum.

Two other factors in the adaptability of the camel to a desert life have to be taken into account. These are the feet and nostrils. The first named have but two toes, protected by very thick, horny pads to resist the burning sand, while the nostrils are long and slitlike and can be closed at will, thereby enabling the animal to survive the awful sandstorms which so frequently endanger the lives of travelers in these inhospitable regions.

Self Possession.

A man who does not possess himself enough to bear disagreeable things without visible marks of anger and change of countenance or agreeable ones without sudden bursts of joy and expansion of countenance is at the mercy of every artful knave or pert coxcomb. The former will provoke or please you by design, to catch unguarded words or looks, by which he will easily decipher the secrets of your heart, of which you should keep the key yourself and trust it with no man living. The latter will by this absurdity and without intending it produce the same discoveries of which other people will avail themselves.—Lord Chesterfield.

KELLY SHEDS UNIFORM HE WAS GREAT TRAINER

Irishman Never Did Shine at Developing Pitchers

JOE KELLEY

The passing of Joe Kelley from the managership of the Toronto baseball team of the International League is a sign of the way things will be going in the bigger minor leagues of organised baseball so long as the Federals keep up their tricks. His employers have decided to curtail expenses and Kelley was reputed to draw more than many a big league player. The clubs of the International circuit are faced with having to raise a big war fund for the weak sisters. Federal ball has cut sadly into Buffalo and has driven Jack Dunn's Baltimores to an untried city, Richmond, Va. But what is much worse, the International and the other big minors used to bank heavily on sales of developed players to the old majors. With the Feds in action this revenue is gone, and the minor league magnates all over America will have to keep down expenses.

Kelley is not the least famous member of the old Baltimore Orioles who in 1895-6-7 fought and schemed their way to the National league championship. He was then with John McGraw, Wilbert Robinson, Hugh Jennings and Willie Keeler. They made an old-style outfit, with plenty of tricks and gameness as well as ability, none of the college boy style about them. In those days Kelley was a good all-round ball player, not a specialist, lost out of his one position in the field. He was one of the most finished and graceful centre fielders. He never balked at infield work and as late as 1907 went into the box and showed his pitchers up. Always he was a hard hitter and as a manager developed sluggers and fighters. He always liked men who would never take any back-talk from manager, umpire or bleacherite.

Naturally Kelley did not shine at developing pitchers. Dick Rudolph came to him in 1907 and helped Toronto win the flag in the old Eastern now the International circuit. Rudolph made good in the Eastern at 17 but it was six years before he went with the Boston Braves and gained world's series' fame. An exception was Jeff Tesreau whom Kelley seasoned so well for McGraw. Among the hitters who went to the majors from Kelley were Bill Carrigan of the Boston Red Sox and the "Bullet"

Kelley really cared more for winning pennants than developing stars. He knew a ball player when he saw one and many friends used to send the youngsters to him for training under his Irish tongue and his keen eye, but he seldom went out into the bushes to look for the phenoms. It it not hard to see that he has more than an even chance of making good in his position, if he wants to stick at it. But he will miss the fun of walking from the first base coaching box to the water pail just for a chance to exercise his sarcastic wit on an umpire or to tip an extra signal to his batsman.

ORIGIN OF "BUNT"

An Irish Player First Used Word in Fit of Anger

Here is an interesting story of the origin of the word "bunt" as used in base-ball. It was told by one Kinnally, who played with one of the famous old teams around Boston long before most of the present day fans were born.

"We had a big, wild lad named Dorgan catching for Taunton," relates Kinnally, "one of these brawny Irish from the mills who would get out on the slag heap and rest all during the noon hour by boxing all comers with bare knuckles.

"We were playing the Commons, champions of Boston, and one little fellow on the Commons' team poked the ball down ten feet toward third and beat it to first. Dorgan was crazy mad. 'Tis no hit,' he said to STRENUOUS PLAYER IS "BAD JOE" HALL OF N.H.A.

Is Graduate of Hard School and Rough Checker

"You might as well hang a dog as give it a bad name," is the old saw which some newspapers and some alleged students of hockey are trying always to apply to Joe Hall, the famous defence player of the Quebec N.H.A. team. Joe Hall is the proud possessor of the unique title "The Bad Man of Hockey." But he has gone along for years with the name. He is still playing a strenuous effective article of the game and drawing his money regularly.

Each December the fans begin to ask where that man Hall is and whether he is going to turn up for the season again. Meanwhile Joe takes a last look at his farm near Brandon, Man. Time was when about the first intimation opposing players would get of his presence in the east was when they ran into his bony form on the ice. For several seasons he did not break into the game until after New Year's. But he never could stay away from the fun, and in the past four seasons with Quebec has played the best hockey of his career and has had many pleasant evenings with Newsy Lalonde and whoever else might happen along.

Senior hockey is likely to have Hall for some years yet. He may have been playing ten years but he is not thirty and he has a reputation for taking care of himself all year 'round.

Joe began ten years ago when he was a youth, playing rover for the Brandon Hockey Club of the Manitoba League. He was an amateur then. Nine years ago he went to the Winnipegs and was on their team for two years while they struggled to down the Rat Portage team, holders of the Stanley Cup. After that Hall had some experience in the old International League, where with Pitre and Laviolette, now of the Canadiens and the famous Hod Stuart, he played in the fierce contests which hockey always produced in the copper country.

Out of this hard school Joe Hall came to Quebec. Here he realised his ambition to be on a team that could win the Stanley Cup. Quebec came out on top twice, in 1911 and again in 1912. Joe was recognized as one of the most effective players in hockey. Strenuous is the word which characterised his work. He checked the men and kept them from getting goals, which is one of the grievances against him. When he rushed he went for all that was in him and his shot was wicked. He did everything too hard the critics said.

But what really got him his reputation was his ability to "call" a player who squealed when hurt and to pay his respects to referees. He came to feel that the referees were heeding the clamor of critics and were paying him more than one-twelfth of their attention. This did not make him more gentle or polite and most people have forgotten all about Hall's great ability and his gameness.

The Quebec fans have stood by the husky defence man. They know that when Quebec needs a goal or two badly and chances are slim it is likely to be Hall who makes the spurt that puts the team back in the running. They also admire his frankness when he says, "I do not pretend to be an angel. I get them hard, but there are others who do worse and why should I be the goat?"

The famous Hall-Lalonde duel of the 1913-14 season did not disgust the Ancient City. The fans knew that Joe would never quit or squeal about getting hurt. When the contestants, the league officials and the public had [illegible] tired Quebec expected Joe to go right back to good hard hockey playing, which is exactly what he did.

This year Joseph Hall, Esq., of Brandon, Man., and Quebec is as unique as ever. His reputation with the public as a bad man grows with age. On the ice his ability is as much respected. The officials still send him to the penalty box to the tune of his protestations that he got hit first by some measly little shrimp of a forward. On the street Hall's friends—and they include Newsy Lalonde—are many, for "bad man" is a name that does not count with the hockey people.

Frank Chance's "Don'ts"

"To any boy who wants to become a better ball player, I want to say DON'T:—

"Get the swelled head.

"Quit trying until the last man is out.

"Bat cross handed.

"Slide head first.

"Forget that baseball, like everything else that is worth doing at all is worth doing well."

WHEN GENEROSITY MOVES

Returned Soldier, Newsboy and Invalid Boys Gave to Patriotic Fund

Montreal had an interesting celebration of a Patriotic Fund campaign. Among the workers gathered for the final returns were Canadians of all Creeds, Englishmen, Irishmen, Scotsmen, French-Canadians, Belgians, men from France, Syrians, and Americans. Subscriptions came from all the four corners of the earth. Several were cabled from the United Kingdom, the United States, and one from Hong Kong. Four hundred Chinamen of Montreal sent in $228. A returned wounded private of the 22nd Battalion (French-Canadian), sent $3, with a letter, saying that he sent the money because the Patriotic Fund had looked after his wife and children so well while he was at the front.

Montreal's newest municipality Laval de Montreal, sent in a contribution representing $5 per head of the population, including men, women and children. One newsboy sent in a subscription, saying that as his business was just 35 per cent. more than it was last year, he was making his gift to the soldiers just 35 per cent. more than the one he sent the year previously. One poor fellow, nine years of age, an infantile paralysis victim, sent $5, saying that it was what had been given to him by friends out of their sympathy for him. He wanted to pass it on to "the Tommies."

Sank Canada's Dinousaurs

Two skeletons of the duckbilled dinosaur were lost to science with the sinking by a German raider of the ship Mount Temple, according to Charles H. Sternburg of Lawrence, Kansas, who found the bones in the Red Deer country in Alberta. The prehistoric specimens were thirty-two feet long, and were being sent to the British Museum in London, Mr. Sternburg said. They filled twenty-two boxes and weighed 30,000 pounds.

PREMIER HEARST'S WORK IS APPROVED BY LABOR

Organized Workingmen Will Send Appreciation for What he Has Done for Them in Recent Legislation.

"The Hearst Government is the most progressive government; it has done more for the workingmen than any government this country has ever had," said Delegate Sharpe at the meeting of the Trades and Labor Council last night. A communication will be sent to Premier Hearst thanking him on behalf of organized labor in this city for the recent amendments to the Workmen's Compensation Act.

Ex-Ald. Crowe, one of the delegates, brought the matter up when he stated that the Legislature had given the workingmen even more than they had asked for and without any expense to them. The labor men of this city had joined in a request that the injured workmen receive two-thirds instead of 55 per cent. of his salary while laid up. This had not been granted, but the men were given more than its equivalent in the amendment which provides for free medical attendance for thirty days of disability.

It is likely that a prominent labor man will be brought from Toronto to explain the Workmen's Compensation Act in detail and to discuss the formation of an independent labor party. If this is done the members of the Board of Trade and the new Civic Association will be asked to attend the meeting.

Ex-Ald. Crowe championed the cause of the returned soldiers and insisted that they be given the preference in filling vacancies in the civic service. Mr. Crowe objected vigorously to the recent appointment of the sanitary inspector over an applicant possessed of professional training and with a military record. These objections were embodied in a resolution which expressed approval of the stand taken by Mayor Duffus and the aldermen who stood out with him for the appointment of Dr. Deyell.

The Council will make a grant to the Peterborough Health Association.

HAVELOCK MEN AS O.L.A. HEAD

TORONTO, March 22—Although the nominations for the Ontario Amateur Lacrosse Association do not close until a week from Friday, already one nomination has been received, that being Percy Lancaster, of Havelock, for president.

The O.A.L.A. despite the war, had a fairly good season last year. The association lost many members through enlisting, as the great lacrosse tourney at Camp Borden last summer, demonstrated.

Some men are born great and others roll up their trousers and wade right into greatness.

DAVE EASON LOST THE MUG TO G. H. LOGIE

The final game for the possession of the coveted Mercantile Cup was curled at the rink last night and Skip Eason, who has held it for three weeks, fell before the great generalship of Skip G. H. Logie. Andy Webb, who was on the victorious rink, played a great game and holds a unique record in that he has been on the last holding rink for two successive seasons. Skip Logie played a splendid game on the heavy ice and had warm support from his vice-skip, Dick Davidson, and Lead Dearle.

The rinks and scores:—

DEYELL—LEWERS.

A quiet but pretty wedding was solemnized on Wednesday, March 14, at "Cedar Springs," Cavan, the home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Lewers, when their only daughter, Edythe Elizabeth, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to John Henry Deyell of Emily.

The ceremony, which was witnessed by only the immediate friends of the bride and groom, was performed at 2:30 o'clock, Rev. W. T. Wickett of Fraserville officiating.

The bridal couple, who were unattended, stood beneath a large white bridal bell suspended from an arch of evergreens dotted with white roses and a background of foliage and daffodils.

The bride entered the room on the arm of her father to the strains of Wagner's Bridal Chorus Wedding March, played by Miss Mamie Fisher of Millbrook, and was very becomingly attired in a gown of dainty white silk and ninon with trimming of silver lace hand embroidery and clusters of tiny rose buds of ninon, her only ornament being a diamond pendant set with pearls, the gift of the groom. She carried a large sheaf of white carnations and fern.

The groom's gift to the organist was a sapphire and pearl set brooch.

While congratulations were being extended, Mendelssohn's Wedding March was played, after which the bridal party retired to the dining-room, which was prettily decorated for the occasion with dark pink carnations and smilax, and where a hearty wedding dinner was partaken of by all present. Rev. W. T. Wickett proposed a toast to the bride and groom, to which the groom ably replied.

Costly and numerous were the presents received, showing the esteem in which the young couple are held by their many friends. Among the gifts was a handsome leather upholstered rocker from the Fraserville Methodist Sunday school, also a kitchen shower from the Epworth League and choir, where both the bride and groom have been valued workers.

After a pleasant evening had been spent, the happy couple left, amid showers of good wishes, by train from Millbrook for "Hillcrest Farm," their future home in Emily, the bride wearing a navy blue tailored suit of serge and a blouse of radium silk lace with touches of old rose. Her hat was of taupe straw braid trimmed with handsome wreath and under brim faced with old rose

The Diet of Guatemala.

Corn or maize, as it is called there, and frijoles—beans—form almost exclusively the daily food of nearly three-fourths of the people of Guatemala. Corn is grown in each of the three zones—the warm, the temperate, and the frigid—into which the republic may be divided. It is estimated that fully four-fifths of the Indian population raise more or less corn every year. In some districts two crops are grown annually. With an average annual per capita consumption of 130 pounds, beans rank next to corn as the favorite food of the people of Guatemala. Beans grow luxuriantly in practically every region of the republic. Guatemala practically consumes its entire production of beans.

LIVE TO CELEBRATE GOLDEN WEDDING WITHOUT BREAK IN THE FAMILY CIRCLE

Mr. and Mrs. John Donaldson of Omemee celebrated their golden wedding last evening at the residence of their daughter, Mrs. S. J. Dickson, of Smith. The rooms of the residence were beautifully decorated with Union Jacks and red white and blue and every member of the family joined in making the occasion a joyful one as it rightly deserved. It is not often that a couple are blessed in celebrating their golden wedding anniversary, at which every child born of the union was present.

During the evening an address was read to Mr. and Mrs. Donaldson by Miss Lillian Donaldson and a purse of gold was presented by Mr. Joseph Donaldson on behalf of the family. Little Miss Muriel Farley of Toronto, the three-year-old granddaughter, presented them with a sheaf of daffodils which they much appreciated. Mr. Donaldson, the groom of 50 years ago, replied very suitably.

About fifty guests sat down to dinner, the table being decorated with gold favors, after which a social evening was spent and all left for home expressing the best wishes for their old and respected parents.

The entire family of eight, which never had a bereavement, are Mrs. J. H. Savigny and Mr. Joseph Donaldson of Peterborough, Mrs. W. H. Steinkraus and Mr. S. J. Dickson of Smith, Mrs. W. T. Smith of South Monaghan, Mrs. F. E. Farley, Toronto, Misses Christene and Lillian Donaldson, Toronto.

SEVERE FIGHTING IN PROGRESS

FRENCH THREATEN TO OUTFLANK GERMAN MAIN POSITION AT ST. GOBAINE

Hindenburg Exerting Great Strength to Prevent Allies Closing in on St. Quentin and Le Fere But Without Success.

Every Indication of Severe Fighting Immediately.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, March 23—Reports from the front show the Germans are offering most strenuous resistance and enduring heavy losses in efforts to hold the main points on the Lille-Laon line. Their energies are particularly directed toward defending the approaches to Cambrai on the right flank and stopping the dangerour French advance to the left north of Soissons in the direction of Anizy. Here the French threaten the outflank of the German main position at St. Gobain. Von Hindenburg is also exerting his greatest strength to prevent the Allies closing in on St. Quentin and La Fere, but so far without success.

There is every indication of most severe fighting in the immediate future.

ST. ANDREW'S TAKES FINAL LEAVE OF MR. MITCHELL

Members and Adherents Gathered Last Night to Wish Their Former Pastor Godspeed.

The members and adherents of St. Andrew's Church spent a pleasant social hour in the school room last night to take a final farewell to Rev. T. H. Mitchell, who goes to Old St. Andrew's in Toronto. Rev. A. T. Walker of Owen Sound, who will conduct the services in the church Sunday, was among the audience

Brief addresses were made by Messrs. J. T. Allen on behalf of the session, G. Walter Greene who spoke to rthe board of management, A. McNabb, assistant superintendent of the Sunday School, Rev. R. Pogue of St Paul's Church, W. I. Chisholm and W. A. Richardson, the latter commending the work of the Ladies Aid, who have done so much for the church and who provided the refreshments that were served last night. A vote of thanks was tendered the members of this society on motion of G. Walter Green and F. E. Kerr.

All the speeches were eulogistic of Mr. Mitchell as preacher, pastor and citizen. Mr. Pogue paid his departing brother many a graceful compliment while speaking of the influence Mr. Mitchell has exercised in the life of the church and the city during his year's residence in Peterborough. The musical program consisted of a selection by the choir and a duet by Miss Helen McLaren and Mr. H. C. Treneer.

Mr. A. Macfarlane, who presided did not forget the absent pastor, Capt. Rollins, who is now in France in the service of his country, risking his life for his congregation and others of his countrymen. It is to Mr. Rollins that the thanks of the congregation are due for finding such a man as Mr. Mitchell to take his place.

Mr. Mitchell made a brief address in which he alluded to the happy relations that have existed between himself and not only the members of his own congregation but the people generally and voiced the regret shared by himself and his sister, Miss Belle Mitchell, at leaving Peterborough.

The meeting was brought to a close with the singing of the National Anthem and the Benediction by Mr. Mitchell.

FRENCH THROWN BACK COUNTER-ATTACK AND DRIVE THE ENEMY

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, March 23. — (Official Statement.) — North of the Somme the enemy made a violent attack last night on our positions near the village of Artemps. Our troops were thrown back slightly at first, but immediately counter-attacked with vigor, driving the enemy as far as Seraucourt Le Grand. There was heavy artillery fighting between the Somme and the Oise.

South of the Oise further detachments crossed the Attle. There was intermittent cannonading in the hill region.

North of Soissons we made new progress.

It is now learned that an attack made by the enemy against the Vregny-Chivres front was extremely violent. Germans hurled an entire regiment at a single point. Two of our companies of Chasseurs, momentarily isolated, succeceded after violent fighting in disengaging themselves and returning lwth prisoners. Losses inflicted on the enemy in the course of these fruitless attacks were very heavy.

Several surprise attacks of the enemy northwest of Rheims, east of Maisons de Champagne, in Avercourt wood, and in the region of St. Mihiel were repulsed by oru fire. A German pursuit airplane and albatross were brought down yesterday in our lines in the region of Vezelise.

ONCE MORE THE CRY IS CHRISTMAS IN CANADA

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Canadian Headquarters in France, March 22.—By Stewart Lyon.)—The Germans, who have been returning a spasmodic fire to the increasing volume of our fire, suddenly opened with great vigor on Wednesday, showing that the retreat had not extended to that part of their lin. A raiding attack was thn made on th Canadians, who had successfully raided German lines the previous night. The Germans sustained heavy losses under a heavy fire with which our men received thm, and did not pnetrate our line anywhere. Prisoners taken recently proves their ignorance of any intention to retire. The great events transpiring south of Arras have made most people optimistic, and once more the cry is "Christmas in Canada."

$25,000 FIRE AT MARMORA WHEN SAW MILL BURNS

PEARCE CO.'S PROPERTY COMPLETELY DESTROYED BY FIRE.

The Peace Company's saw mill at Marmora was completely destroyed by fire yesterday morning. A gang of men had been busy all winter overhauling the mill and getting it ready for the season's cut. The work was just about completed and the mill was in better shape than for several years. The men were engaged in burning a hole through a big piece of timber, when the fire started. Ordinarily there would be no danger connected with the operation, but the timber was soaked with oil which ignited and the blaze spread with alarming rapidity.

An alarm was sounded but the fire made such headway there was no possibility of saving the mill. However, a couple of lines of hose were quickly attached to the village pump and by means of these the surrounding buildings were saved. The electric light plant had a narrow escape and in saving it the new system of fire protection went a long way towards paying for itself. The loss will probably exceed $25,000 with no insurance. Nearly $2,000 was spent on repairs this winter.

OPPOSITION TO A FREE MARKET

Committee Hears Arguments by Grocers and Recommends Walter Fisher for Market Clerk.

SIR ADAM BECK

Who has accepted an invitation to Peterborough to be present at a banquet and address a public meeting at a date to be arranged.

City Council Will Decide the Matter.

Walter Fisher will be the market clerk for the next year unless the Council at its meeting tonight decides on a free market.

The property committee last night heard deputations for and against a free market. Those present in the deputations were Messrs. B. D. Hall and N. Munroe for the Board of Trade, J. J. Hartley, J. A. Sharpe, W. Stevens, A. J. Bolwell, G. L. Myland, Dan Wires, Joseph Crowe, Fred Brown for the Trades and Labor Council, T. C. Elliott for the merchants and S. J. Matchett, O. S. Matchett, A. W. Raskins for the Grocers' Association.

T. C. Elliot stated that a joint meeting of the merchants and the Trades and Labor Council had been held and they had decided to request the committee to recommend

A free market so far as the collection of tolls or charges for produce was concerned.

Not to interfere with the restricted hours as concerns the buying on the market by wholesalers.

Place a caretaker in charge who will be in plain clothes and to stop the police from interfering with the farmers' wives and to have scales placed on the tables so that buyer and seller can satisfy themselves as to weight.

Bring More Farmers

J. J. Hartley was sure that a free market would bring more farmers to the city. He did not want the police to interfere with the farmers wives; there was no necessity for this kind of supervision. It would be an experiment and if it did not work out they could go back to the toll system. He would put such fees as were necessary on hucksters and pedlars and would let the market clerk run the market without the police and would compel everyone to go to the market.

Did Not Want a Free Market

S. J. Mitchell was opposed to the free market, principally on account of the loss in revenue to the city, which he figured amounted to $2,000. The city would lose $700 revenue, would have to pay a clerk $700 and assistants and supplies on market days would be $600. He thought that the Peterborough market was as good if not better than any other. The grocers did not want to buy there as prices were too high and he produced invoices for butter and eggs bought from Toronto firms at 5c less than Peterborough market prices. It was the grocer who brought down the prices and a free market would put them up against unfair competition from people who did not pay a cent of taxes in the city.

Keep Police Away

B. D. Hall stated that Mr. Mitchell had brought out a point which the free market would remedy. If a greater supply of produce was brought to Peterborough by the farmers it would not be necessary to import from Toronto. He strongly advocated keeping the police away from the market hall, particularly if they are in uniform. The market had gone back in the last few years and it would do no harm to try the free market.

Ald. Saunders did not think that the toll had anything to do with the small market.

Ald. Taylor: The farmers are producing less than ten years ago.

A STORY OF SANDY

Sandy McTavish was a highly skilled workman in a new aircraft factory.

Therefore it happened one day that Sandy was asked if he would care to accompany the works aviator on one of his trial flights on a machine.

Sandy, after some hesitation, agreed to do so.

During the flight the aviator asked Sandy how he was enjoying it.

"To tell the truth," answered the Scot, "I wad rather be on the grun."

"Tut, tut," replied the flying man. "I'm just thinking of looping the loop."

"For heaven's sake don't dae that!" yelled the now very nervous McTavish. "I've some siller in my vest porket, an' Ah micht lose it."

PETERBOROUGH, FRIDAY, MARCH 23, 1917

THE REAL MORAL FORCE.

SOME CRITICS of the photo play, "Intolerance," which has just closed a successful run in this city and which is attracting columns of comment and discussion in the newspapers wherever shown, object to one part of the lesson which the play sets out to teach. The exception taken is to the rather sarcastic picture of a few amateurs in the uplift movement, women who enter into the reformation of modern social conditions among the lower classes, not because of any special fitness for the work or of any intimate knowledge of human nature, but simply as a diversion from their own daily walk and conversation in the upper circles. The uplifters in the play regard the workingman drinking a glass of beer as a mortal slated for perdition. When they find a mother treating a cold, which she has contracted, with the old-fashioned remedy, "popular in private, though condemned in public," nothing more is needed to convince them of her utter depravity. Backed up by the law, which lends its ears to their representations, the uplifters take away the woman's child by force and consign it to the homelessness of an orphanage. Sensitive critics say that the uplifters have saved the world and point to the present temperance situation as their crowning achievement.

The play is true to life. The great reforms have been worked out in the world, not by hysterical agitators, but by the calm reason of other agencies. No temperance advocate, professional or amateur, has accomplished a fraction of the good that has been brought about by other forces at work without the flourishing of trumpets. The railroads of Canada have for years been the great agency in stamping out the drink evil. It was the railroads that first insisted upon abstinence on the part of their employes, recognizing the fact that safety means efficiency. They arrived at this conclusion by actual experience, and were not persuaded into adopting such a policy by the moral teachings of the uplifters. The insistence upon sobriety spread to employers in other lines, and the growth of the temperance sentiment may have been slow, but it was steady.

No organization, inside or outside the Church, can justly claim credit for the Ontario Temperance Act. Those not numbered among the members of such society really made that Act possible. If efficiency depends upon moderation, the rest was plain. In no time as in the days of a strenuous war, when every national and individual energy is taxed to the utmost, is efficiency so essential. Hence the Act which is working out so satisfactorily.

THE AMBITION OF THE BARBERS.

THE BARBERS in the Province, at least those who are organized in trade unions, united in an attempt to get a law touching their business put through the Legislature. The bill was placed in the hands of Allan Studholm, Labor's veteran representative in the Legislature. The measure provided ofr a license for all those who took up the business, and shut out any man whose moral character or mode of living is openly disreputable or who is afflicted with any disease which he is liable to transmit to the man upon whom he operates. Any victim of a contagious disease would find the door of the barber shop closed against him if the bill had ever reached the statute books.

The measure has been withdrawn, Mr. Studholme, after a valiant fight, being convinced that it would be useless to press it. The attempt, however, has not been altogether so much wasted energy. It has served to show a commendable disposition on the part of the barbers to elevate their trade in the community, to preserve it from the reprach which incompetent workmen bring upon any line of industry, and at the same time protect the public health. Lawyers cast out the shyster, doctors the quack, and in every line of human effort a proper pride in the work develops a spirit of self-preservation.

At the Trades Council the other night Delegate Gainey took exception to a recent editorial in The Review discussing the proposed legislation on behalf of the barbers. There was in that article no intent to question the wisdm of the measure. The object was to show the tendency in all modern legislation—a danger to be avoided—of making offences of acts in which there was no intention to transgress, and of punishing those who, though technically guilty, were really innocent. The trend of modern uplift, so called, is to delegate to the magistrates and judges autocratic authority over the life, liberty and pursuits of the rest of mankind, whether those pursuits have to do with pleasure or ordinary business.

THE RECORD OF THE LEGISLATURE.

IT IS LITTLE WONDER that the organized labor men of Peterborough and other places in Ontario are joining in resolutions commending the Hearst Government for their efforts on behalf of the wage-earners of the Province. During all the years that the Liberals were in power at Toronto, Labor went empty-handed. Every request for concessions was ingnored, although at every election promises were not lacking.

The Workmen's Compensation Act should make the party that passed it popular with those in whose interest it was designed. After a trial of three years it has been amended and its terms made more generous than ever, both as applied to the workman who is injured and to his dependents in the event of his death while on duty and as a result of an industrial accident.

The workingmen asked for an increase in the amount allowed them in case of injury. This request was not granted, but they got more than the equivalent in the form of free medical attendance during thirty days of their disability. There are no technicalities to defeat his claim for compensation. The plea with regard to contributory negligence no longer figures in such matters. Every case is decided upon facts and upon its merits alone. The speculating lawyers are left out of it.

The workingmen of Ontario can pursue their daily task with the assurance that if they are temporarily incapacitated their children and themselves will not suffer and that their dependents will not be left destitute if their natural protectors lose their lives by accident. For all of this the present Administration is entitled to the credit, and the beneficiaries are not slow to recognize the fact.

SOME POLITICAL FADS.

ONE VARIETY of mankind with a political fad takes the ground that when the war is over all members of the Britsh Empire should enter into a cast iron compact binding themselves to extend preference to each other in the matter of natural products and manufactured goods to the exclusion of all other countries in the world, Germany especially. Is it not possible that the present is inopportune for the exploitation of such themes and that all such discussions have a tendency to work mischief by creating bad feeling among the Entente Nations?

The movement is not without its opponents in England. These contend, with every show of reason, that no effective preference can be given the chief products of Canada or Australia without discriminating against the products of Russia, for instance, and that this would serve to force Russia to trade more and more with Germany. If a satisfactory scheme of preference was difficult to work out before the war, it will be doubly difficult when the conflict is over and so many nations have peculiar claims upon the consideration of each other.

Russia can hardly be expected to prosecute the war with enthusiasm if assured that a victory for the Allies will result in a trade agreement in which she will be given little more consideration than is extended to the Central Powers.

THE IPMOSSIBLE.

A TORONTO PAPER, with a weakness for philosophizing, says: "Home Rule can stand till peace is declared. Then let it come without violating the convictions of any Irishman, if that be possible."

But it isn't possible. If all reforms were delayed until there was a unanimous demand for them the world would grow old while waiting for universal action.

The Ontario Temperance Act would never have been given effect if its passage had been delayed until it did violence to the convictions—or the prejudice—of no man in the province. The minority, however, had to give way to superior force. Still, the measure of war-time prohibition appears to be working out fairly satisfactory.

Equal suffrage had its opponents, and still it is to become a law. Some men threaten to bolt their party on account of the latest great social reform. Others in public life, who fought the principle a short time ago, have fallen into line and accepted the inevitable. Everything under the sun works out on the same plan. The will of the majority prevails.

Why make an exception of one reform? No other reason can be urged ercept something that has to do with the integrity of political fences.

AGAIN, AS OTHERS SEE US.

LEAVE IT TO the Liberal agitators and the Borden Government has made a dismal failure in the conduct of the war. Disinterested outsiders take a different view or the situation. For example, the New York Tribune, one of the greatest of American newspapers, printed in its issue of March 20th the following remarkable tribute to the achievements of Canada since August, 1914:

> "Canada's part in the war is one of the most brilliant chapters in the world's history.
> "In two years and a half a nation of eight millions trained in the arts of peace, indifferent to the manoeuvrings of war, has become a big factor on the battlefield and in the financial operations on which military success is based.
> "This peaceful, energetic neighbor of ours decided to raise an army of 50,000, increased it to 400,000, and is now aiming at 500,000 with a certainty of success.
>
> "A year before the war Canada's trade balance was $430,000,000 on the wrong side; its exports for the present year exceed its imports by $345,000,000. Though not fully developed industrially, the Dominion has been able to provide fully for its armies, to manufacture munitions for its allies, finance the payments, to raise millions for war relief and to participate in British loans.
>
> "Starting out with a loan on the Mother Country, Canada soon found as the result of interior reforms forced by the war that she could pay her own way, and this she is doing ungrudgingly."

The verdict of an outsider is likely to have more weight than the criticisms of disgruntled office seekers.

CAN CONSTANTINE ESCAPE?

To what land will the contagion of revolution spread first from Russia? asks the New York Sun.

Be sure the fire of liberty is not going to be confined to the territory in which its flames are now burning up the dead wood of an exhausted and corrupt aristocracy. "Ca Ira." It will spread. The spirit of revolution will extend the faster because the people of Europe have for more than thirty months endured all the sufferings to which nations can be heirs. The people have poured out their treasure, their blood and their lives in a quarrel foisted upon them by kaisers and emperors and czars. Nothing more evil can befall them fighting against autocracy than they have been and now are suffering in its defence.

The speculative mind lights first on Greece. There for nearly two years a pro-German King, wedded to the sister of the Kaiser, has held back the nation from its desired alliance with the Entente. Revolution indeed is already in progress. Venizelos, idol of the populace, long-time Premier, is in the field with armed forces hostile to the King. Constantine still controls the army. But the Allies, by diplomacy backed with force on the spot, control both King and Premier. No revolution will come in Greece until the diplomacy of Great Britain and France decrees it. They have tolerated long a condition apparently hostile to their interests. Their expedition for the relief of Serbia was tied to Salonica for fear lest Constantine might start a fire in its rear. With power enough to crush him they have left him seemingly free, though shorn of most of his royal prerogatives. Their motives are not to be disentangled from the mesh of diplomacy which conceals them. Certain it is, however, that for the present neither could revolution succeed nor the throne be firmly reestablished without at least the countenance of the Allies, who control Greece.

EDITOR'S MAIL

Editor Review: As mentioned in your valued paper of yesterday, a sub-committee of the Council met a committee composed of the Playgrounds Association and citizens interested in bathing beaches. We find on meeting the Council committee a last-minute dark horse in the shape of a counter deputation, composed of Messrs. W. H. Bradburn, V. Eastwood and Denne, who state they represented a section of the people who do not desire bathing beaches at the present time, but did not say what section.

Now it appears to me that if these gentlemen are really representative of the section before mentioned, and their views are allowed to rule, we shall never have bathing beaches in Peterborough, because they will never have the need for them. People who can keep automobiles, build cottages on the lakes, and have their own private bathing houses, do not need bathing beaches, and will never FEEL the necessity for them.

We are appealing for the common people, who are not able to afford such luxuries, and who compose the majority of the citizens.

It is hardly necessary for me to enumerate all the advantages to be derived from public bathing beaches as the citizens are by now fully acquainted with them.

The very fact that such a representative body as the Trades and Labor Council have petitioned the City Council to grant the appropriation for these beaches, shows that the very people who will use them are the ones who are asking for them.

I understand that the question of public bathing beaches is to be brought by the sub-committee before the committee of the whole council this evening, and I would therefore respectfully beg the aldermen not to allow themselves to be influenced by the views of a deputation who seem to represent the section of the public who do not NEED bathing beaches.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor,
J. W. WORTH.

Editor Review: Many people will try their hand at gardening this season for the first time and some of them are going to be disappointed. Black soil does not necessarily mean fertile soil and much of this land, although black soil and rich looking, needs fertilizing and is deficient in lime. I have spent six seasons in learning the kinds of vegetables that are adapted to our black loam so that I could not only have the quantity, but the quality, too. It pays. So whatever a person does he should buy his seeds from a reliable seedsman and try to get the best varieties.

COLLECTION OF GARBAGE IS NOT SATISFACTORY

Newly-Appointed Inspector Has Some Difficulty in Meeting the Contractor.

The negligence or otherwise of the garbage collectors was up again last night before the property committee, and this time from the letter of C. C. Parsons, McDonnel St., it apeared that a tip, not gratuitous, but compulsory, is necessary before certain citizens get their garbage or ashes removed. The letter stated that an agreement had been made for an extra 10c per week, the garbage collector to drive in the yard and take the refuse away. When the writer found that the yard was becoming littered he placed the receptacles back of the house line as required. Since that the ashes have not been moved.

Relief Officer Miller reported that there was a whole barrel of ashes to be taken away.

Ald. Saunders thought that Graham was not trying to do his work.

Ald. Duncan would fine him a couple of times.

Relief Officer Miller reported another case of persistent neglect on the garbage colector's part—W. A. Logan, 14 Murray St.

Sanitary Inspector Stapleton asked what was to be done with places like the Crown Building. The garbage was piled up and he could not get in touch with the garbage collector to discuss the complaints with him.

Ald. Duncan fathered a resolution which was passed that the garbage collector be notified to report to the sanitary inspector at 9 o'clock on Saturday morning.

New Supplies

Sanitary Inspector Stapleton complained about lack of equipment and stationery in his office and suggested improvements. It was decided on a motion to have Ald. Duncan get the stationery and the City Trust will be asked to clean up and repair the office.

Can't Be Done

City Solicitor Gordon reported to the committee that they could not grant permission to anyone to do plumbing except to a licensed plumber. This report was on the request of W. P. Mastricum to be allowed to do the plumbing in his own residence.

According to the February report of Plumbing Inspector Thompson, the residence on Chamberlain Street are getting their premises connected with the sewer rapidly. He made twelve inspections on that street last month.

Chairman to Report

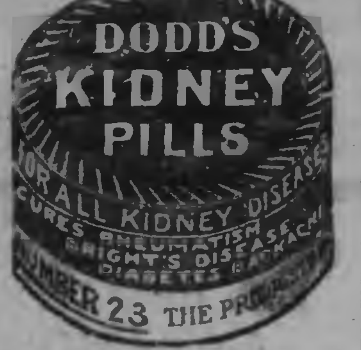
Ald. Saunders reported that J. T. Palmer, Wescott St., would like to buy a small strip of land which is owned by the city, at the rear of his residence.

Most of the committee were opposed to selling it as the Chicle Co might want the land for a siding. The chairman was asked to report after interviewing Mr. Lundy.

The suggestion was made to allow the land to be cultivated by Mr. Palmer until the city requires it.

Ald. Duncan stated that Thomas Irwin would like to buy a strip of land near Murray and Stewart St. which was now used by the Board of Works for a store ground.

This will also be reported on after consulting the works department.



OPPOSITION TO

the loss by the revenue from the [illegible]. The Trades and Labor Council would like to see a returned soldier for market clerk.

O. S. Matchett agreed with the remarks made by Mr. Mitchell. Ninety per cent. of the butter came from the outside markets where the grocers can buy cheaper than in Peterborough and sell it here cheaper after paying the freight. The tolls did not stop the farmers from attending the market. The city needs all the money it can get to build the bridge across the river. He gave some references as to prices. The grocers were selling potatoes for 60c a peck. The farmer wanted $3.75 a bag. He was opposed to a free market on the ground of lost revenue to the city.

A. W. Paskins could buy cheaper in Hastings and other places than in Peterborough. Butter could be got for 37c in Toronto, while the price here was 42c to 45c. A free market won't reduce the price to the consumer. If it would he would be in favor of it.

Ald. Smith Wondered

Ald. Smith wondered why Messrs. Mason, Connal and Hamilton were in favor of the free market and the others against it. He could not understand how a free market was going to start. The Council must look after the consumer and he would give the free market a trial.

S. J. Mitchell wanted it understood that he was not oposed to a free market except as a taxpayer opposing an unnecesary expenditure. The farmer was getting high prices here and could afford to pay the tolls.

R. D. Hall: If he gets high prices he will spend the money here and not in Toronto.

Apparently the grocers don't want a free market, said Mr. Hartley. He was always in favor of home industry and would pay more for Peterborough produce. Give the free market a trial and he felt sure that the city would have to get more accommodation for the increased attendance. Get the people to spend the money here. A free market was in the interests of both merchant and taxpayer.

Jos. Crowe thought the collection of a toll was a nuisance. Give the free market a trial and keep the police away from the market. The feelings of the women must be considered.

T. C. Elliot was not considering the farmer only, but the citizens at large. A greater supply means a lower price. He referred to the increased business since toll gates were abolished and felt sure the abolition of tolls would be just as beneficial. Surely the council would pay heed to the request of the delegation.

Ald. Saunders was not in favor of throwing the revenue from the market away. The workingmen generally were not in favor of a free market.

Council to Decide

The delegation retired and the committee decided to let the council decide on the free market question.

Tenders were opened for the market tolls as follows:—

Walter Fisher	$720
D J. Moloney	$700
Ben. Johnson	$687

The committee decided to recomment that the tender of Walter Fisher be accepted.

Last year the tolls wer sold to D. J. Moloney for $650.

EDITOR'S MAIL

Editor Review: Have I any redress?

I was called out of a sick bed twice last night to answer the phone and in each case the wrong number had been given. Each time I answered I thought the call was from the doctor and you can imagine how I felt when I realized the true situation.

Be patient. Just think of the hundreds of others who suffer with you, and try to develop a feeling of kinship with your neighbors.

Even a well preserved woman may have an acid disposition.

Foot-wear Models on 2nd Floor

Knowing that Easter is but a few short weeks away, and mindful of all former seasons, we bought liberally, but discreetly, of Footwear from manufacturers, both Canadian and American. The models that we selected have the double qualifications of style and service, "which, of course, includes comfort." Think of what a rare combination it is in footwear. Yet here it is in bountiful array.

Please remember that we are the sole agents in this city for the widely-known and greatly favored "J. & K. Footwear."

Luxurious Materials for the New Garb During the Easter Season

Will Easter morn find you in the rear of the procession or will you be fittingly attired for the occasion? We urge you to make haste, and especially so if your suit or cloak is to be fashioned from some yard material that requires attention from the dressmaker. The markets are skimped and buyers encounter many difficulties—"this we cannot deny." Nevertheless, we have secured a bountiful supply of beautiful materials. The colors are manifold, likewise the weaves. Navy, of course, cannot be ousted from its stronghold; greens, browns, fawns, etc., are equally as much in favor—it would be unfair to discriminate.

Crepe de Chenes, Georgettes, Poplins, and all manner of soft, supple materials, so delightflu for airy spring dresses. We must also mention taffeta, which combines so splendidly with Georgette, and its merit in this direction has not been forgotten—it is widely employed. Our stock of Taffetas and Georgettes is comprehensive.

GREATER PRODUCTION MOVEMENT SPREADING

Two Women in Partnership to Till Lot and Reap the Benefit---Public Meeting Next Tuesday Night.

The Greater Production movement is spreading. Women, who are the factors in determining household economies, have many of them made up such minds as they have that never again will they pay the grocer or dealer $1 per peck for potatoes. And that there be no scarcity, barring weather condition, they will see that the plot is tilled.

Two women came yesterday to entreat the use of a lot nextt door, to go shares in its use and tillage. A letter was written to the owner and no doubt assent will be given. The women expressed the determination to work early and late, and to get a crop. That is the sort of state of mind that will bring results.

The sorting out of the lots in the south ward, such as will be suitable for cultivation is going on. Mr. Henry, the assessor, supplies the information and Mr. Ingram, of the city clerk's office, is tabulating and arranging the record. It is positively surprising the amount of really tillable land that is vacant. And most of it within easy reach

On eighteen of the streets in the south ward, on which area the inquest is now being held, are found 226 lots, of course of varying sizes, ranging from 32ft. frontage to 52ft and in depth from 90ft to 180 ft. These are, for instance, all below Prince St. except a few on Albert and Patterson Streets, so that the man living in the south, and who can secure one of these, will not have far to go to get at it. It is expected that following the movement that several men will get ready to do ploughing and the committee will take steps to try and provide facilities for the purpose, that is, arrange with men for a reasonable fee for the work, to be paid for by the usuer of the lot.

It is surprising that there are so few non-resident owners. Scrutiny shows that even these are men who formerly lived in the city and who have moved away. The roll gives the address and all will be communicated with in good time for beginning work.

It is a little early to announce that selections may be made, as the listing is not completed. Due notice will be given, and then we shall see how far the movemnt has taken hold in a public way. Numbers of arrangements have been made privately and these will not be recorded. The whole thing is being placed on paper so that a record may be kept and if in another year lots are to be used the work will not have to be done over again.

Feinbergs' Shoes For Spring Are Worth Seeing

Spring makes one wish to be well dresed, for truly, bright sunny days show up to disadvantage any clothes that are worn or threadbare, or that have become shiny through use. But whether one has a new suit or not, it is a noticeable fact that the feet must be well dressed in order for one to look their best. At Feinberg's shoe store, 284 George St., there are some excellent lines of ladies' boots and shoes in the prevailing popular styles which which to make a selection and as will be seen by their advertisements in these columns, they are equipped with the right kind of shoes to satisfy the footwear wants of particular people. Before buying elsewhere it will repay one to drop in and have a look at Feinberg's shoes. It is just this side of King Street, on George. The prices are most remarkable when the style and quality of the shoes are taken into consideration.

THE OLD-FASHIONED NAP

It is an interesting fact that quite one-half of the naughtiness of children is due to fatigue—practically all cases of fretfulness, very nearly all quarrels, almost every fit of sulks. This being the case, it would seem that mothers would almost instinctively scee to it that their children are provided with longer rest periods. Why is this not done?

One reason is that the nap, excepting for babies, has so largely gone out of fashion. Time was when every child under six years of age took a nap regularly every afternoon, and ocasionallyi n the morning also. At the present day, all small children seem "older than children of that age used to seem." The result is that the nap has been given up. It might well be resumed. The result would be happier, healthier and better behaved children.

"HIGH" TEA

The high tea given by the gentlemen yesterday afternoon in the Masonic dining hall under the auspices of the 57th Chapter I.O.D.E. was a great success, not only in point of attendance and receipts, but in the enjoyment given by the unique attendants and service. On entering the hall a dummy with the sign "Reception Committee. Hello," was greeted and the walls were hung with various mottos and warnings of which the following are a few: "Watch your purse; we are not responsible for the waiters." "Try our 2 1-2 Per Cent. Tea;" "ruberoid pie lasts longest;" "we have two doctors on our staff"; "For ambulances call 157 or 85;" "Don't tip the waiters, they are all married." "Serve and save; eat the bones and crusts;" "The silverware is not ours —be merciful.

The tables were beautifully decorated and the waiters were all furnished with "meenoo" cards appropriately gotten up for the occasion.

The special, which cost 99c, was "hot air on the half shell," consisting of an oyster patty shell with cotton stuffing. It would not do to say how many or who got "stung" on this.

The extras were:—

Chicken salad (a la drumstick), 15c.

Spiced Venison (a la Harry Winch), 10c.

Assorted Pie (a la foundry style) 10c.

Ice Cream and Cake (a la chill), 10c.

Fruit and Nut Sundae (church style), 10c.

Coarse Dinner, 35c. (a la cart load), served from 5.30 p.m. to 5.30 a.m.

Horseradish (a la July)
Roast Pork (a la Grunt)
Potatoes (a la thimbleful)
Beet Salad (a la mix-up)
Pickles (a la Pucker)
Bread and Butter
Pie (sterilized)
Coffee. Tea.

Major Eastwood poured tea while the duties of Chancellor of the Exchequer were ably attended to by Capt. W. H. Hill. Mr. John Crane was the head waiter, costumed to kill, and the waiters were Dr Greer, Messrs. G. H. Logie, Ried Munro, G. O. Cameron, Roland Denne, Fred Roy, H. O. Fisk and A. H. Stratton. All orders were promptly filled and no kicks were allowed to be registered.

The receipts amounted to about $70.

At the regular tea, which was served earlier in the afternoon, Mrs. C. E. Jamieson was hostess and her assistants were Mrs. Gliddon, Mrs. (Dr.) Amys, Mrs Gordon Hall and Miss Ruth Robertson.

The Chapter wishes to thank Mr. Crane and his staff and Mr. R. Denne for potted plants and cut flowers.

WHEN GARDENING IS A FAD

"Why don't you get dressed and go down town with us instead of grubbing around in the dirt all day?" asked the more plump of two well groomed women to the matron, who was working in a garden.

"Oh," said the matron who was working in the garden, "I got up at 5 o'clock this morning to come out here and dig. It's so fascinating."

"A garden pays, too, doesn't it?" inquired the thinner of the two well groomed women.

"Well, I don't know, considering the soap," replied the gardening woman.

"Soap! What has soap to do with a garden?" gasped the other two.

"Everything," responded the gardener with the air of one squelching a filibuster. "After the garden comes the soap. If you garden ten minutes you must soap for twenty. The soap item in our family has increased 80 per cent. since we have had a garden to dig in."

"But a garden must reduce the cost of food," maintained the fat woman.

"No one ever cut down food expenses by working in a garden," insisted the gardening lady. "The more you garden the more you eat."

"I honestly think the high price of foods is caused by the fad for gardening! Now I get up at 6 in the morning and rush to my little garden spot and start to mulch the turnips, the cute little turnips-wurnipies just peping out of the ground. Awfully fascinating work! The first thing I know I smell ham frying next door. My neighbor over there got up an hour earlier than I did and consequently is ready for luncheon at 10.30.

"But as soon as my nostrils catch the savory odor of the ham frying I thrown down my rake and fly to my own gas range. I have no ham to fry, so I quickly kill a chicken and start frying it in butter. As I fry I observe signs of emotion on the part of another neighbor, one who got to work abut an hur later than I did and who probably thought she would each luncheon about noon. She sniffs my frying chicken, drops her hoe and rushes into her kitchen. I hear her larder door bang open and the first thing she does is to haul out the steak that was to be served at the evening meal when the men will be home.

"The result is she eats the whole steak and has to buy another.

"You may control birth, death and the Kaiser, but not food expenses."

The ladies who were going down town moved on.

FOR TRAVELERS.

How to Journey the Easiest, Pleasantest Way.

A common purse for traveling companions does away with much confusion and wearisome settling up after a day of sightseeing. Every morning let each member of the party put a specified amount into a common purse, from which equal expenses, such as car fares, fees, luncheons, etc., are to be paid. Personal expenditures or extras should be taken from individual purses.

A nice way to keep neckwear, ribbons and such things smooth when packing in a suitcase is to put them between the different leaves of a magazine. This takes up less room than a box in a suit case and is very convenient when removed to the dresser drawer, as it keeps these small articles smooth and nice.

A stiff hatbox cut to equal the depth of the hat and placed over the hat will be found to be a most effectual way of preserving its freshness during travels. Underwear and other little accessories can be packed neatly on either side to prevent the box and hat from swaying.

There is a nightgown designed especially for travelers who must spend the night on the cars. It has a pocket in which toilet articles may be tucked and a big hood which may be slipped over disheveled hair for the trip from the berth to the dressing room.

A bag of white oilcloth such as is used for shelves, with a drawstring at the top, is a highly prized possession when one travels. The soiled clothing is snugly and securely packed in it, thus preventing the contents of the trunk from being affected by it.

Sometimes when traveling or visiting there is pressing need of a laundry bag and none at hand. If one can procure any sort of common towel, a bag may easily be made. Fold the towel in halves and sew up the sides to within six inches of the top. Fold the tops over outside and stitch across, leaving an inch space for the drawstrings, which may be of tape, ribbon or anything that happens to be at hand. Such a bag will serve its purpose and can readily be converted back to a towel when the need is over.

HER DANCE FROCK.

A Simple Model For Maidens In Pink Satin.

This party gown has a drop skirt of silver lace over which falls a graceful drape of pink satin. The bodice has a girdle of silver lace, but by far the most interesting feature are the angel wings of pink tulle on the shoulders.

THE BELLE

Acts of Parliament.

The wording of the acts of parliament today shows practically the exact same determination to rule by representative government as existed in the old, purely Saxon days.

"Be it enacted," the parliamentary law reads, "by the king's most excellent majesty, by and with advice and consent of the lords spiritual and temporal and common, in this present parliament assembled."

There is something even more royal and dominant in that phrase "by and with the consent of" the members of the two houses of parliament than would seem to lie even in "the king's most excellent majesty."

OMEMEE

OMEMEE, March 23—Mr. John Malloch and sister Mrs. Johnston of Peterborough have taken up residence in Omemee again after several years' absence.

Mr. C. Crouk of Port Credit is renewing acquaintances in town and is the guest of Mr. T. Henderson.

Mr. and Mrs. Bushnell attended the funeral of the late Mr. Dobbin in Peterborough on Thursday.

Mrs. Howard Mulligan and son Clayton of Fort Columbus arrived in Omemee Thursday and will stay until Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Mulligan return.

Mrs. McLaughlin and son of Bancroft returned home after a pleasant visit with Rev. and Mrs. Down.

Mr. Harry Cressy received word from Ottawa last week that his half brother, Pte. Warrington, had been wounded.

Miss E. Bushnell of Lindsay spent the week-end with her aunt, Mrs. James Bushnell.

Mrs. H. Magee was a visitor to Lakefield last week.

Miss B. Elliott, Toronto, visited her father and mother over Sunday.

Rev. J. P. McInnis, who has been invalided home from England, arrived in Omemee Monday night and was met at the train by a great many friends. On Wednesday evening a public reception was given Mr. McInnis in Coronation Hall.

Reeve Parsons acted as chairman. The meeting opened by singing the Maple Leaf, after which Ald. H. Lamb read the address of welcome. Mr. McInnis replied, thanking the people of Omemee for their kind welcome and also giving an interesting and instructive address regarding his travels through England, Ireland, Scotland and France, and also amusing accounts of the doings of our own boys, after which little Helen Johnston sang Somewhere in France, while a number of young ladies went through the audience taking up a collection for the Soldiers' Aid Society. Lieut. Bishop delivered a short and enthusiastic recruiting speech, and Capt. Reid of Lindsay sang a rousing patriotic song entitled "Carry On," for which he was loudly applauded, and responded with "The Grey Watch." Rev. Mr. McCullough of Port Hope, who has been supplying in Mr. McInnis' church during his absence, was the next speaker, after which Miss Parsons rendered a solo, "Heroes and Gentlemen." Rev. Mr. Downe and Rev. Mr. James were the last speakers, joining with the others in words of welcome. The reception was brought to a close by the singing of the National Anthem.

Some time ago a group of young men in Omemee on being approached by the recruiting officer, said that they would enlist when Sir John Eaton did. It may be of interest to the people in this vicinity to copy an official announcement made from Ottawa on March 3. The announcement was as follows: "Sir John Eaton has spent one million dollars of his own private funds to date supporting the families of men in his employ who are at the front. Of his various staffs, 2,438 men have donned khaki and of these 1,200 are still drawing pay from him. These men, or rather their families, have been paid from Sir John's private resources. Their weekly pay roll has averaged over $10,000 and for the last week for which figures are available, Sir John was called upon to expend $11,042 for this purpose. On Feb. 18 last a total of $982,885.50 had been drawn from Sir John's personal accounts to fulfill the pledges he had given. The Toronto factories and store have sent 1,591 men to the front; of these 346 have appeared in the casualty lists and 74 have lost their lives."

Miss L. Parsons was a visitor to Lindsay on Monday.

Mr. W. Curry attended the funeral of the late Mr. Kells in Millbrook last week.

Mrs. Johnston of California, who is visiting her sister in Lindsay, was the guest of Mrs. Morcombe on Wednesday.

Mrs. White and son of Collingwood are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. Glenny.

Colored Bead Belts.

Belts have come back with a glitter and sparkle that will make them irresistible even to the girl who ordinarily does not care to cultivate a distinct break at the waist line by means of a separate belt.

Some of these belts, which have come from Paris, are made entirely of beads in various colors. The beads are so arranged that there is a distinct design, in some instances introducing figures. Quite unique is a belt of black patent leather with a design done in black and white beads. Another is shown in a checkerboard effect done in bugle beads. There are others of suede in bright colors liberally sprinkled with beads of a strongly contrasting tone.

Because of the fancy for narrow strap effects some of the belts have been made of several narrow strips of suede and are joined with bead motifs of various designs.

Chinese Bracelets.

Plain Chinese bracelets are used as trimming on hats, arranged so that the hat can be carried by them as if they were loops.

Kept Fit Through Two Wars

Ontario Sapper Praises Dr. Cassell's Tablets.

That a soldier should use and praise Dr. Cassell's Tablets is clear proof of the wonderful sustaining power of this great strength-giving medicine. And thousands of service men on land and sea are trusting to Dr. Cassell's Tablets to sustain them through all the hardships of relentless war.

SAPPER A. HARTLEY, OF THE A. COMPANY, CANADIAN ENGINEERS, whose home address is 906, TRAFALGAR-STREET, LONDON, ONTARIO, is one of many who have written in praise of Dr. Cassell's Tablets. He says:—"As a constant user of Dr. Cassell's Tablets I would like to add my testimony to their value. I used them when I was in the South African War, and, finding the benefit of them there, have taken them since when ever I felt run down. I always recommend them, for I know they do all that is claimed for them. In my opinion they are the best tonic anyone can take for loss of appetite, poorness of the blood, or general weakness of the system. We have had a lot of hard training here, and some time ago I began to feel the strain, but I got some Dr. Cassell's Tablets, and the boys are surprised at what a difference they made in me. I mean to have some with me always on active service."

Sapper Hartley.

Dr. Cassell's Tablets put new life and vigour into weak, overstrained people. They nourish the nerves, enrich the blood, strengthen the general system, and create that snap and fitness which make life a joy. Take a course of them, and health and vital energy will soon be yours.

THEORY AND PRACTICE.

IN theory I don't care for money
If I can have a small supply
To keep my family from starvation
And some few extra trinkets buy,
Enough to live in easy comfort,
A luxury just now and then,
But still I find I'm chasing dollars
The way I notice other men.

We speak of money as the "needful,"
And very truly now and then
It is a useful thing and handy
To have on hand a five or ten.
As to a larger pile, we scorn it
And look at it somewhat askance
Unless we have a chance to grab it,
And then we wrestle for the chance.

The man who hasn't any money
And none inclined to reach his mitt
Philosophizes very largely
About the vanity of it.
He thinks he's happier with nothing,
But still at that you'll find him rash
Enough to jeopardize his pleasures
If he can trade a part for cash.

In theory as we look things over
We think how worthless 'tis and vain.
In practice when they hand it to us
We don't reject it or complain.
It is a fact, and I believe it—
At least that's what I've heard them say—
That those who have contempt for money
Will meet it fairly halfway.

Observe.

It's the little things that count.
Kindly notice what I say
When you check up the amount
You are called upon to pay.

It's the little nickel leak
That depletes your modest pile.
If relief you haply seek
Save one every little while.

Save a dollar or a dime.
Get your friends the same to do.
Then when comes vacation time
They perhaps will lend to you.

Eight Hundred Lives for a Fag.

The lives of eight hundred people in a factory near Birmingham, England, were endangered by a girl's love for cigarette smoking, according to charges brought by the Government in a trial just concluded there. The girl, Gladys Farr, was fined 10 pounds and received the most severe admonition that it was in the power of the court to administer. It was explained that Miss Farr was employed in the fuse huts at a big munition factory. In these huts there was a large quantity of open powder. The huts were perhaps the most dangerous section of the factory's "danger area." Owing to the large amount of powder about, the atmosphere itself was highly explosive. Miss Farr was seen to strike a match on one of the fuse cases, and to attempt to light a cigarette. Another girl knocked the match out of her hand. She told the court that she lighted the match without thinking what she was doing.

Leather for Shoes.

Leather for shoe manufacturing purposes comes under two broad classifications, upper leather and sole leather, these, as their names imply, being used respectively for the sole and for the other portions of the shoe. The upper leathers most commonly used are calfskin, coltskin, or horsehide and kid. Calfskin comes in various finishes, patent, wax, bright, dull, boarded, and velvet. Coltskin and horsehide are used principally as the bases for patent leather, but they are also employed in dull finish for men's high-grade shoes. Kid may be glazed, patent, pebbled, or morocco, according to the tanning process.

THESE OLD TRAILS

Where Red River Carts Have Given Way to Automobiles

Oh, the old Manitoba trails. Away back in the eighteen seventies they knew only creaking Red River carts of the Hudson Bay traders and the Indians. Later came those first intrepid homeseekers from Eastern Canada with their heavy, lumber wagons, plodding along day after day toward some place they had been told about. Sometimes a wagon would break or a horse would die and the homeseeker would simply stay where he was and go no farther. There are several cases on record of men who have done this and who afterward waxed rich in flocks and herds and fields of waving grain. After these first settlers from the East, years after, the rush set in from the South. Leather-[illegible], nasal-speaking men from Nebraska, Kansas and Missouri drove along the trails in covered wagons of the real, old emigrant style. They came in great numbers. When the settlers along the trails began to amass wealth the trails began to be travelled by spick-and-span top buggies. Later, some of these were rubber-tired—acme of luxury and up-to-dateness! Then came the automobile, that pulsating, throbbing monarch of the road. The old trails felt them coming and vibrated under the swift revolution of the rubber-tired wheels. The history of the trails is the history of the development of the province.

LIFE COMPANIES UNITE

Advice of Western Professor Before Meeting of Agents

The life insurance companies should follow the example set by banks and the industrial companies, and unite their forces through mergers, thus eliminating unnecessary and wasteful competition, stated Professor D. Harvey, Wesley College, when addressing the Winnipeg Life Underwriters' Association. While life companies were not producers, they rendered a most important national service. The origin of such companies was in the recognition of unavoidable losses through death, and union and co-operation to meet and distribute these losses. The difficulty was that those who needed insurance most were unable to buy it, namely, the sick and the poor, and Professor Harvey suggested that in certain cases industrial insurance might meet this want. The men who were to solicit business, should be educated for the business as carefully as men were trained for other high employments.

VALUE OF GOOD ROADS

They Assist Internal Development and Material Progress

"Good roads have a money value far beyond our ordinary conception, says S. R. Henderson, President of Manitoba Good Roads Association. Bad roads constitute our greatest drawback to internal development and material progress. Good roads mean prosperous farmers, bad roads mean abandoned farms [illegible] country district and congested cities when the poor become poorer. Good roads mean more cultivated farms and cheaper food products. Bad roads mean poor transportation, lack of communication, high prices for the necessities of life, loss of untold millions and idle workmen. Good roads will help those who cultivate the soil. Whatever aid the producers and farmers give will increase our wealth and our greatness and benefit all the people."

Cheese in the West

That Manitoba is losing annually a revenue of $537,500 by importing annually 60 or 70 car loads of cheese, which might just as well be produced in the province, was one of the interesting statements made by I. Villeneuve, inspector of cheese factories. Manitoba had shown that it could raise first class cheese and the demand for it was growing. He recommended strengthening of the dairy herds. He suggested that in every factory a separate vat should be maintained in which should be made the cheese from inferior milk. The farmers supplying it should be paid by separate cheque for it, and it should be explained that the payment was for the inferior milk. This would be an object lesson to the farmers that it paid to produce good milk.

Garden Salads

Grow your own salads in the back garden, says Sidney Johnston of the Ontario Department of Agriculture. The salad crop group includes leaf, head and cross lettuce, spinach, onions, radishes, endive, Swiss chard, parsley, and cultivated dandelions.

Western farmers are urged to form social centres in rural districts.

IRELAND'S ADOPTION OF CANADIAN RANGERS

Significant Tribute From Dublin's Mayor—Big Share of Irish in Freedom's War

There were five incidents in the visit of the 199th Duchess of Connaught's Own Irish-Canadian Rangers of Montreal to Ireland. For instance the speech of the Lord Mayor of Dublin, who, a few days before, had declared that he would not welcome any body of men which came for war purposes, made this significant speech. "It is a great gratification to me," he said, "to see such a fine body of men who have responded voluntarily to the call of duty and donned the uniform of the King to defend those rights and liberties which we so dearly love. You have come from the great self-governing colony of Canada, a colony in which Irishmen have played a very important part. I understand you are Irish by birth or descent, and that in your ranks are men of all shades of religious and political opinion. I am convinced that if you men did not feel deep down in your hearts that the cause you have embraced is a just one you would not be here to-day."

The Daily Chronicle's correspondent wired from Dublin: "Having adopted the Irish-Canadian Rangers, Ireland is to receive a regular bulletin of the battalion's doings abroad as if it were one of her own children. This was arranged between Sir William Byrne, the Under-Secretary, and the adjutant of the battalion, Captain Shaughnessy."

Mr. Redmond's Letter

The Mansion House luncheon will be long remembered for the eloquent speech of the Lord Chief Justice, Sir James Campbell, and the letter from Mr. John Redmond. Mr. Redmond, who had been very ill at his home in Wicklow, and had just lost his daughter by death, wrote that it was a bitter disappointment to him not to be able to take part in the welcome of the Irish-Canadians. "The truth is," he proceeded, "Ireland is very proud of these sons of the Irish race, who in every part of the Empire, have followed the lead which Ireland herself gave from the commencement of the war."

Strengthened For Fight

"The response of the Irish race has been one of the most astonishing facts in history, and has far exceeded the most sanguine expectations entertained at the commencement of the war. The Irish race is represented in this war, on the side of liberty and humanity, by at least half a million of men who have voluntarily joined the colors—surely a proud and astonishing record. I wish the Irish-Canadians the best of good fortune. I know that they will go into battle strengthened by contact with the ancient land of their fathers, and that they will do honor to Canada, and do honor to Ireland."

The value of Pennsylvania's mineral production about equals the combined production of West Virginia, Illinois, Ohio and California, the states next in order.

WONDERFUL TALE OF AN ACTRESS
Struggled with Sickness and Discouragement; How Relieved.
Dayville, Killingly, Conn.—"I shall be glad to have every woman know what I know now, after using Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Although I am only 24 years old, I have suffered for the past eight years. I hated the doctors, for a doctor told me to give up the stage where I was playing with my husband. I had bearing down pains, my health failed me, and I could not work on the stage, and wasn't able to tend my baby or even get around myself. I was always downhearted and discontented with the world, and only lived for the sake of my little girl. The doctor said to move to some quiet little town away from the noisy city, and I might be able to live and feel well, so I went to Dayville in November. At that time I was so sick I could not walk around, and my husband kept house and I stayed in bed. One day in January I read your advertisement in a newspaper, and I sent for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and started taking it. Within two weeks time I was a different woman, could get around, and felt so good that it was a pleasure to do my housework. I felt contented and happy, and now am the picture of health, and am tempted to return to the stage. We appreciate my health as the most precious thing on earth."—Mrs. H. L. KLENETT, Box 85, Killingly, Conn.

Bad temper is its own punishment but that does not appease its victims.

Good opportunities are lost to the lover who knows not how to embrace them.

Tell a girl that you are interested in her and she will find it hard to blame you.

DISEASES IN POULTRY

Common Ailments and How to Check Them

Reviewing the more common ailments in the poultry yard, we learn these facts: If in the early stages of bumble-foot, we can spread the corn by painting liberally with tincture of iodine, daily, for a week. Bumble-foot is caused by having too high perches or roosting places. In flying down the fowl's feet often come in contact with some hard, sharp object which causes a bruise resulting in the corn. When our hens are allowed to become overfat, a disorder of the oviduct is often the result, which causes it to "break down behind." It really is no disease, merely a penalty for injudicious feeding. The best remedy known is to kill and eat all such specimens. They are not sick birds. Canker is a disgusting ailment, but generally in the start it can be checked by several applications of fine salt rubbed on the sore spots. Four drops of aconite in a half pint of drinking water, given daily for a week or more, is effective in cases of catarrh. Chicken-pox can be successfully treated by anointing the head and wattles with carbolated vaseline, after having first bathed well with hot water. One-grain quinine pill should also be given each night for a week.

When a bird is debilitated it needs something nourishing so as to build up the wasting tissues. There is nothing better than a raw fresh egg every morning until the fowl shows signs of recovery. Then it can be changed to a little cooked meat, and a little muriatic of iron added to the drinking water. When it is noticed that a bird is mopish, but otherwise seems in good health, this sluggishness can be quickly remedied by giving a family liver pill—just the kind that you would take yourself did you seem out of sorts. Repeat each night for three nights in succession. If possible also allow the bird free range over a grass plot during the day time.

VALUE OF EELS

Its Use For Food in Parts of the Dominion

Eels are not in form pleasing to the eye, nor do their habits commend them to the taste. Nevertheless in Europe and America their flesh is in demand, and scientists tell us it has great food value. It may be news to many that eels are caught at certain points in Canada and shipped to the States, where the market for them is steady. The chief centre in Canada for this industry is at Iberville, near St. Johns, Quebec. The Thuot family at that point have a license from the Government for laying traps, which extend in a zigzag line almost entirely across the Richelieu River, the current of which at that point is about half a mile wide. Early every morning the traps are examined and the catch removed and deposited in large vats which lie partly submerged near the shore. These vats are the storehouses from which the eels are taken as the market calls for them. The Richelieu River, by reason of its muddy bottom and the softness of its water, is said locally to be particularly well adapted for the propagation of eels. Naturalists, however, tell us that they have not very much precise data as to the habits of this fish. But the fact is eels are caught in the Richelieu up to a yard or more in length, with a girth equal to that of an average man's arm. Four or five eel catchers are continually employed, and the director of this unique enterprise is said to have acquired a moderate competence. Shipments average about four barrels a day, and they go chiefly to Chicago.

FOR HARRY LAUDER

Many messages of condolence, including cablegrams from North America reached Mr. Harry Lauder after the news of the death of Captain Lauder, his only child. Queen Alexandra expressed her deep sympathy and Sir Henry Dalziel telephoned: "I wish to convey the Prime Minister's deepest sympathy with Mr. and Mrs. Lauder on this awful blow." Lord Derby, in expressing his condolences, has promised to have inquiries made as to the exact circumstances of Captain Lauder's death. Mr. Lauder meanwhile went to his wife in Scotland, who was seriously ill.

WAR CHANGES MIGRATION

Migratory Habits of Birds Changed Since War

A French correspondent writes: War has made great changes in the habits of European birds. A convoy of pheasants heralded the naval battle of January 24, 1915, and pheasants have also been known to give warning of Zeppelin raids over the eastern counties of England. In normal times nearly all birds of passage used to pass over France on their way north or south, but the thunder of the guns has changed all this. The route taken by woodcocks leaving England for warmer climes is across the Channel into Brittany, and Landes to the Pyrenees, and as these birds do not have to cross the war zone, they have kept to their old route throughout the hostilities, but their brethren from Scandinavia and Holland, who used to fly by way of the Aisne and the mud lakes of Champagne, now make a long round by sea and do not touch land until they arrive off the coast of Brittany.

Snipe from Russia and Poland wing their way for sunny climes by way of the western coast of the Black Sea to gain the Bosphorus, or else cross Greece and Roumania. German and Danish snipe go south by way of Italy, and the thrushes escape the shrapnel of the front in France by crossing Switzerland and making for Italy. The wild ducks of the eastern counties of England, which used to fly over the North Sea, have also a horror of battles, and now fly north, then west, and then south again, skirting the coast of Ireland.

The calendar of the migrations, which for thousands of generations has been rigorously kept, has, since the war, become more elastic, and some birds, such as the martins, have renounced their return journey to the north and remain in Tunis rearing their young. Owls show no fear of artillery and remain in close proximity to the trenches, which they help to keep clear of rats and mice."

THE MINISTER OF FINANCE offers herewith, on behalf of the Government, the above-named Bonds for Subscription at 96, payable as follows:—

10 per cent on application;

30 " 15th May, 1917;
26 " 15th June, 1917.

The instalments may be paid in full on the 16th day of April, 1917, or on any instalment due date thereafter, under discount at the rate of four per cent per annum. All payments are to be made to a chartered bank for the credit of the Minister of Finance. Failure to pay any instalment when due will render previous payments liable to forfeiture and the allotment to cancellation.

Subscriptions, accompanied by a deposit of ten per cent of the amount subscribed, must be forwarded through the medium of a chartered bank. Any branch in Canada of any chartered bank will receive subscriptions and issue provisional receipts.

This loan is authorized under Act of the Parliament of Canada, and both principal and interest will be a charge upon the Consolidated Revenue Fund.

When the scrip certificates have been paid in full and payment endorsed thereon by the bank receiving the money, they may be exchanged for bonds, when prepared, with coupons attached, payable to bearer or registered as to principal, or for fully registered bonds, when prepared, without coupons, in accordance with the application.

Delivery of scrip certificates and of bonds will be made through the chartered banks.

The issue will be exempt from taxes—including any income tax—imposed in pursuance of legislation enacted by the Parliament of Canada.

The bonds with coupons will be issued in denominations of $100, $500, $1,000. Fully registered bonds without coupons will be issued in denominations of $1,000, $5,000 or any authorized multiple of $5,000.

The interest on the fully registered bonds will be paid by cheque, which will be remitted by post. Interest on bonds with coupons will be paid on surrender of coupons. Both cheques and coupons, at the option of the holder, will be payable free of exchange at any branch in Canada of any chartered bank, or at the Agency of the Bank of Montreal, New York City.

Subject to the payment of twenty-five cents for each new bond issued, holders of fully registered bonds without coupons will have the right to convert into bonds of the denomination of $1,000 with coupons, and holders of bonds with coupons will have the right to convert into fully registered bonds of authorized denominations without coupons at any time on application to the Minister of Finance.

The books of the loan will be kept at the Department of Finance, Ottawa.

Application will be made in due course for the listing of the issue on the Montreal and Toronto Stock Exchanges.

Recognized bond and stock brokers having offices and carrying on business in Canada will be allowed a commission of three-eighths of one per cent on allotments made in respect of applications bearing their stamp, provided, however, that no commission will be allowed in respect of the amount of any allotment paid for by the surrender of bonds issued under the War Loan prospectus of 22nd November, 1915, or in respect of the amount of any allotment paid for by surrender of five per cent debenture stock maturing 1st October, 1919. No commission will be allowed in respect of applications on forms which have not been printed by the King's Printer.

THE HOUSEKEEPERS' GUIDE

Watch the advertisements on this page, They will appear every Friday.

VARIETY THE BEST SPICE

The very bread of life is insipid without some additions to change its flavor. So every food needs to be differently arrayed to please us continually. To-day let us look over some homely ways of preparing that excellent vegetable, cabbage. You like it, of course you do, in slaw and in salad, boiled and dressed with cream and butter to give a smooth richness to it. But when and how to add that other needed flavor, vinegar, often puzzles you.

Much of the goodness of the following dishes depends upon having the cabbage chopped finely. If it is ground it becomes crushed and the good juices are lost. If you have no slaw cutter use a wooden bowl and a chopping knife. After the cabbage is made fine, sprinkle it lightly with salt and cover it. This freshens it and improves the flavor greatly.

Cold slaw: Beat the yolks of two eggs and to them add a half pint of cream or rich milk; two tablespoons of sugar, one tablespoon of mustard, one teaspoon of celery salt, or crushed celery seed, a little cayenne pepper, one tablespoon of butter, one level teaspoon salt. Heat this in a double boiler and when it is scalding add four tablespoons of vinegar. Stir constantly until it is smooth and thick. Pour this over the cabbage and let stand until cold; as with a salad and serve as salad.

Dressing for Hot Slaw.

Mix the beaten yolks of two eggs, one tablespoon of butter, one tablespoon of sugar and two tablespoons of water over four of vinegar together and heat. When this boils add the chopped cabbage and let it become heated through. Serve hot.

Celery slaw is only a little different from cold-slaw. Chop as much celery as you have cabbage and season with dry mustard, sugar, salt and pepper mixed well with enough vinegar to suit your own taste. Press two hard boiled eggs through a sieve and after mixing the seasoning and the celery and cabbage nicely together garnish with the eggs and serve with fresh lettuce.

Mustard cabbage is really cabbage with prepared mustard dressing, and this is excellent on many salads besides cabbage. Mix a tablespoon of dry mustard to a paste with a tablespoon or more of vinegar, add one egg well beaten, one tablespoon of sugar and heat this in a double boiler, stirring all the time. It will thicken quickly and should be poured over the salted, chopped cabbage while hot.

Boiled salad dressing is preferred for some salads to the usual mayonnaise, and this recipe gives a rich, smooth one that will keep well until used.

The well beaten yolks of three eggs, one cup of vinegar, one teaspoon of mustard, one tablespoon of flour, a little pepper, two tablespoons of sugar, salt to taste. Heat all together with cook stirring all the time until well thickened, remove from the fire and add still stirring three tablespoons of salad oil. Reheat and bottle what you do not use at once.

SPANISH POTATO CAKES

Mix one cupful of cold mashed potato and one cupful of sour cream or rich milk with two well-beaten eggs and beat all together thoroughly. Add one cupful of sifted flour, with which half a teaspoonful of salt and half a teaspoonful of soda have been mixed. Drop spoonfuls on a hot griddle, and bake on both sides. Spread chopped ham between the cakes to form sandwiches, and serve hot with tomato sauce.

USES FOR CORN-POPPER

An ordinary corn popper can be made a useful addition to the kitchen equipment. In it one can broil a single chop, a few slices of tomatoes, or any small object which would be difficult on an ordinary broiler. It also can be used to crisp a few crackers quickly. It is excellent for washing rice, tapioca, and the like since none of the contents can escape and the water can be allowed to run through it freely.

MOCK INDIAN PUDDING

Cut stale bread in slices, a scant half-inch thick and remove the crusts. Butter the bread, put the slices together and cut in cubes. To each cup of cubes allow two cups of milk, half a teaspoonful of salt and a scant half-cup of molasses. Bake in a buttered pudding dish in a very moderate oven from two to three hourse. Serve hot.

THE TELEPHONE BELL

It so often happens that the telephone is placed where its ringing can be heard to a disturbing extent in the bedrooms of the family, a hint as to how the noise can be greatly reduced in time of need will be welcome. If it is desirable that any one of the members of the family should have undisturbed rest or if there is a convalescent among the number, slip a piece of blotting paper under the edge of the bells and note how the sound will be lessened. You will be able to recognize the call, yet at the same time there will be less disturbing noise.

Worth Remembering

Try rubbing the meat of a pecan nut over any scratched surface of mahogany. It darkens the scratched place so that it doesn't show.

To kill cabbage odor, place a vessel of vinegar on the stove.

When hanging out clothes hang skirts by the bands, night-dresses by the shoulders and stockings by the toes.

Never put salt fish in a tin to soak.

This is a good toilet water for the bath: Two drams of the best oil of lavender, eight ounces of alcohol and two tablespoonfuls of ammonia. A little of this added to the bath water gives a delightful fragrance.

WOOL OR WORSTED

What is the difference between woollen and worsted? Perhaps many a housekeeper does not know but there is a real and technical difference. Wool or wollen yarn is made from short fibers, twisted to give a fuzzy appearance; worsted is made from long fibers which are combed to lie straight and that are tightly twisted. It takes almost ten times as long to make worsted goods as it does woollen goods, and hence the worsted is better and also much costlier, and of course, wears better.

TO SOFTEN THE HANDS

Always use a pure soap and rinse all the soap off the hands with clear water, dry them thoroughly and rub in the mixture given below: Equal parts of household ammonia, lemon juice and olive fat. Keep a bottle of this on your washstand and use it whenever necessary.

SAVE THE BUTTONHOLES

A row of button holes from a white wash waist or a boy's blouse may be used again by stitching them on as a fly under the hem of a new waist or blouse.

HOPE IN SIGHT

The humble brown potato, exalted to the class of luxuries available to bloated bondholders only, is, the wholesalers predict, on the eve of a fall. Retailers modestly state that it will not be immediate, because, having bought at a high price they must continue to sell accordingly. Who says it is not the consumer who in the last analysis is the sufferer from the H. C. of L. However, the story comes of many hundreds of thousands of bushels of this important element in the vegetarian's dinner, in excess of demand, which seems to justify the predictions of the wholesalers. All along there has been guile somewhere to explain the perfectly abnormal conditions which in a few weeks more than doubled the market price of the erstwhile unappreciated but nutritious and wholesome "old reliable" spud. An immense supply will, it is reported, shortly be placed on sale—it will be time to chuckle when the tumble in prices begins. We are learning to take statements of food supply prophets with a large grain of salt.

ORANGES FOR SLICING

To get off the thick white inner skin, pour scalding water over the oranges before they are peeled and let them stand five minutes. Then the white skin will adhere to the peel and will come off with it.

CUSTARD

Scald one cup and a half of milk in a double boiler; stir one teaspoonful of cornstarch and one-fourth a teaspoonful of salt with one or two tablespoonfuls of cold milk or water then stir into the hot milk, continue to stir two or three minutes, then cover and let cook ten or twelve minutes. Beat the yolks of two eggs; add one-fourth cup of sugar and beat again, then dilute with a little of the hot mixture, mix and turn into the rest of the hot mixture; stir for about three minutes, then strain into a cold dish.

PICTURES FOR THE CHILD

That an appreciation of art shall be part of her little daughter's mental equipment is the intention of one mother who, to that end, studies up the subject herself in a simple way. She collects pictures of noted paintings to make into a scrapbook for the child; but before one goes into the book it is pinned up on the kitchen wall and the mother familiarizes herself with it in odd moments as she goes about her work. Then, when opportunity offers, she reads up about the picture and its painter and then she is ready for a "picture story" time with the little daughter. This implants in the little one's eager and receptive mind a love for the pictures that are worth while.

WHAT IRISH WOMEN DID

The Irish "have a way with them" that quite often proves irresistible. The women of Athlone, true daughters of the soil, used their persuasive powers so effectively, the other day, as completely to rout a party of farmers who threatened to take their potatoes home with them again unless they were paid more than the regulation price. They also wanted an extra price a dozen for eggs. But Athlone was roused and the farmers were sent home without their potatoes, and without a penny more than the current rate for each dozen eggs. "Peaceful persuasion," one paper terms it but since it puts the words in inverted commas, it is to be presumed that it has its doubts.

KEEP BREAD DOUGH WARM

To keep the rising dough warm in very cold weather, heat two bricks, wrap them in paper and put them under the bread pan.

LIGHTER FRUIT CAKE

Her fruit-cake was lighter, said one cook, when she mixed it the day before it was baked, and set it away in a cool place over-night.

TO CLEAN A GALVANIZED PAIL

Galvanized pails and tubs may be cleaned quickly and perfectly by being scrubbed with kerosene oil, then washed with hot soapsuds.

WHEN MELTING CHOCOLATE

Rub the inside of your pan with a little butter before melting chocolate for cake filling. This prevents the chocolate from sticking to the pan, and saves much waste when removing the melted chocolate.

FRENCH IMPROVE CANAL POSITION

FRENCH ENLARGE POSITIONS AROUND ST. QUENTIN CANAL

Troops Reach West Bank of the Oise North of La Fere and Progress is Also Made on East Bank of Aillette River and Enemy Repulsed on Verdun Front.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, March 24. — (Official Statement.) — "East of St. Qeuntin canal we enlarged our positions appreciably during the night.

At some points our troops reached the west bank of the Oise north of La Fere.

We also made progress on the east bank of Aillitte River.

Enemy attempts against small posts near Berry-au-Bac, east of Rheims, and near Dead Man Hill, were broken up by our fire. We took prisoners.

Elsewhere the night was calm."

Along the entire battlefront between the Scarpe and the Aisne in France the Allied and German troops came to grips yesterday. At some places the battle waged by infantry, cavalry and artillery attained the biggest proportions of any engagement this year. Standing before the Hindenburg line, from the region of Arras to Laon, the Germans launched counter-attack after counter-attack at the advancing French and British forces, but the Teutons were hurled back, suffering heavy losses.

The most desperate encounters of the day occurred along the French front south of St. Quentin, where less than two and a half miles separate Nivelle's troops from the enemy defensive system. Our struggle surged around St. Simon, along both sides of the Somme-Crozeat Canal, and slightly north, near the villages of Artemps and Seraucourt-le-Grand. Here the Germans delivered a violent counter-blow that almost swept the French off their feet.

Shortly afterwards the French launched a wide offensive in this same region, and in the face of stubborn resistance pressed the Germans back to the northeast of the St. Quentin canal to a depth varying from one and a quarter to two and a half miles.

LOSSES LIGHT AND HEALTH IS EXCELLENT

BATTALIONS COMING OUT AS FIT AS THE MEN GOING IN.

FOE EXPLODED MINE.

ALERT-CANADIAN TROOPS SOON HAD CRATER ORGANIZED.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

TORONTO, March 24 — Stewart Lyons' cable to the Canadian Press today states that the Germans exploded a mine on the Canadian front yesterday morning but our men were on the alert and immediately organized the crater.

Our losses in all raids and other small affairs of the last two weeks have been notably light and the health of the troops is excellent. Battalions which come out of the trenches for a rest are almost as fit as those going in.

REPUBLIC IN FAVOR

Russia Will Remain Faithful to Alliance.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, March 24—The Central Committee and Parliamentary representatives of the Constitutional Democratic party at Petrograd voted today in favor of a Republic form of Government for Russia, according to a Petrograd despatch. Professor Hauia Milukoff, Foreign Minister in the new Government, is leader of this party.

A Reuter despatch from Petrograd reports M. Milukoff as saying to a party of Petrograd and Moscow journalists, "We shall remain faithful to all past alliances similar to that with our Allies, which will be still further strengthened and become still more cordial and sincere. Our Allies came into touch with the new regime without an instant's delay, understanding that the old regime was a source of hindrance to that organization of the Russian people which is necessary for final triumph."

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

VANCOUVER, March 24.—Telegrams from White Horse, Yukon, state that a slide occurred in Pueblo Copper Mine on Wednesday, imprisoning nine miners. Rescuers are drilling through 75 feet of solid rock in an attempt to reach them, it being quicker than removing the accumulation of debris, but hopes of finding them alive are small.

SILENCE COST HIM TERM IN COUNTY JAIL

MAX. RICHARDSON WOULD NOT SAY WHO GAVE HIM LIQUOR.

In Police Court this morning Maxwell Richardson, whose home is in Hastings, refused to disclose to the police where he procured the liquor that made him intoxicated, and the magistrate sent him to jail for two months or until such time as he is ready to give the desired information.

Richardson had pleaded guilty to a charge of being drunk and was fined $10. He was then placed in the witness box. He declined to tell who it was who supplied the liquor or how he got it.

This is the first time a witness has been sent to jail here for refusing to answer questions.

COUNCIL IN FAVOR OF THE FREE MARKET

UNLESS UNEXPECTED HAPPENS, NO TOLLS AFTER FIRST OF APRIL.

WORTH A TRIAL.

The advocates of a free market are victorious.

The council last night turned down the clause in the report of the property committee which recommended the sale of the market tolls to Walter Fisher for $720.

When the adoption of the report was moved by Ald. Saunders and Taylor, Ald. Smith voiced his sentiments in favor of a free market.

Ald. Saunders could not see his way clear to vote about $2,000 of the people's money away for a free market.

Ald. Stratton was sure that the consensus of opinion was that a free market should be tried out. The market cannot be worse and it might be made a lot better by trying a free market. The cost would be limited to what the city receives as toll. The present market clerk would take the market and run it for the weigh fees and tolls collected from hucksters, auctioneers, etc. The merchants and Trades and Labor Council must be considered. He moved that the clause be struck out.

Ald. Weir thought that a free market would better conditions. He would give it a trial this year. The increased supply would lower prices.

Mayor Duffus wanted to know if the farmers would come to a market when prices were lower.

Ald. Duncan was opposed to a free market. The present market clerk or no one else will look after the market the way it should be under free conditions. The restrictions that are put on a farmer's wife should be lessened and the police told to leave them alone. It had hurt the market and would continue to do so more than anything else. The farmers were quite willing to pay the small toll.

Ald. Taylor was not in favor of a free market.

Ald. Smith seconded Ald. Stratton's amendment and it carried. The report was adopted as amended.

No Recommendation

The special committee to confer with the Playgrounds Association in reference to bathing beaches reported that they had met but had no recommendation to make. This report was adopted.

New Regulations

Later on, Ald. Duncan introduced the subject of who was going to arrange for a caretaker for the market and twitted some of the aldermen for regularly voting against the report of the property committee.

Ald. Stratton was quite satisfied that the property committee could handle the situation.

It was decided on motion of Ald. Smith and Weir to refer the matter of new market regulations to the property committee and to receive applications for the position of caretaker.

SAYS GERMANS WILL ABANDON THE EMPEROR

PEACE AT ANY PRICE SOON, THE THOUGHT OF HIS PEOPLE.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, March 24— In an interview published here the former German magistrate who wrote the celebrated book, "I Accuse," predicts that the Entente Allies will refuse to negotiate peace terms with the Hohenzollerns and thereupon the German people will abandon the Emperor William "for peace at any price will soon be the unanimous thought of tortured Germany." He says the Kaiser strongly opposed unrestricted submarine warfare but the majority in the Council was overwhelming. He has little hope for the success of this campaign and sees with dread the isolation of Germany becoming more and more complete.

JUDGE DECIDES WINNERS IN MAP DRAWING CONTEST

Large Numbers of Entries and Excellent Work Submitted---Collegiate Pupil Captures Prize in First Class---Honorable Mention For Over Fifty of the Competitors.

William Mowat, aged 14, a pupil in the Collegiate Institute, wins the prize in Class No. 1 of The Review's Canadian Map Drawing Contest.

Mary Ethel Wood, aged 11, a pupil in the King Edward School, is winner in Class 2.

Olive L. M. Tedford, aged 8, of School Section, No. 11, Douro, of which Miss Eva M. Outram is teacher, gets the prize in Class 3.

The prize in each case is a wrist watch, and these will be given to the successful competitors when they call for them at The Review Office.

A prize was offered in each of three classes, the first for pupils under 15 and over 12 years of age; the second for those under 12 and over 9 years, and the third for those under the latter age. Competitors were required to draw a map of Canada, showing the chief cities, principal rivers, lakes and mountain ranges, the maps to be freehand drawing and the unaided work of the competitors.

The prizts are the same in each case, a wrist watch, fully guaranteed. The prise winning maps and the watches are now on exhibition in the windows of Schneider Bros., jewelers, George strett. The names of the winner of each will be engraved upon the watch.

Excellent Specimens.

The large numbtr of drawings submitted denotes the wide interest that was taken in the contest, and tht majority of the specimens submitted were really excellent. As soon as each map was received at this office it was numbered, and the same number was allotted to the name of the competitor. Mr. S. J. Graham, on the teaching staff of the Collegiate, consented to act as judge. There was little difficulty in making the award in the first class, for, although the number of entries was large and the work above the average, the map drawn by the competitor who was designated by the number 204 was almost perfect in every detail. A reference to the list showed that the watch had been won by William Mowat, who is a son of Mr. and Mrs. A Mowat, Water street.

Close Competition in Class 2.

The making of the award in the second class was a matter more difficult to decide. The choice lay between Mary Ethel Wood and Grace Shannahan, 11 years old, of School Section No. 2, Ennismore, and whose teacher is Miss Vivian E. Galvin. Both were excellent and it is a matter of regret that the prize could not be divided between the two competitors. Finally it was decided that in the location and representation of the mountain ranges the pupil in the city school had a shade the best of it.

The work of the winner of the prize in the third class may not be up to the standard reached by the others, but the tender years of the little competitor must be taken into consideration.

Honorable Mention.

It has been decided that the excellent work sent in by the following entitles them to honorable mention:

Nora Killan, Ennismore.
Mary Anderson, city.
Ray Killeen, Indian River.
Agnes Killan, Ennismore.
Clifford H. Chapman, city.
Mary M. Twomey, Ennismore.
Gertrude Hessman, city.
Alex James Grant, city.
Estella Huston, city.
Grace Shannahan, Ennismore.
Catharine Sullivan, city.
Roland Doughty, city.
Annie Lees, Otonabee.
Marie Vansickle, Vansickle.
Fred. Webster, Lakefield.
Lila McKay, Indian River.

WAR LORDS DENOUNCED

Emperor and Hollweg Originators of the War.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, March 24.—A despatch from Berlin via Amsterdam to Reuter says the Emperor and von Bethmann-Hollweg were denounced in the Reichstag by Socialist Deputy Kunert during a debate on Thursday as the originators of the war. When Vice-Chancellor Helfferich declared that the German who spoke in the same breath of Russian and German conditions insulted the Fatherland, Kunert retorted, amid Socialist applause, "I should be proud if such progress were made in our country as has been made in the Russian Empire."

Other Socialist deputies declared "Underfeeding is most terrible and bound to affect the public," and that in many establishments workmen had collapsed from hunger.

ORGANIZED LABOR WILL PUT UP A CANDIDATE FOR PARLIAMENT

Local Liberal Leaders Attempt in Vain to Head off New Movement and to Form Alliance With Wage Earners---Move to be General Throughout Dominion.

Whoever is nominated by the Liberal party to oppose Capt. Burnham in West Peterborough at the Federal election, which everybody believes is imminent, whether the choice goes to R. R. Hall, G. N. Gordon, G. Walter Green, W. G. Morrow, or any of the others who are ready to don the mantle, the contest for parliamentary honors will not rest between the chosen and Capt. Burnham. Labor will have a candidate in the field and the various unions are quietly at work with that end in view. The Liberal party is at its wits' end, dismayed by the prospect. Every hope of success has been shattered by the new move and the faithful are wooing organized labor in Peterborough today with an assiduity that is equalled only by the energy with which they are fishing for the votes of the newly-enfranchised women. But labor is coy and prefers to go it alone, and, like the new voters, have every reason to be skeptical of the promises and fair words of the Opposition leaders.

The new political move on the part of labor is not to be confined to this constituency, but it is planned to put a candidate in nearly every constituency in Canada. Organizers have been working for the past year among the wage earners of Peterborough and the result is that the various unions are numerically stronger than they have ever been.

PETERBOROUGH, SATURDAY, MARCH 24, 1917

AMENDING THE TEMPERANCE ACT.

THE PROMISED AMENDMENTS to the Ontario Temperance Act were brought down in the Legislature yesterday by Provincial Secretary McPherson, and, while the principles of the measure are not affected, the suggested changes will facilitate its enforcement.

First of all, the standard hotels are to be given encouragement to continue in the business and are, accordingly, exempted from the business tax for the duration of the Act. No reasonable person will object to this concession. The hotels in the province were financed and valued upon a fictitious basis, due entirely to the business in which they were engaged. A building erected for and used as a store for years falls off in value, temporarily at least, if diverted from its original purpose and converted into a dwelling house.

Houses for the accommodation of the travelling public are essential to the life of any community. Any possible special privileges should be conferred upon the standard hotels, especially as all appear to be complying implicitly with the prohibitory law. It is likely that the sale of the so-called temperance drinks will be confined to these places. If there is anything else in the way of pool-room privileges, they should be granted to those places that provide food and lodging for the traveller and the transient visitor to the city. Temperance advocates have always held that the hotels under prohibition would be the social centres in the community where young and old could gather without danger to their morals and without running the risk of losing their standing in the church. Now is the time to seek to bring about such conditions and establish desirable social clubs for those not financially able to move in the upper circles of society.

Express companies will be required to show their books to officials of the License Board, in order to aid in the enforcement of the Act. Although such information will be regarded as confidential, it will do away with considerable secret receipts of wet goods from outside points.

It appears unlikely that the Government will take any measures to stop the importation of liquor into the province for private and restricted use. It is a question whether the masses of the people would stand for so drastic an enactment. The temperance forces were given all that they asked for when the Act was passed. It is impossible to disassociate any further agitation from the suspicion that it is simply a political stratagem to embarrass the Governments at Toronto and Ottawa. There is no question as to the authority of the former to shut out importation. It has also been made clear that in the temperance legislation of a year ago the Federal powers went to the limit of their constitutional rights. It would be unfortunate if the temperance question is again dragged into the public arena for partisan purposes, but it is apparent that professional agitators are intent upon a campaign to discredit the Administration at Ottawa with the temperance voters of Ontario by attempting to coerce them into a policy which, if given effect, would result in nothing save precipitating litigation.

The License Commissioners are to be left as they are. The success of the Canada Temperance Act has been enhanced by the strict enforcement that has marked its administration, and for this the License Board is entitled to the credit. The further success of the Act can be fully assured only by leaving the present Commissioners in office.

WHAT THE ORDER MAY MEAN.

LOCAL RESIDENTS who are interested specially in the problem of recruiting are not discouraged over the apparent inanity of the recent order of the Militia Department to raise fifty thousand men for home defence under the voluntary system. They claim that it would be the part of wisdom to withhold criticism and suspend judgment until the import of the order is fully understood. It is altogether likely that the contemplated step is the first stage of what will eventually mean universal compulsion. This view is supported by the opinion of experts.

The Government probably proposes to reach the desired goal by easy stages. The men between the ages of eighteen and forty-five will be given a chance to enlist voluntarily. If they fail to come up to the mark, an order-in-council is all that is required to recruit the various militia regiments up to full strength. It would be a comparatively easy task to raise in this way the fifty thousand men at present required, without crippling the industries of the country, as a committee will be appointed at the various recruiting points to decide who best can be spared from the ranks of the workers.

With a militia enrolment of fifty thousand men and the various battalions in camp next spring, the rest would be easy. The same number of men enlisted for overseas would be available and could be easily spared for duty in Europe. If all the fifty thousand were not required here for national defence it is probable that at leas[illegible] per cent would, after a trial of the life of a soldier, consent to go overseas. They would at least be given that chance. If they were not disposed to avail themselves of it, they could be impressed into the wider service by another order-in-council. The Governor-in-Council can, it is held, decide what is meant by home defence, and he would likely rule that Canada's struggle in self-defence is in France today. That would seem to be the spirit of the regulations embodied in the Militia Act.

According to the popular interpretation of that Act, men called out for military duty cannot be compelled to leave the country. Suppose Canada were at war with the United States, conscripted militiamen in this country could, if that rendering of the meaning of the Act is correct, refuse to follow the retreating foe over the border. If the Mexican guerillas were overrunning the United States and headed for Canada, the military force of this country could sleep on their arms at the boundary line waiting for the arrival of the freebooters.

In other words, the conscript would be in the same class as a man who rested in the shade while the houses of his neighbors a few blocks off were in flames, refusing to exert himself against an incipient danger, but waiting until the wandering sparks set the roof of his own home on fire.

It is not unlikely that the Government has this matter well in hand and that it already possesses the authority to provide an adequate armed force for duty either at home or in Flanders.

Men of military age will do well to ponder the opportunity to enter the new branch of the service without hesitation and of their own will. If they still hang back the machinery required to induce them to do their duty can easily be set in motion.

BLONDIN'S PATRIOTISM.

A SO-CALLED NATIONALIST member of the Dominion Cabinet, whom The Examiner assailed in and out of season until forced to abandon the assault through sheer exhaustion of ideas and vituperation, has resigned his position to raise a battalion of men in his own province, Quebec. It is altogether likely that he will, under a special ruling of the Department, be permitted to take his battalion as a unit at least as far as the training camps in England.

Tancrede Marsil was one of the speakers at the Montreal anti-recruiting meeting. "We will," he shouted, "keep up the fight until the conscription movement is beaten. I belong to the Nationalist bunch, but I hope that when the old chief of the Liberal party returns to power there will be an end of extravagance."

The form of extravagance to which Mr. Marsil particularly objected was the expenditure to carry on the war, an outlay that he is pleased to regard as a sheer waste of the wealth of the country. It is clear that the only hope of the cult to which he belongs lies in the Liberal party. That is the party the leader of which speaks openly against the very suggestion of compulsion and who shudders as he stands before his compatriots and warns them against the danger which he dreams of that they will find themselves shackled by the same military chains that kaiserism has forged.

If, then, there is Nationalism in Canada, to which political party do its devotees look for champions and defenders of their cause?

THE GLOBE AND THE LAWYERS.

THE GLOBE reproves the lawyers for their sad lack of clarity in their official documents and insists that the ends of justice can be served as efficiently if its claims are asserted and its conditions set forth in verbiage that he who runs may read with understanding. The Globe administers its rebuke, in part, in the following:

> The limits of language also impose difficulties in the way of those who would put into legal phraseology principles definitely applicable to the infinite variety of human differences. But the impossibility of foreseeing cases and complications makes universally applicable legislation impossible.

Satan, according to fabled lore, has been known to reprove the sinner, the bibulous individual may reproach a neighbor for over-indulgence, the physician may treat a patient for a malady which theatens his own life, so that there are probably plenty of precedents for a newspaper taking the lawyers to task for using a conglomeration of words, while itself employing language little less involved.

WHEN THE FLITTER RETURNS.

THE MEN WHO HAVE FLITTED from Canada to the United States in order to avoid threatened conscirption have one hope left them. All that lies between them and a safe return to their native heath is the result of the Federal election, which everyone feels will be held sometime before September. If the Borden Government is sustained, the hope of the exiles will vanish. It It would not be safe to venture back under those circumstances, but if by any chance the Liberals were successful in carrying a majority of the constituencies, the troubles of the flitters will be over. Sir Wilfrid has always tried to make it plain to his followers that the only way to avoid compulsory service was to get his party back to power.

But there is dim prospect of such a result of an appeal t[illegible] country. One of the best arguments that could [illegible]ibly be used on behalf of the Borden Government will be that their return to power would keep out of the country the most undesirable element of the population.

Franchise for Women

FIRST OF SERIES OF ARTICLES LEADING UP TO THE MASS MEETING IN THE OPERA HOUSE ON APRIL 17, BY LOCAL WRITERS.

The struggle for the freedom of the people has been a long and often a bloody one. Strange as it may seem, the few have claimed the right to rule the many. It began in abject slavery as practised amongst the ancients, including the chosen people themselves, and it wound up so far as this continent was concerned, in the terrific explosion of the American Civil War, in the sixties. But amongst those nations that gave up slavery of the body there was still the half-slavery of withholding electoral representation and therefore civil rights and liberty. Now slavery in whole or in part could never have existed except by virtue of superior force that is physical power and cunning.

The slave had been the slave of the men and women who owned him. He had been won in war and kept by force. When he was freed and afterwards given the franchise the position of women themselves came under review. It became manifest that there was another class, not slaves, that had not the full rights, however, of free people, viz., women. Gradually it was urged that they should be given the same degree of freedom and position in the state given to the former slave. This has at last been done in various states although centuries of deprival of independence and personal rights has made many women reconciled to that positon and left them willing to remain in it. Whilst, however, slaves were treated as personal property or cattle, women, though deprived of civil rights, were treated as guests or as those who through some personal charm received a consideration and a deference to which they were not legally entitled as people with standing and position bfore the law. Equal treatment was a favor, not a legal right.

It was only recently, indeed, that women could hold property in their own right. They have, however, in many countries at last reached the position where they can not only hold it, but represent it just as men do and there they have equal rights in all electoral respects just as men have. They have gone also into trade and competitive employment just as men have. For all purposes known to the law they are men. Today one sees in Ontario the culmination of many thousands of years of struggle and development elsewhere. It is therefore a most important moment.

The question arises, "How will women now admitted to an equality with men in the struggle of life, succeed?" Hitherto they have been more or less the wards of men. Henceforth they are to be the equals. Are they mentally and physically strong enough to keep up the great competitive struggle? Mentally, no doubt. Physically? That is the only question awaiting an answer. It is big with import. We see ominous clouds arising in the U.S. as they are already being foreshadowed in Great Britain. Men are getting restless. They feel the pinch of competition and interference. They will not allow the advnte of cheap labor in any form. Can women earn the same wages as men? Are they sufficiently strong in their powers of attack and resistance to wield the right of command of the national hosts and resources in wars and other forms of the great fight of life?

If not, the nation, in which they predominate, will go down and out if nervous force and physical strength are still fundamentally necessary to preserve a nation's existence. If women approach men in this particular and becomes less fearful and more masculine, it will bring a great change If men become more feminine, it will not help matters. What the future has in store for this change of world life it is not easy to say. It means a new world. It will be more broadly free Will it be more beautiful or stronger? Will it be a success? That one might say, depends largely upon Woman herself.

EDITOR'S MAIL

Editor Review:

The caption of your editorial of March 19, "When Healers Fall Out," seems to me rather unfortunate, because the hopeful side of your attitude and of the medical opinion quoted is its breath, tolerance and basis of agreement. Your former heading, "Right Thinking the Panacea for All Ills," deserves to be kept well to the fore, studied, practised and reiterated.

It is important to observe that Christian Science is not a supplanter of Christianity, and that Mrs. Eddy was ever a faithful disciple of Christ Jesus—in her own words, "a willing disciple at the heavenly gate, waiting for the Mind of Christ." (Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures, Pref. IX.)

It is much to be desired that Christian Science be recognized as what it is—not a creed, nor merely a denominational name, but the Science of Christianity. If it were not scientific Christianity, the supreme quest of Christendom should be to discover the principle, science, and demonstrable rules utilized by Christ Jesus. Because Mrs. Eddy, after years of prayerful search and study, discovered this Science by Divine revelation, proved it by demonstration of healing, taught it to others, published it and founded its institutions, the past half century bears accumulative witness that it is properly named Christian Science.

Calvin, Knox, Wesley we agree to honor. Carlyle has done much to interpret the world's heroes correctly. Mrs. Eddy quotes his saying, "Give a thing time: if it succeeds, it is a right thing." (The First Church of Christ, Scientist and Miscellany.) Jesus said, "By their fruits ye shall know them."

Yours sincerely,

SEVENTEEN YEARS AGO

From The Review of March 24, 1900.

A patriotic bazaar was held at the residence of Alderman Denne, Park street.

Steamboat men were making preparations in expectation of a busy season.

Non-Coms. of the 57th Regiment held a smoker in the mess rooms. Mr. Walter Stocker was the chief entertainer, with a number of good vocal selections.

HELP!

That is what you need to reduce the high cost of living. You can get all kinds of help from the firms whose advertisements appear in The Review. Try them.

Some men consider an ounce of graft worth more than a pound of honesty.

OUTFIELDERS RARELY BREAK THEIR FINGERS

But Care is Always Taken in Handling the Ball.

A "baseball finger" is no longer the hall mark of the profession. Viewing the game for the first time, seeing the ball hurled about by a smoothly working infield; watching the players hurl themselves in front of a hard hit ball, grasp it with gloved hand and with scarcely perceptible hesitation "shoot" it to another infielder, the novice spectator wonders how many fingers each player breaks in a season.

As a matter of fact, the number of men who suffer from broken digital bones in the course of a season is remarkably small. It is the exception to the rule when an infielder's hands suffer; the catcher's, yes! Chiefly because of foul tips, but the infielders are too expert to get their fingers in in the path of the ball.

It is a sure road to broken bones to try and catch a thrown or batted ball with fingers extended like grappling hooks toward the ball. There are a few cardinal principles for catching a ball.

Watch the shortstop grab a red hot ground ball. It comes to him on the hop and the chances are he takes it on the second bound, for he must play the ball, not let it play him. He gets the ball between his feet, or at one side, stopping it with gloved hand and throwing it quickly. The stopping and throwing is one sweeping motion of arms and body.

Watch the player catch a ball breast high. Note his hands; fingers straight up, palms outward. See him take the ball near his knees, fingers pointing earthward, palms open toward the ball.

Or take note of a hard hit line drive that the fielder spears with one hand; if the ball is over is head he leaps, so the ball strikes in the palm of his glove; if it is at one side, he may take it running, with hand extended.

The outfielder with "baseball sense" is usually so placed when catching a fly that he gets the ball in front, breast high, in which case his palms are turned upward, the fingers pointing toward the shoulder, or waist high, his palms being upward, fingers up and outward.

Sometimes a ball is hit so fast the fielder hasn't time to get set and must take the ball over his shoulder while running. In this case both hands go up in front of his shoulder, fingers pointing up and outward, palms backward.

If you want to get a sharp line between the proper and improper way to catch a ball watch a team of hustling ball players who earn their living on the diamond, and then a group of girls imitating their brothers—and the way not to hold the hands is the way the girls do it.

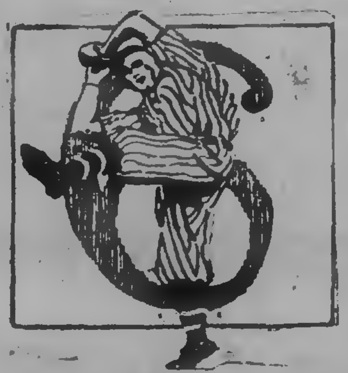
Huns' Doctrine

An extract from a certain Dr. W. Luchs says: "Educate to Hate! Educate to reverence Hate! Educate to love of Hate! Away with the false fear of brutality and fanacticism! We must not hesitate blasphemously to declare: 'And now abideth faith, hope and hate! But the greatest of these is hate.'" The German medical man is physician-in-chief to the Asylum for the Insane in Emmendingen (Bavaria) a cirmustance which prompts Vorwarts to remark: "Pity his poor patients."

Veteran a Thief

Having served through the Zulu War and the Egyptian Campaign, for his services in which he was given two medals and a star, and having 12 children and 40 grandchildren, Thomas Palmer, laborer, who pleaded guilty to stealing scrapped metal from employers with whom he had been for twenty years, was bound over.

WHY MATTY IS "BIG SIX"



There have been scores of alleged reasons advanced as to why Christy Mathewson is called "Big Six." Here is the real one:

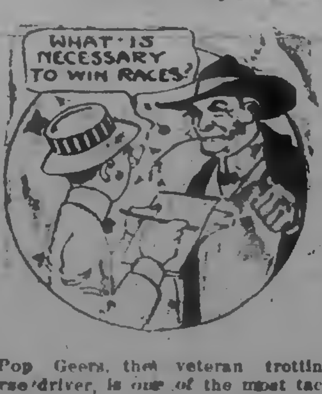
In the old days the National league consisted of two constantly warring factions, known as the "Big Three" and the "Big Five." The St. Louis club held the balance of power, and switched its vote according to which of the other owners it owed the most money. In New York one day there was a hot argument as to whether the "Big Three" or the "Big Five" had done the most for baseball. Jim Tart, then owner of the Chicago club snorted:

"Big Three and Big Five," he said angrily. "Neither of them draws any one to ball games. 'Big Six' Mathewson does the drawing." And "Big Six" it has been ever since.

MUST KEEP SOLDIERS

We must organize, as well as lay down new principles. The resources of the Empire are enormous, and the war has shown how much our existence depends upon a far greater concentration upon our own powers of production from the soil. When we think of the future of our ex-soldiers we must especially think of turning them into land settlers and food producers. We may hope to see many of them at work upon the land in the Mother Country, but the wider spaces and freer life of Canadian lands must prove irresistibly attractive to large numbers, and we must set to work now if we are not to see ex-service men pass to foreign lands and lose their British citizenship, as they did after the South African War.—Canadian Gazette.

What Wins Races



WHAT IS NECESSARY TO WIN RACES?

Pop Geers, the veteran trotting horse driver, is one of the most taciturn of men. He always seems to be trying to save up fifty million words to retire on. One day a young reporter decided to interview Geers and get a big feature story from him on the art of driving horses.

"Mr. Geers," he said, "how is it you win races? To what do you attribute your wonderful success as a driver? What is necessary to win races?"

Geers chewed a straw reflectively a moment, slowly removed it from his teeth and said:

"Fast horses."

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Worry Is a Poison.

Worry, like all other depressing emotions, is a poison, writes Dr. J. H. Kellogg in Good Health. It is a short circuit that burns out the mental batteries and destroys power for useful activity. It is not merely a habit; it is a real disease. It is not merely the surrender of the will to morbid fancies or imaginary causes of anxiety; it is an actual disease, a real physical state, as real as is indigestion, rheumatism or any other bodily disease. In other words, worry is not mere mind or soul malady, commonly conceived, but a bodily disease.

Choice of Terms.

"Have you been indulging in reckless speculation again?"

"How can I tell until I see the stock quotations tomorrow whether it was reckless speculation or prudent investment?"

Tell It Not in Gath.

"Tell it not in Gath" means nowadays "Keep it a secret" and is from the Old Testament. Gath was a Philistine city, but is sometimes used to mean "Judah." The reference is found in II Samuel 1, 20.

Game of Architecture.

"Many mickles make a muckle"

All our public men and leaders agree with increasing strength of conviction that, in the fateful days which lie before us in this sternest year of the war, the food supply is going to be a vital factor in the final decision.

The hour has arrived when the efforts of every man, woman and boy who can help to increase production will count in the scale of victory. The helpful possibilities of back yard gardening are immense. For instance, the Medical Health Officer of Toronto states that there are 2000 acres of available back yard garden space in that city. This space would be sufficient to grow enough vegetables to supply the whole community.

Towns and villages have, as a rule, much larger garden spaces than the crowded and congested large city. Think of the effect upon the high cost of living if every one would grow vegetables! Think of the money saved that would otherwise be spent for vegetables, the labor that would be released for vital war work and the increase of the urgently needed surplus of food for export. Let the slogan for 1917 be,

"A vegetable garden for every home"

The Ontario Department of Agriculture emphasizes the importance of vegetable growing to every one who has even a few square feet of ground. Do not think that your small effort will not be worth while. Every garden, however small, is worth while and will count in this critical year of world wide shortage of food.

The Department invites Horticultural Societies, lodges, school boards, labor unions, etc., to encourage vegetable growing by every one. Parents and guardians are requested to encourage boys and girls to grow vegetables and to give them co-operation.

It is suggested that organizations arrange for addresses on vegetable growing by local expert gardeners. If these be not available, the Department of Agriculture will endeavor to send a speaker. It is urgently requested that applications for speakers be made promptly as the demand for them will be great and the number of available experts is limited.

The Department suggests stimulating interest by forming organizations to offer prizes for best vegetable gardens. Every possible assistance will be given any organization encouraging vegetable production on vacant lots.

Write for free literature giving instructions about implements necessary and methods of preparing the ground and cultivating the crop. A plan of a vegetable garden indicating suitable crop to grow, best varieties and their arrangement in the garden will be sent free of charge to any address.

Write for Poultry Bulletin which tells how to keep hens—the waste from the table in an average home is sufficient to feed them. They are not expensive to keep and you will be highly repaid in fresh eggs.

A HOMEMADE FIRELESS.

A Stout Wooden Box, Old Newspapers and Hay the Chief Requisites.

A fireless cooker is almost a necessity in the up to date kitchen, but the expense is a serious consideration with the young housewife. However, a very satisfactory substitute can be made at virtually no cost and will prove an economical means of boiling and stewing.

Get a wooden box with a hinged lid; line it with newspapers or packing paper; then cover the papers with baize or felt. Cover the lid inside in the same manner. Press enough hay firmly into the bottom of the box to form a compact layer six inches deep. Fill the box with hay, pressing it well against the sides, and make nests for the pans or casseroles you intend to use, leaving a partition of hay between them and a space of six inches between the top of the pots and the box lid. To fill this space you make a mattress-like cushion of baize and fill it tightly with hay. It must fit the top of the box tightly and be six inches thick. See the contents of the pans are absolutely boiling when put in. If opened during cooking they must be reboiled.

You can make easily any kind of stew, of meat, game or poultry, by cooking it over the fire in the usual way for twenty minutes and when boiling putting it into the hay box, covering it with the cushion, shutting up the lid and leaving it six hours. Lentil, pea or mixed vegetable soups require thirty minutes' boiling on the fire and four hours in the hay box. Boiled meat requires thirty minutes' boiling for a small joint and forty-five for one of five pounds and four to five hours in the hay box. Beefsteak pudding requires an hour's steady boiling on the fire and four to five hours in the hay box; suet pudding the same. Soft vegetables, like potatoes, and cereals, like rice, sago, tapioca, macaroni, require five minutes' boiling and one and a half hours in the box. Haricot beans, lentils, carrots, turnips, require twenty minutes' boiling and three hours in the box. Oatmeal porridge can be cooked fifteen minutes on the fire, then left all night in the box and be given five minutes on the fire before serving at breakfast. Any kind of fruit can be stewed in the hay box. It is best to make a sirup of sugar and water, add cloves, lemon or any flavoring liked, bring to the boil, add the fruit and let it simmer ten minutes; put into the cooker and leave three hours. Small fruit takes less time. Any dish that is to be eaten hot must be brought to the boil after taking it out of the hay box before serving.

Childish Modes.

For the very small girl the short one piece smock over bloomers is a favored play costume and is made up in all the sturdier tub stuffs, with touches of smocking, cross stitch, feather stitch or other embroidery or with tiny contrasting binding.

About Pockets.

We are to be "pocketed" the coming season as never before, and who will admit that this fashion feature can fail to please us and inspire in our hearts and minds a very strong and substantial desire for new clothes?

CARRANZA'S NEW BREAK SHOWS HE MAY PROVE A SERIOUS MENACE

PRESIDENT CARRANZA.

It might be easy to overestimate the relative importance of Carranza's note to the government of neutral nations. The Mexican First Chief holds no position in the eyes of the world to justify his assumption that his advice will be heeded by constituted governments when he deliberately urges neutrals to abandon neutrality. There is no likelihood that any Latin-American country or any neutral nation in Europe will waste much time over his suggestion that all shipments of supplies to the European belligerents shall be stopped. That would be an unneutral and provocative action, even if all the belligerents were in the way to avail themselves of supplies shipped from other countries. As the proposed embargo applies only to the Entente Allies, however, the course advised with pompous solemnity by Carranza, it followed, would be in effect an alignment of nations hitherto neutral on the side of Germany against the Allies. Neutrality would disappear.

The text of this futile and impertinent note, with its fine phraseology about high human morals, and "humanitarian sentiments," and especially its characteristic von Bethmann Hollweg touch about stepping "aside a little from the principles of international law," creates chiefly a desire to see the German original. It is perfectly natural that there should be some annoyance in Washington over the incident, in view of the humble treatment Carranza has lately received at the hands of the United States Government. Even as it was despatched, the newly appointed American Ambassador was starting on his journey to the Mexican capital. The forces of General Pershing have been withdrawn from Mexican territory, although the Villistas are as rampant as ever in Chihuahua. The note must be taken as fresh and convincing evidence of active and persistent German intrigue in Mexico. Of that there has been evidence of another sort from time to time, but the American Government has not given sufficient thought to the possibility of mischief-making by Germans in Mexico.

As for Mexico's own share in providing supplies to the Allies, which Carranza now proposes to forego, it consists mainly in the supply of oil fuel to British vessels from the wells at Tampico. Great Britain cannot view the proposed withholding of oil tolerantly in view of the fact that the development of the Mexican fields has been so largely due to English industry, enterprise, and capital. But it is safe to say that the British will continue to get their supplies of oil, unless Carranza manages to lay waste the oil fields and thus destroy one of his country's chief sources of much-needed revenue.

Carranza has played with the American Government so long that Canadians begin to think that Uncle Sam regards patience as a higher virtue than manhood. In his latest effort at diplomacy, his attempt to break into world politics, he has placed the country he essays to govern in pitiful contrast with the other Latin-American republics, with Brazil, Argentina, Bolivia, and Peru.

What America Stands For.

Two vaudeville artists appeared on the stage of a California theatre. Said one to the other, producing a French flag: "What does that stand for?"

Answer: "It stands for liberty, politeness and kindness."

Then, producing a British flag, asked: "What does that stand for?"

Answer: "It stands for justice, liberty, and equal rights to all."

Then, producing an American flag, asked: "What does that stand for?"

Answer: "I do not know, but I do know that it has stood for a good deal in the last two years."

Language of Footprints.

"Among the Indians, the study of human footprints was carried to a fine point. Many of us would be able to say at a glance, 'Here goes So-and-so,' with perfect accuracy. Even the children would recognise instantly the footprint of a stranger from another tribe. It was claimed by some that character may be read from the footprint, just as some white people undertake to read it from the handwriting, on the ground that certain characteristic attitudes and motions of the body, reflecting mental peculiarities, affect the gait and consequently the pedal autograph. At any rate, our people were close readers of character, and I do not hesitate to say that faithful study of the language of footprints in all its details will be certain to develop your insight as well as your powers of observation."—Charles A. Eastman (Ohiyesa), in St. Nicholas.

ORGANIZED LABOR

The object of the organization has not been to precipitate strikes. The leaders of labor say that they realized that they have little chance to achieve anything of permanent value by force. Their only hope lies in legislation and they can do nothing along that line until they get representatives in parliament. At present they have one man, Allan Studholme, in the Legislature, and A. Verville, in the Dominion House.

Want a Minister of Labor

Labor's ambition is to have in the Dominion Cabinet a Minister of Labor of their own choosing. They have settled upon J. J. O'Donoghue of Toronto, who has been their attorney for years. He is the storm centre of the new movement. The Liberals throughout Ontario have considered the case and the local leaders have been taken into the confidence of the Council. They have offered to form an alliance with labor and promise to connive at the election of Mr. O'Donoghue in some safe constituency and to guarantee his appointment as Minister of Labor in the event of Sir Wilfrid Laurier's return to power, labor in return to throw its forces to the Liberal side.

Local Alliance Fails

H. W. Harper, the organizer for Ontario of the Machinists, has been approached and asked if the party which he represents would accept the above pledge, and by way of requittal support R. R. Hall, G. N. Gordon or any other candidate selected by the Liberals.

The offer was refused. In the first place, the Labor men are not satisfied that the Ontario Liberals could make good with their pledge. Sir Wilfrid Laurier would never countenance such an arrangement. The Opposition leader is known to favor Mr. Verville, his compatriot, as Minister of Labor if the Liberals are returned to power. In a recent speech at Montreal Sir Wilfrid said that if he is ever Premier again he will appoint as Minister of Labor a French-Candian who is identified with the Labor movement and who has for several years been a member of the House. Short of mentioning the name of Mr Verville this was all that was required to indicate the Chieftain's choice.

Ontario workingmen will never agree to accept Mr. Verville or any other Quebec man as their representative in the Cabinet. Labor is in the majority in Ontario as compared with any other province in the Dominion and Ontario workingmen believe that this province should be recognized in this appointment.

Mackenzie King Out of It

Mackenzie King, who was Minister of Labor in the Laurier Cabinet, is out of the reckoning even though he has been nominated in an Ontario constituency as a candidate for Parliament. Mr. King has lost caste with the workingmen of Canada since he identified himself with the Rockefeller Foundation and took an active part in adjusting labor disputes in the Colorado mines.

The Local Situation

There was a meeting of workingmen held at the Labor Hall last night and a discussion of the new move was part of the program. A prominent speaker will be brought from Toronto at an early date to address a mass meeting on the advisability of putting an independent candidate in the local field. The dismay with which the Liberals regard the new movement is revealed by their overtures of an alliance. Their promises, however, are rendered of no effort by the circumstance that no less a personage than Sir Wilfrid Laurier has other plans.

One significant feature of the local situation is the fact that President Hartley of the Trades and Labor Council, is an ex-president and now holds the office of secretary of the local Liberal Association.

GOVERNMENT WILL PAY RATE ON LAND VALUE

And 1917 Tax Rate Remains at 28 Mills---Agreement With Quaker Oats Co.---Request for $1000 for One Bathing Beach.

The tax rate for 1917 was finally fixed last night by the city council at 28 mills.

Mayor Duffus informed Ald. Stratton that he had conferred with the Attorney-General in regard to the taxes on the Hydro-Electric property and was assured that the government would pay the rate on the land value.

The chairman of the finance committee then introduced the by-law fixing the rate and it was signed and sealed.

Quaker Oats Co.

Mr. Robert Gordon, vice-President of the Quaker Oats Co., Mr. W. H. Denham and Mr. G. Macdonald met the committee of the whole council last night and discussed the proposed agreement between the city and the Quaker Oats Co. as to the rebuilding of the plant.

The plans for the overhead bridge were discussed and the by-law for submission to the people will be made ready at the earliest moment.

Ask $1,000 for Beach

The City Council at its special meeting last night received three communications, one from S. H. Mitchell pointing out the disadvantages of a free market so far as Peterboro was concerned, one from the town clerk of Lindsay endorsing the city's resolution regaring increased poll tax, and one from C. N. Meserve asking the council to make a grant of $1,000 for one bathing beach.

Street Lights

The fire, water and light committee will consider new street lights on Parnell, Chamberlain, Sherbrooke St. and Driscoll Terrace.

Ald. Taylor brought the necessity for them to the attention of the city council last night.

Pay Your Taxes

Pay your back taxes at once or Tax Collector Green will be after you hard. The city council last night ordered the 1916 roll to be returned not later than April 15. There are several thousand dollars of taxes past due.

A REMARKABLE ACHIEVEMENT.

Elsewhere in today's issue will be found a reproduction of the new building of the "SALADA" Tea Company, now nearing completion in Boston, Mass. Every modern convenience for the cleanly and speedy packing of tea is being installed.

It speaks eloquently for the popularity of "SALADA" Tea in the United States, when it is claimed that this new "SALADA" building will be the largest in the world devoted entirely to product of the Ceylon and India tea gardens. Those interested in the romantic history of the tea trade should write to SALADA TEA COMPANY, TORONTO, for their little book entitled "The Story of the Tea Plant," for which there is no charge.

GERMAN BREAD LINES PLAN FOR REBELLION

Ominous Upheavals in Germany Cleverly Hidden From Britain—Neutral Correspondents Gagged

D. Thomas Curtin, the United States writer, who spent ten months in Germany in 1916 for British papers, wrote as follows: The feeling of German women of the lower classes seems to rise and fall in curves, changing apparently about every three months. There was a great curve of rebellious talk, food talk and peace talk, in July, of 1916. Immediately following the Somme offensive, the losses in which were not known for some weeks, but which trickled through gradually, there began the agitation for the great munition strike which was to have taken place on August 1, 1916. The dimensions of this proposed rising [illegible] m to have been effectually con[illegible]d by the German censorship. I found very little about it in the English newspapers which reached Berlin, but what I did read were isolated fragments, [illegible] as the Kaiser's appeal to the people on August 1, 1916, which, if it be referred to, will be found to [illegible] a special appeal to the workers. No one in England seems to know about this important movement.

Machine Guns Very Busy

What happened was that there was a significant movement of machine guns to all points of danger, such as the Moabit district of Berlin and Spandau, together with countless warnings against so-called "Anarchists." The German Government went through a period of anxiety, and the story, if I had space here to tell it, is one of intense dramatic interest. Casual visitors to Berlin hotels knew nothing of the subject. The interned American and other neutral correspondents dare not say a word about it, and this great suppressed upheaval has passed away for a time with other incidents of the war that have been so effectively gagged.

In the Bread Line

The notices summoning semi-revolutionary meetings are whispered from mouth to mouth by the women, standing in the food lines, waiting for their potatoes, morning bread, half-pound of meat weekly, and the other ticketed supplies, for the war has produced among the lower third of the population of women a distinctly revolutionary feeling. These women do not pay the attention they formerly did to the bell ringings and flag displays which were ordered by the Government on every possible occasion, such as the safe arrival of the submarine Deutschland at Baltimore, its return to Bremen, and the first success against Roumania.

DUEL OVER RAEMAEKERS

Pro-German Aggressor Killed In Hot Blooded Spain

Prominence is given in Spanish newspapers to an account of a fatal duel about M. Raemaekers' cartoons. Professor Vincente Gay, a violent pro-German and a great admirer of Teutonic Kultur, protested against the exhibition of M. Raemaekers' works. He used highly offensive expressions in discussing the matter with Senor Iglesias Hermida, the organizer of the exhibition, who demanded an explanation. The professor said that the question could be settled only by arms. He named his seconds, one of whom was a German officer.

The duel was fought with swords after the severest conditions had been drawn up. Professor Gay flung himself on his opponent. The combat was so violent that two pairs of swords were broken in the first round. During a pause the seconds advised Senor Gay to be less furious, but he replied that he wanted to kill Senor Hermida. The duel was resumed, Senor Hermida remaining on the defensive. Senor Gay rushed upon him with increased fury. The defender, a very able swordsman, was able to ward off the blows, and at last, weary of parrying his opponents' wild rushes, he thrust at him and pierced his throat. Senor Gay died eight hours later.

WOMEN IN CANTEENS

Where Manual Labor For the Cause is Honored

Miss Jennings, who has been working in a canteen for over two years, says that the work is extremely hard and a real sacrifice by women accustomed to luxurious homes and a life of ease. "Some of them," she said, "come to the canteens at midnight and work until eight o'clock in the morning. They used to work in four-hour shifts, the night shift finishing at 4 a.m., but they found it was impossible to get home at that hour, especially as so many families have given up motor cars. When there is a big rush of soldiers the work becomes a great strain.

"In the canteen it is an honor to be looked upon as a good washer-up. That is quite true of all the canteens I have worked in, and the women not only hand out cups of coffee—they do the rough work of scrubbing the floors and working over the hot stoves. A professional charwoman is only engaged to scrub the kitchen floor and to scour the stove."

CANNOT STAY REJECTED

Enlisted at Twenty-Third Attempt—Answer Motherland's Call

A well known Fleet Street newspaper man was prospecting near the Yukon, and, although middle-aged and married, he travelled post-haste back to England to enter the Flying Corps, and has since won his commission. Private E. Gard, one of General Botha's victorious army, is a wonderful example of patriotism to faint-hearted slackers. He gave up a post of manager in one of the biggest stores in South Africa, which was worth $10,000 a year, to join the army and receive a shilling a day.

An extraordinary case was that of Charles Davies, the younger son of Mr. Davies, the parish clerk at Bangor, who at the outbreak of the war enlisted in the Royal Welsh Fusiliers. He was discharged owing to a physical defect. Not to be daunted, he enlisted in the R.A.M.C., and was again discharged. Not discouraged, entered a Liverpool hospital and underwent a serious operation. After leaving the hospital, his legs were encased in plaster and irons for several weeks, but he ultimately succeeded in enlisting in the West Lancashire R.A.M.C.

Instances of this kind can be multiplied indefinitely. One man came over from South Africa who had lately been accepted after twenty-two attempts to join; another underwent a painful operation; a third went in for a course of physical training so that his chest measurement should be increased to the stipulated number of inches, which proves that the call to the old flag is irresistible to the men who form the backbone of the Empire.

GLIMPSES OF BATTLE

A Member of the Canadian Trench Mortar Battery Writes

This morning I passed an officer of this battalion on his way back to the front line. His tunic was covered with blood, a bandage was around his jaw, and his face was very dirty. Do you know why? An hour or so previously a shell killed a sergeant-major, who fell into this officers arms. A second shell immediately followed, and whizzed by just in front of the officer's face, cutting his chin. But he got it bandaged up and immediately went back into the line, to stick it out for another day.

The sergeant-major was a wonder. This morning he did wonders with the company—cheered them up and held them together as few people could do. It was an awful stretch of line they were in—a mere excuse for a trench, and they were under a gruelling shell fire. The sergeant-major was the soul of the lot, they said. He held them together before he went, and he still held them after. "The finest soldier in the battalion," a sergeant told me. But they are all fine.

THE SOLDIERS' CREED

"To Suffer and Not to Complain," Said Moderator

"To suffer and not to complain seems to be part of the soldiers' creed," said the Rev. John Brown, Moderator of the Church of Scotland, speaking of the wounded. He had just returned from a visit to the front at the invitation of the Commander-in-Chief.

"The men are magnificent," said Dr. Brown. "The honor of the country is safe with them. We shall never forget how we saw them returning from the trenches covered with mud, but also with glory. We shall never forget how we saw them go to the trenches with uplifted head and swinging tread.

"I went," he added, "to strike the [illegible] note, and I found that the men had not forgotten the worship of their fathers. To those who are right atmosphere for the return of these men, but they will make their religious out there, religion is very real. We are told we must make a own atmosphere."

CHILDREN'S TOYS.

Lessons Learned In Play Leave an Everlasting Impression Upon Character.

A child's play is really its most important business, for in it the exercise necessary for the growing body is obtained, and at the same time lessons are learned which leave an everlasting impress on the character. For this reason it seems almost incomprehensible that any mother should be satisfied to provide her children with toys that vitiate its good taste or by a too complete mechanism deprive their owner of the joy of achievement, the necessity of using his or her quick wittedness or imagination.

There is no need to give a baby one of those repulsively ugly rag dolls with staring eyes and distorted features when there are lovely, cuddly bunny rabbits with bright colored coats and dear, soft little doggies which can be held in their little master's arms as he goes off to the by-by land, and these pretty toys will be cultivating his sense of proportion and artistic truth and at the same time giving him a soft corner in his heart for his four footed neighbors.

From Japan comes a very complete set of doll's furniture which would delight any small homemaker. It is cut out of a solid block of Wang Yung wood and can be reassembled into a block again by the use of a little patience and ingenuity, a fact that makes it a most instructive toy, carrying out the Montessori game of solids in a more advanced and more interesting form.

Another fascinating toy which would bring joy to any little boy and to a good many girls is a carpenter's blue apron with a wide pocket, in which there is a very complete set of diminutive tools, and for the more domesticated wee lady there is a doll's dressmaking outfit put up in an attractive box.

With toys such as these, not to mention the better known games in which many can take part, a child can at a very small cost be taught to educate itself unconsciously, learning lessons that are of far greater value for after life than many of those given in the classroom.

To Clean Feather Pillows.

Feathers that have lain for any length of time in pillows should be washed. To do the work in the best possible manner open one corner of the pillow and pour boiling water in upon the feathers. This makes them a wet mass, and they are much more easily handled. Remove them and then wash them thoroughly with soap and water, being careful to rinse them in several waters. Then put them back into the washed cover and hang in the sun where they will dry and be light and fluffy. In this way none of the feathers are lost.

Baked Indian Pudding.

Scald one quart of milk in a double boiler, stir in gradually five tablespoonfuls of granulated Indian meal and cook twenty minutes. Add three tablespoonfuls of butter, one cupful of molasses, one teaspoonful of salt, one and one-half teaspoonfuls of cinnamon, one-half teaspoonful of ginger and two beaten eggs. Turn into a buttered dish, pour one cupful of cold milk over the top and bake about one hour.

SUBSCRIPTIONS FOR BELGIAN RELIEF FUND

All Pledges Should Be Paid Befoer Annual Meeting Early in April.

At a recent meeting of the executive committee of the Belgian Relief Fund the collectors reported that the monthly subscriptions were being well met by the subscribers. However, there are still a number who have not yet paid their subscriptions in full. As the annual meeting is to be held early in April it is desired by the executive that all pledges should be fully paid before such meeting. In order to allow time for posting the many accounts, subscribers are asked to hand the balance of their subscriptions to their collector, or to the treasurer, Mr. V. Eastwood, at the Royal Bank, not later than Thursday, April 5th.

A number of subscribers to this worthy fund have requested that another canvass be taken or that the subscribers of the past year be asked to continue their subscriptions. This matter will be decided at the annual meeting, the date of which will be announced later.

MAYOR DUFFUS AND F.H.D. SEE SIGHTS OF NEW YORK

(By F. H. D.)

The Mayor and I were in New York. No, that is not exactly right. The Mayor was in New York, and I was with him. That's better, and besides, shows appreciation of position. We must never forget the in New York. amenities of life. Anyway, we were

We had gone into the big municipal building, where the more important activities of the city are housed, and had an interesting talk with Superintendent Fire Chief Kenney, and asked his opinion and advice as to what was best to do in the resuscitation of a fire-fighting equipment that needed some injection of modern system and machines. He dispensed freely and sensibly. His city pays him $25,000 a year to be sensible. We shared in the general effulgence of his knowledge.

Coming out of the building, I lingered a few minutes to ask the floor-walker, who was pacing the rotunda, where one could go to see the ships of the German fleet tied up at dock. He told me to get up on the Metropolitan Life tower and view the scenery. Coming out I found the Mayor standing at the edge of the sidewalk, with a Canadian eye open to collision with and by the hurrying throng and looking fixedly at the top of the tower.

"Whist, Mayor," I said; "don't do that. You'll get a crick in the back of your neck. Besides, the best families don't do it any longer. It's not good form—it's not done, you know."

"If it isn't," said the Mayor, "just tell me what the best families do and practice."

"They go up on top of the tower," I replied, "and look down."

"Look down is right," said the Mayor. "Let's go."

Paddled and Bumped.

We crossed the street and paddled and bumped through the current around the corner of the block that splits the mass of cars, hacks, trucks and people into two definite streams. A safety first passage across the street and we walked into the main hall of the big Metropolitan Life building. Anyone with even small appreciation of decorative architecture must stop and look at the wealth and design of execution as displayed. The ceilings are particularly vivid in a wealth of dark blue, crimson and gold. Blazing in panels of ornate tracery and yet with a quiet elegance that marked a repressive hand. The motif is distinctly Moorish, the designs filched, I fancy, from that store house of best of Moorish art, the Alhambra. Wonderfully interesting, and a fine example of what a diligent and capable insurance company with a treasury of other people's money can accomplish when it really tries.

We found a pirate standing guard at the nearest elevator. It was marked "express." "That," said the Mayor, "expresses my opinion. Likewise my haste." The blue-coated man separated us from fifty cents apiece, propelled us into the cage, where we were packed, with others, as tight as herrings in a barrel, and we began to rise in the world. Fifty-seven stories, same as the varieties. The usual and decent formality of gentlemen removing hats was dispensed with. One couldn't get one's arms plucked out and up, so tightly were the inmates wedged. Standing room only, and mighty little of it at that. The trip upwards took a couple of minutes, and we were unpacked and distributed along a narrow corridor, and ushered to a second elevator to make the final ascent. The platform reached, the whole of New York was ours.

The first impression is that one has seen it before. That is because the view has been photographed and printed in the illustrated sections of the Sunday papers time after time. So at first glance there was a semblance of familiarity. The salient features of the city—the parks, the bridges, skyscrapers, the two rivers girding the city on either side. To the south, the expanse of the bay, with the bronze Liberty standing sentinel. Over at a point, to which an advising arm directed attention, was a huddle of red and yellow funnels, showing over the roofs of the warehouses that covered the docks and piers. These funnels were of the German passenger and freight fleet, tied up and silent, because of Britain's might and control of the seas. Almost so far as vision could discern was a mass of buildings, the hives of the population of the great city.

Presently, what appeared like a gigantic centipede came crawling around the corner of a street, winding its sinuous length as it moved along. Only one of the trains on the "L" and of which scores could be picked out in motion. At the height the roar of the traffic was hushed. Down on the pavements, toy automobiles moved and crawled about. Figures of what we knew were men and women moved along and across the streets. Here and there a tree showed itself against the openings of the traffic. The whole combination of cars and people looked as if one had lifted the figures and objects out of the old familiar Noah's ark and placed them about, and looked at them from an elevation or while standing on a kitchen table. And yet these small mites were the heart and soul of New York.

Return to Earth.

The gale of wind blowing in from the sea made it bitterly cold, though of a warm summer's day it would have been interesting enough to beguile a couple of hours. We left it and came down to the floor of the hall and out on to the sidewalk, pleased to have seen the sight and willing to remember. The Mayor proposed going back to the hotel for dinner. On reflection the hotel was found to be five miles away and the cars were seen to be crowded. The variety of street cars moving up and down Broadway is constructed with the front and rear couples of wheels of standard size. The pairs in between are smaller. This arrangement enables the floors of the cars to be brought down much nearer the pavement than those used in Peterborough. Quite convenient, and, we were told, a concession to the tight skirt period.

We moved along, looking for an enticing sort of place in which to eat. Glancing at the window signs, as one will do when walking the streets of a strange place. Presently the eye caught sight of a sort of sub-basement entrance, with a name in queer letters over the door. Two or three steps down from the level of the pavement was the entrance. A glance inside showed long shelves, broad at the bottom and receding to the top, in a kind of pyramid effect, and all piled with foods laid out in alluring display. The whole thing looked hopeful. We made to go in. "Hold on," said the Mayor. "This is some sort of a Jew place. What does that sign say?" "Blamed if I know," was the reply. "It's Yiddish. Who cares, so long as we get filled up? We may find Abe Potash or Morris Perlmutter in here for all we know. Let's take a chance."

In Good Company.

The long and low room was crammed full of men. Most of these had their mouths full. Almost all standing up at holders and shelves and eating as if dear life were at a premium. Seemed from their attire to be of the broker and business class. Such snaps of remark as were discernible in the general hum were of stocks and bonds and money transactions. From this we inferred that the place was respectable, and that we, being distinguished visitors from across the border, were in good company. Had to walk the length of the room, say about eighty feet, to find a place to stand and look about. Presently a couple of seats at a low table were vacated, and we dropped into the chance. Further waiting. Evidently these people did not appreciate our distinguished patronage. Presently I caught hold of a boy and told him to bring something to eat. "Can't do it," he replied; "I'm not allowed to." "Son," he was told, "your usefulness, so far as this ranch is concerned, is gone. Get your time and pay and get out." He grinned and slipped away. It was plain that if we wanted to be fed that we'd have to feed ourselves.

I asked a man, who passed and lingered a minute in so doing, if anything would be served. He gasped out an enquiry as to what we wanted, and, on being told "something in the meat line to start in on," pointed to a hole in the wall. Out of this hole a fair to middling good-looking girl was watching the crowd. We moved over and proffered a request for two portions of roast meat. The girl nodded, touched a button sticking up on a board at hand, and before one could say Jack Robinson a shelf shot out and thumped the Mayor at about the waist line. On the shelf were two plates with meat, sliced, and a spat of mustard along the edge. "This," said the Mayor, "is so sudden. But let us take what is sent."

Collecting the Grub.

We carried the meat to the table and set out to collect other edibles. The Mayor went off and I saw him prowling along a fringe of shelves loaded with pies of surprising depth and finished off with a sort of white foam. These the Mayor shied away from. Too ethereal for him. I lost sight of him as he ambled up the room, but presently returned with a handful of round cakes, each with a whole in the middle, some bread, a snack of butter and a quarter section of apple pie. I skirmished about and secured a few trifles, including two fat biscuits, three doughnuts, and the inevitable pie, and something that looked like a fritter. This last concoction, I found out later, was a delusion and a snare. It is ever risky to experiment. On the table was a printed slip that looked like a subscription list. This we paid no attention to. It was, however, a list of prices.

When we had eaten and drank we prepared to depart. No one, so far, had even hinted at money. We were as much alone and unnoticed as if stranded on an island in the Pacific ocean. I never saw such financial indifference. But someone might be watching for all that. So with our coats on arm—for one must not in strange quarters appear as if ready to make a dash for the door—we were told to go over to a certain corner and find a man who would accept money. We did so. He was sitting at what looked like a combination of street organ and phonograph. A stream of men walked past, paid something, laid down a coin or coins. He nodded, twisted a handle and dropped the money into a sort of hopper. It was neatness personified.

I said, "What will I give you to straighten up?" He replied, "You know." "Blamed if I do," I said. "You know what you have eaten." I had to make a mental calculation of the viands I had absorbed and ran the chance of leaving something out But I managed to make a sporting list, and he said, "Thirty cents." The money was paid, and, with a flourish of the crank, went down the hopper.

No Questions Asked.

By this time the Mayor had come into the running and arrived. He had stopped en route to view the charms of a specially brown and appetizing goose, lying on its back, ready for the knife. "Don't let him stick you," the Mayor breathed, in very much more of a subdued tone than he uses at a meeting of the Property Committee. "He isn't, Mayor," I replied. "This man is a public benefactor. You pay what you like, or rather for what you have eaten." The Mayor had to make a mental memo of his own consumption, and reached the conclusion, after a couple of offers, that he had consumer about thirty-five cents' worth. The statement was accepted and the money paid.

"See here, friend," I asked, "how much money do you lose from time to time Do you say that anyone can come in here, eat how and what he likes, tell you it is so much, and you accept the statement and the cash? If so, this is a new one to me."

"That's our plan and practice," he replied. "No gentleman would come in here, eat, and go away without paying. Also, no one would be mean for a few cents. True, occasionally a man will forget, but he always pays up afterwards. Only last week I had a man send forty-five cents from New Orleans that he had not paid when going out."

This was information. You see, we were rather flattered, that is the Mayor and I. Observe the "gentleman." We were right in our class, of course. Recognized on the spot And deferred to in such respect. Asked for a further explanation, the grinder of the cash crank said:

"You see, when we get rid of the—(grind or crank) — expensive orchestra, and the fancy finger bowls —'nother grind and a batch of coins slip down the chute)—we cut off a heap of expense. Then we have no waiters—(four or five spasmodic twists and more money)—only two or three to keep the shelves supplied. All extras have been clipped off. (A spell of furious grinding, as quite a crowd was going out.) Look here!"

A Bin of Silver.

He pulled a key from his pocket, unlocked what proved to be a sort of of bin in the bottom of the contrivance, and, sakes alive! there were about a gallon of quarters and half dollars in the thing. "That has been taken since a little after ten this morning."

We came away, rather puzzled. Because the prices of the food served at this place seemed ridiculously low, considering that the rent, as the man said, was $10,000 a year. At the same time, across on the East Side, wherever that is, women were raiding the push-carts in a frenzied protest against the excessive prices asked for potatoes and such foods

Opposition Encountered.

A block or two along the street and we came to an old stone church, one of the few remaining local landmarks, nad treasured accordingly. Looking through the iron fence surrounding, we could see many stones, some upright and many flat on the turf, that is, on such turf as there was. We went in through a gate and looked at the inscriptions on a few. Presently a policeman, one of the very finest, poked his head through the fence and asked us what we were doing there. This enquiry should have been wholly unnecessary. He could see what we were at. I replied that I was looking for some of my ancestors. He said I was looking in the worng place. I came back at him and replied that I knew I shouldn't lok down but upwards. This sparkling bit of repartee incensed him, and he waived his club and told us to come out anyway, and we retreated with due decorum. Made what the Germans call a discretionary retreat. Let in to the front of the church building was a stone panel, the text of which stated that underneath was buried the body of the American General Montgomery, who led the invasion and who held the occupation of Montreal in 1776. Afterwards, in walking along Notre Dame street, in Montreal, I called the attention of the Mayor to a brass medallion set in the wall of an old stone building at the corner of St. Denis street. The building was the identical one in which General Montgomery held and made his headquarters while in command at Montreal, in the long ago.

March Weather Rheumatic Weather

Victims Can Cure Themselves With Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

With the coming of March people who are afflicted with rheumatism begin to have unpleasant reminders of their trouble. The weather is changeable—balmy and springlike one day, raw, cold and piercing the next. It is such sudden changes of weather that sees the pangs and tortures of rheumatism, lumbago and sciatica going But it must be borne in mind that although weather conditions start the pains, the trouble is deeply rooted in the blood, and can only be cured through the blood. All the lotions and liniments in the world can't cure rheumatism. Rubbing may seem to ease the pain while you are rubbing, but there its value ends. Only through the blood can you cure rheumatism. That's why Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have so many thousands of cures of this trouble to their credit. The new, rich blood which they actually make drives out the poisonous acid and rheumatism is vanquished. Among many sufferers from rheumatism who have been cured by this medicine is Mr. C. H. McGee, freight shed foreman for the G. T. R. at Peterborough, who says:—"In the course of my work I am naturally exposed to all kinds of weather, with the result that about two years ago I contracted rheumatism which settled in my legs. At times I could scarcely walk, and often had to quit my day's work owing to the stiffness and the pain I tried different remedies without getting any help until I began the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I used six boxes of these and can say that I am about as well as ever I was. I still take the pills occasionally, and I hope that my experience may be of benefit to some other rheumatic sufferer."

If you suffer from rheumatism, or any other disease of the blood, begin to cure yourself to-day with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Sold by all medicine dealers, or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

TO CONVALESCENT HOME

Corp George Lighthart and Pte. Bruce Clark left this afternoon for Kingston to report at the convalescent home.

HOME SOCIETY

When a Home Economics Society is organized, its members agree to meet regularly either at the homes of each other or at a regular meeting place in the community. Through these meetings they are able to plan together for the upbuilding of the whole neighbourhood. The society meeting makes a pleasant break in the regular routine of the home. It enables its members to meet each other oftener, to exchange ideas, and to become better acquainted—all of which tends to foster enthusiasm and pride in the community.

Just how to organize is sometimes a problem, but a bulletin entitled 'Home Economics Handbook,' gives all the necessary information. It is Extension Bulletin No. 6, of the Manitoba Department of Agriculture. Rules are given for electing officers, voting, keeping the 'minutes' of a meeting, and other necessary machinery of a society.

Advice too is given, in this instance intended primarily for the women of Manitoba, for arranging for short courses in dressmaking, millinery, cookery and home nursing, and other subjects; in short, as the pamphlet says, "planning for better homes, better schools, better health, better roads, better farms and better laws."

During the past year over two hundred co-operative short courses were held in Manitoba in connection with the Home Economics Societies, lasting from one week to ten days. Winter weather makes it necessary that these should be at points close to railway lines, but during June, July and August, an effort is made to reach more distant parts. An expert demonstrator is sent by the Extension Service.

MARKET PRICES

Bad roads kept many farmers from coming into the city this morning and those that did get in regretted the journey. As a result, the market was not as large as expected.

Eggs were in only fair supply and the price ran round 33c, with quite a few lots selling at 30c.

Butter was about the same as last week—43c to 45c.

Fowl were very scarce and the few that were offered were not of the choicest, but were quickly grabbed up.

Prices for dressed meats remained unchanged with several lots being offered.

The auctioneers got rid of several lots of household goods at fair prices.

Considerable interest is being taken in the horse sale here next Wednesday.

An Old Voyageur.

One of the few remaining links in the past was severed last week when Narcisse Marion, a French half-breed, who has been living near Red Deer, Alberta, for the last thirty years, quietly passed away at the age of 68 years. He came from Manitoba in the early eighties, and was well known to the old timers in Central Alberta, and to know him was a real pleasure. He was truly representative of the "Voyageurs" referred to by Whittier in his poem, "The Red River Voyageur," and to know him intimately was to respect him abundantly. Perhaps in the stillness of the night, around the camp fire, he would give you a glimpse of his beliefs in simple, and quaint language. Nor were they very complex or intricate, for he would say that, in substance, he thought that a man who was honest and truthful and kind was living the life that the Great Spirit demanded and his life was more largely governed by his belief than perhaps some are influenced by a much more involved theology. He had a great kind heart, was courageous and determined, and possessed a native dignity which never, under any circumstance, failed him.

Rhodes Scholar Serving.

Captain W. Burton Hurd, B.A., now serving in France with the Western Canadian Infantry Brigade as Y.M.C.A. officer, has been chosen Rhodes Scholar for Manitoba for 1917. He is the sixth Manitoba Rhodes Scholar now on active service. He was born at Brockville, and received his common and High school education at Toronto.

Icebergs sometimes last as long as 200 years before they melt entirely away.

His Pride.

"What's the matter with the waiter?"

"I mistook him for a guest, and he didn't like it."

Dead Stars.

The dead stars probably outnumber the living stars by many, it may be millions, to one.

Experience.

Experience is a keen knife that hurts while it extracts the cataract that blinds.—De Linod.

Balm of Gilead.

Balm of Gilead is costly, for the balm bush yields only a few drops a day in the tapping season.

Unpleasant Criticism.

Mrs. De Style (exhibiting picture)—You know, my daughter paints from nature. Critic—Far from it, it seems.

Artificial Cinnabar.

That wonderful people, the Chinese, made artificial cinnabar long before Europe was a civilized country.

STRENGTH OF INSECTS

Prodigious Muscular Development of of Tiny Creatures

The insects are provided with muscles of enormous power as compared with men. If a fly be held by the wings it can pick up and carry a match, and this is as if a man were able to pick up a beam 28 feet long by 15½ inches square.

An ordinary little ant can pull eight matches on rollers, which would equal a load of 330 beams the size of a man when its weight is compared with that of a horse.

The flea jumps 200 times its own height, which is about the same as if a man were to jump over the nearly thousand-foot high Eiffel tower.

An oyster opposes being opened by exerting a force of over 30 pounds, and for a man to show the same power he would have to take up 80 large locomotives and bear them Atlas-like upon his shoulders.

From a purely physical point of view man is the weakest of animals. It is only by the use of his mind and the application of the laws of mechanics in the machinery he has invented that he has been able to dominate the world.

A Record Size Ditch

A long marsh drain, believed to be the longest one of its kind in western Ontario, was completed at a cost of $50,000, which includes bridges. The drain starts at the eighth concession, Malden township, and extends to the Canard River, a distance of eight and three-quarter miles. It is 45 feet wide at the top and 30 feet at the bottom. Its average depth is six feet.

CANADIAN FLAX STRAW

Useful as Basis for Paper Industry, Expert Finds

The Canadian Pacific Railway Company have not waited for the Government's Commissioner Arthur D. Little, a paper mill chemist of Boston, to investigate the problem of making paper from flax straw. He has demonstrated the feasibility of this special industry in a preliminary report to the company. He shows that straw board can be made cheaply, and that a sort of straw lumber, suitable for walls and partitions in houses might be produced at a price as low as $5 or $6 a ton. He is not enthusiastic as to the manufacture of linen, for the reasons already mentioned, which are appreciated by those who have had the longest experience in this industry, but as a paper-making material flax fibre has without doubt a great future.

Samples Mr. Little has sent to United States paper mills—which produce fine linen papers, including paper specially made for printing bank notes—have been very favorably reported on, and these manufacturers are prepared to follow up these experiments. The strength, quality and color of these samples are very satisfactory, and it may be added that prices for such fine papers range from $150 to $200 a ton, while in normal times, before the war, the prices were from $100 to $140 or more per ton.

Given favorable transportation rates the utilization of flax straw in the Canadian West would not only mean a new source of income for the prairie farmers, where for the last thirty years there has been a lamentable loss but it would mean a new series of native industries based on the products of these farms and giving a new and wide range and variety to the paper export trade, which it could not attain in any other way.

MINERAL RESOURCES

A Marvellous Deposit of Sulphide in Northern Manitoba

Approximately ninety miles north of The Pas, in the region of Schist and Flin Flon lakes is a marvellous deposit of sulphide ore, remarkable not only for its richness in copper and gold. The people of Manitoba have not yet realized the great wealth that lies buried in the soil of their province. When Manitoba ceased to be the "Postage Stamp Province" it became something more than a province of greater bounds. The addition of "New Manitoba" or the "Added Territory" made Manitoba a maritime province, with a seaboard on Hudson's Bay, shortly to be reached by the Hudson's Bay Railway, extending from The Pas to Port Nelson, the provincial resources were known to be increased by great areas of timber and agricultural lands, by almost unlimited water powers, by a rich fur trade and by thousands of lakes teeming with fish, but it was not recognized that the 178,000 square miles of virgin territory was destined to furnish one of the great mineral fields in the world.

Need Grit With Oats

While it is best at all times to have good, sharp grit constantly before the fowls, it is especially important that grit be supplied when feeding whole oats so that the husks of the oats, which are very tough and unyielding, will be properly ground. With plenty of sharp grit there is no danger attending oat feeding, although the safest rule is to first soak the oats for an hour in water so that they may become more softened.

In planting sweet corn it must be remembered that too close proximity of ordinary field corn may result in cross-fertilization.

Gas Price Raised

KITCHENER, March 23—Owing to the increase in the price of coal and gas oil the Light Commission announced today that the price of gas will be advanced until further notice from $1 to $1.15 per thousand, and that a minimum rate of 50¢ per month has been fixed.

Keep up the Food Supply and Help Make Victory Sure

"I AM assured that my people will respond to every call necessary to the success of our cause—with the same indomitable ardour and devotion that have filled me with pride and gratitude since the war began."
HIS MAJESTY KING GEORGE

OUR soldiers must be fed; the people at home must be fed. And—in spite of Germany's murderous campaign to cut off the Allies' Food supply, by sinking every ship on the High Seas—an ample and unfailing flow of food to England and France must be maintained.

This is National Service—
Not to the Farmer only—
But to YOU—to everybody—
This appeal is directed

WE must unite as a Nation to SERVE—to SAVE and to PRODUCE. Men, women and children; the young, the middle aged and the old—all can help in the Nation's Army of Production.

EVERY pound of FOOD raised, helps reduce the cost of living and adds to the Food Supply for Overseas.

PLANT a garden—small or large. Utilize your own back yard. Cultivate the vacant lots. Make them all yield food.

WOMEN of towns can find no better or more important outlet for their energies than in cultivating a vegetable garden.

MARKET TOLLS, STONE THAT HAS BLOCKED FURTHER PROGRESS OF THE CITY

Address by T. C. Elliot Before Trades and Labor Council.

The merchants of Peterborough interested in the management of the market and in the general questions affecting the welfare of the city, by invitation met the Trades and Labor Council in their hall on Wednesday last.

Mr. T. C. Elliot explained the views of the merchants, which were afterwards endorsed by the merchants present, among those being Mr. Ross, representing Messrs Rich. Hall and Son, Mr. Caldwell, manager Messrs. Turnbull Co., Mr. E. F. Mason, Mr. R. J. Kidd, Messrs. R Neill Co., Mr. R. Fair, Mr H. Cressman, and Mr. Hall, president of the Board of Trade.

Mr. T. C. Elliot's address was in part as follows —

Mr. Chairman: We thank you for your invitation to confer with you on the questions affecting the interests of the city and for the courteous reception you have just accorded us.

Our president, Mr. Barrie, regrets very much that he is unable to be present at this time. This week he is in New York. In coming here to discuss these questions with you we feel that we can stand on common ground. We have no selfish end in view and no axe to grind, and together we can work for the general welfare of the city of which we are all so justly proud.

When we advocate the removal of the tolls on the market we feel that we are just trying to remove another stone that has for some time blocked the further progress of our city. Some say that the market in that event would prove altogether too small to accommodate the market business. I may say that that is just the end for which we are working. A greater market would be advantageous to both buyer and seller. The law of supply and demand would work well for the citizen and the farmer would find an inexhaustible outlet for his produce.

The small pin-pricks of tolls, the revenue from which are not of great moment to the city but are very annoying to the farmer. Perhaps the greatest deterrent to the growth of the market is the presence of a uniformed police constable. The citizens of Peterborough are so accustomed to the police that they do not pay much attention to them, not more than they do to any other man on the street. But to the ladies of the country, who have hazy ideas about the authority of a constable, his presence does not tend toward a more numerous attendance.

Use Common Sense

We would advocate that a market clerk in plain clothes take the place of the constable, and that convenient means be furnished so that both seller and purchaser could quickly ascertain the weight of any article, and that only necessary rules be followed with regard to the business of the market and these these rules be administered with that scarcest of commodities, common sense.

In days gone by there were toll gates on many roads, in some less progressive parts they are still to be seen. These toll gates were a hindrance to the free movement of the people. Greater experience and a keener intelligence has largely done away with them. And in time hindrances to business on the market will also be removed.

And not only do we wish to have the hindrances removed but we would like to see it made pleasant for the farmer to come here and do business with us. Provide them with outside cover and a ladies' waiting room with accommodations, and, above all, do not meet them with suspicion. There are some, not many I am pleased to say, pessimistic people who seem to think that most people are not honest. On the contrary, the great majority of our people are honorable men and women.

We have perhaps about twenty-two thousand people in Peterborough and out of that number only about two hundred know anything about the police court. This is certainly a very small percentage of the whole.

And we know something about the people who live in the country. They are every whit as honest and straightforward as are the people who live in the city.

You all know that when a farmer's wife cuts off a pound of butter she does it in all good faith; it is well known that butter will get lighter by evaporation, and after evaporation there is no less butter there, even though it may weigh a fraction of an ounce less. Let us use common sense in dealing with this matter. And, sir, it is also our hope to form with you and the Board of Trade a Welfare Committee, whose duty it will be to exercise a careful scrutiny over the various questions affecting the city. True, at the mayor's meeting a short time ago, some such committee was talked of, but a committee that may be launched by a public meeting and that has no connection with the various bodies in the city, can never be representative of our needs.

We would advocate that you appoint a strong representation which, with representatives from the board of trade and from the Merchants' Association, would form an active Welfare Committee. This body would be of great benefit to the city.

When we address you we know that we are addressing men who are well capable of considering and deciding upon these matters. We have only to consider the wonderful machines that are now doing the work of the world with almost human intelligence, to look around at the stately edifices that adorn our streets. The men who make these must be men of a high standard of intelligence. With confidence we bring these matters for your consideration.

More particularly at this time do we need a Welfare Committee. The government of our city is almost in the hands of irresponsible bodies. Should any great question arise, it is almost impossible at the present time to reflect the popular desire in the city council. Only one-half of our aldermen appear for re-election each year. Half of our aldermen are always representative of the opinions of our people of two years ago. No city can progress satisfactorialy with this handicap.

Nearly every citizen of Peterborough never fails to marvel why one of the very best locations was given to the railway. The land on the border of the river, to the east of Simcoe Street, would have been an ideal spot for a market square and perhaps also for an exhibition ground and now, owing to the lack of a welfare committe in the past, we can only look at this location and think of what might have been. And again, we are told that the council was offered the Burleigh Falls power for the sum of $5,000. They could not see it, and now today if they were to try to purchase it the price would probably be about $700,000. And too little attention is paid to the great spending body of our city, the Board of Education. The Board of Education deserves our gratitude for their very capable work, but why not take an interest and supervision over the body that spends so much of our money. Observe them, criticize them and praise them when they deserve it.

The Police Commission

And our Police Commission. This is purely a bureaucratic body. The citizens seem to have no control over them whatever. At the present time there is a question of great important before the city. The merchants have not discussed this question yet. I refer to the overhead bridge on Hunter Street. The council wishes to build an overhead brige; a bridge of this description will cost well over $300,000. Now a bridge about the same length as the present one, with adequate room for street car tracks, I am told would cost about $60,000. The smaller bridge would afford just as much convenience to all the citizens but not to the Quaker Oats Co. They want a bridge high enough to allow trains to go under and to allow barges to reach them from the river. Now at the present time we are neither opposing or supporting this measure. But the fact remains that if this by-law goes through the city of Peterborough will in effect pay a bonus of a quarter of a million dollars to have that company locate here. This may be a good venture for both city and company, but I think that you will agree with me when I say that it is a question that is worthy of grave consideration.

POLES SUSPECT HUNS.

Few Volunteers Have Joined New Polish Armies.

The appeal to the Poles in the newly proclaimed kingdom to enlist in the Polish army and fight under Austro-German banners for the new state has fallen on deaf ears, according to recent information brought from Warsaw by neutral and German visitors.

Units of the new army have been formed and a considerable number of officers and men from the old Austrian Polish Legion and from the Polish troops of the German army have been brought to the occupied districts of Poland to instruct the Polish volunteers, but only a few hundred troops, most of them students in Warsaw University, who volunteered in the first flush of enthusiasm following the proclamation of the Kingdom, are said to come forward.

The two Polish army corps, of which the German advocates of the establishment of the new Poland spoke as the probable contribution from the kingdom to the armies of the central powers, are declared to show no signs of ever coming into existence.

The Polish workmen and peasants show a decided disinclination to take up arms, and the labor shortage in Germany has been made good in no small degree, it is asserted, by an exodus to Germany of Poles who feared being impressed into the new army and who decided to seek safe employment in the German munitions factories or on farms, rather than face the risk of being drafted as soldiers.

Nor are large elements of the Polish population displaying any keen enthusiasm, returning travelers state, for the civil organization of the new kingdom. The fear of the consequences in case Russian rule should be re-established exercises a very lively deterrent influence upon many Poles, even those not suspected of any liking for Russia, it appears, and there is asserted to be a quite widespread determination, even among the leaders, who would probably welcome the permanent establishment of a new kingdom under Austro-German auspices, to wait and see the result of the war before they commit themselves to the new order.

Indicated developments may affect Germany's ultimate policy toward Poland in the peace negotiations. In some German quarters the question is being asked, "Why should Germany make sacrifices to establish the kingdom if the Poles are not willing to fight for it?"

Strange Story Heard in Court

A STRANGE romance of the great war has just been disclosed and also ended by a breach of promise case heard in the courts of Toronto, in which Miss Nechana Dvoritsky, a young Russian Jewess, secured damages to the amount of $5,000 from a prominent young Toronto lawyer, Samuel Joseph Birnbaum. In spite of its pathetic and rather sordid ending, the story told by Miss Dvoritsky in court was a strangely romantic one, and the breach of promise suit was the culminating point of four years of wandering that were filled with tragedy and adventure. When only fourteen years of age she was sent by her father, a wealthy wine manufacturer of Boronovichi to Jerusalem in Palestine to study the Bible and Jewish history. She had been in a seminary there for over two years when the war broke out, and she was driven from Palestine by the Government. On her way back to Russia she stopped at Alexandria, in Egypt, and there learned that the Germans in their first onrush at the beginning of the war had taken possession of her home town. In order to get to New York, from where she might communicate from a neutral country with her people, she taught in a private school at Cairo, and eventually reached New York. There a Jewish newspaper wrote about her that she was a graduate of a seminary in Palestine and was a cultivated, refined, and well-educated young lady.

As a result of this publicity she was asked by Rabbi Gordon to come to Toronto and teach a kindergarten class about to be opened. She arrived in Toronto in August, 1915, and met Mr. Birnbaum, who was chairman of the committee responsible for the school. While continuing to teach school she conducted classes in pure Hebrew, and defendant became one of her pupils. From studying the two fell to love-making, and the question of marriage was first broached in Jan., 1916. Mr. Birnbaum came so often to the house where she roomed that the Jewish community began to think that they were engaged. The defendant's attentions to her became so marked that all her other gentlemen friends went into the background. Finally, the parties became engaged, and it was soon known that they were to be married. Miss Dvoritsky, after finding the work in the school too much for her, went to Detroit for a holiday, and was arranging to take up classes there when defendant phoned her to come back and he would find her another class and she did so. On a Friday, in May, he called and arranged that the wedding should take place on May 29. Next day when he called he said his family objected to the marriage. The following morning the couple, accompanied by a Mrs. Steinburg, procured the marriage license and the wedding ring.

They then went to a Rabbi, who desired them to furnish twelve witnesses, but as this was not satisfactory they went to a second Rabbi, who also declined to perform the ceremony. The third Rabbi they went to tried to persuade Miss Dvoritsky to give up Birnbaum, and when she refused, it was suggested that the ceremony be postponed for a year. Soon after this Mr. Birnbaum's attentions towards her cooled off and she finally arrived at the conclusion that he was trying to get out of his promise to marry her. Eventually he met her on the street and from a remark he passed she was certain that he would not marry her. At another interview he told her he would not marry her unless she left the city, but later made it clear to her that he did not intend to keep his promise. Then the action for breach of promise, the Russian refugee against the Canadian, was started. Miss Dvoritsky does not speak English very well and has a very pronounced Russian accent.

Jump from Bed in Morning and Drink Hot Water

Tells why everyone should drink hot water each morning before breakfast.

Why is man and woman, half the time, feeling nervous, despondent, worried; some days headachy, dull and unstrung; some days really incapacitated by illness.

If we all would practice inside-bathing, what a gratifying change would take place. Instead of thousands of half-sick, anaemic-looking souls with pasty, muddy complexions we should see crowds of happy, healthy, rosy cheeked people everywhere. The reason is that the human system does not rid itself each day of all the waste which it accumulates under our present mode of living. For every ounce of food and drink taken into the system nearly an ounce of waste material must be carried out, else it ferments and forms ptomaine-like poisons which are absorbed into the blood.

Just as necessary as it is to clean the ashes from the furnace each day, before the fire will burn bright and hot, so we must each morning clear the inside organs of the previous day's accumulation of indigestible waste and body toxins. Men and women, whether sick or well, are advised to drink each morning, before breakfast, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, as a harmless means of washing out of the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels the indigestable material, waste, sour bile and toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

Millions of people who had their turn at constipation, bilious attacks, acid stomach, nervous days and sleepless nights have become real cranks about the morning inside-bath. A quarter pound of limestone phosphate will not cost much at the drug store, but is sufficient to demonstrate to anyone its cleansing, sweetening and freshening effect upon the system.

Not So.

"All's fair in love,"
They say, and yet
How can that be,
There's the brunette.

Easy Solution.

"This flat is very small to live in," hinted the bride.

"Well, my dear, we have folding furniture of all sorts. And we'll just have to keep folded in each other's arms."

But PERFECTION also is shown in the LITTLE things.

In both the Studebaker FOUR and SIX you find a high-grade Yale Ignition Lock; permanently bright finished metal parts; hand grips on the door; leather-bound carpets in the tonneau; aluminum bound linoleum in the driver's compartment; leather edged top; Blackmore curtain openers; leather-bound robe straps; big pockets on every door.

These are some of the LITTLE things that indicate the perfection not only in BIG things but in detail, which make the Studebaker such a wonderful value for the money.

UNSHAKABLE CONFIDENCE IN LOYALTY OF RUSS. ARMY TO MEET HINDENBURG CAMPAIGN

PETROGRAD, March 26. — The news that Hindenburg is planning a campaign against Petrograd is received here in a spirit of calm and unshakable confidence in the loyalty of the army and its ability to protect the capital from this new danger.

PETROGRAD, March 26.—The Russky Slovo reveals the means employed by the dissolute monk Rasputin to confirm the superstitious belief that the health of the Czarevitch, even his life, depended on Rasputin's presence. The monk confided to the companions of A. Revel that when he absented himself from the palace it was arranged that a certain lady-in-waiting should administer poisonous powders in the food of the youthful royal heir. On the monk's return this dosing was stopped. Rasputin has announced that forty days after his death the Czarevitch would fall ill, and the paper stands to verify the prophecy. This lady administered a powder when that day came round.

PTE. WICKER'S SACRIFICE SUBJECT OF ADDRESSES AT MARK STREET CHURCH

Capt. Burnham and Major O'Flynn Join With Congregation and Friends in Memorial Service to Lad Who Gave up His Life.

"Somewhere behind the firing line" in ground made sacred by the blood of the Empire's manhood, and where the only monument is a simple wooden cross, are the remains of the late Private Fred. Wicker, a happy-faced Peterborough lad, who, when the call for men was sounded, took his place in the ranks, went to England, crossed to France, and gave up his life. Thousands of miles separate that grave from the lad's famaly and friends, but his self-sacrificing act is not forgotten.

In Mark Street Methodist Church last evening the congregation and friends gathered to honor his memory. Every seat in the church was occupied, and on either side of the pastor, Rev. R. A. Whattam, were Major E. D. O'Flynn, of the 247th Battalion, one of the gallant Canadians who blazed the trail, and Captain J. H. Burnham, M.P., of the glorious 93rd Battalion, of which the late Pte. Wicker was a member. Judge Huycke and Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Braund, by whom the young soldier had been employed for some time, were among the congregation.

Many of those present who had followed the beautiful thoughts so well expressed by the speakers, found it impossible to control their feelings when, at the conclusion of the service, the organist played the Dead March, for there were others besides this soldier's parents who mourned.

Glory Inexpressible.

"The tragedy of it is great, but the glory of it is really inexpressible," said Capt. Burnham, speaking of the man who gives up his life for others. Everyone who gives up his life for his country does exactly as Jesus Christ did, and when he gives it for mankind, and so closely imitates Christ, we need have no fear for his future. Capt. Burnham told of a conversation he had had with two Belgian girls, the survivors of a once happy family, the others having been hurried away into Germany. They believed the father had been killed, that the mother and two sisters were dead, and that the young brother was probably in service. How happy we should be in Canada?

For Canadians who had been accustomed to the simpler life and untutored in war, to respond as they had done, was a testimony to our heritage, a gem of splendid character, and ought to augur well for the future of this country.

In all the great deeds such as Pte. Wicker's death epitomized, we lived over again the life of the whole race, past and present. "For my part," said Capt. Burnham, "I cannot see anything more fitting as a cause for greater joy than that a young Canadian has surrendered his life for the lasting glory and loyalty of his country."

Brotherhood Exemplified.

Major O'Flynn felt honored in being present to pay tribute to Pte. Wicker, who had joined the deathless army which, so long as the Anglo-Saxon race lives, will ever be held in memory. The speaker paid tribute to the young soldier as one of the gallant Canadians who had realized the need of the Motherland and had joined in the fight for freedom and for the weak against the strong, a fight that was a religious war just as much as in the day when the Hebrews fought the Philistines, and as such had God's blessing. Freedom, the speaker said, would live and posterity would always be protected by reason of the sacrifices being made today. He was proud of having fought in France with the Canadians, with soldiers of the type of Pte. Wicker, for it was in the fighting forces that the truest type of brotherhood was exemplified.

Richer in Ideals.

Rev. R. A. Whattam discussed the moral side of the question in the course of which he said the world was poorer in life but richer in ideals. His discourse was comforting to the bereaved and optimistic of a brighter day to dawn.

Mrs. J. Lock presided at the organ, having remained in the city to assist in the memorial service. Mrs. Ed. Wand was the soloist, singing "One Sweetly Solemn Thought."

His Life for Others

The following verses concluded Major O'Flynn's tribute to Pte. F. Wicker at the memorial service in Mark St. Church last night:—

Your King and country need you.
He answered to the call
To meet the cruel foeman,
To conquer or to fall.

He marched away so bravely,
His young head proudly held,
His footsteps never faltered,
His courage never failed.

Then in the field of battle
He calmly took his place,
And fought and died for Britain
And the honor of his race.

How hard it was to give him;
But he went at the call of One
Who gave for him and others
His Own Beloved Son.

The water was running very freely into the Little Lake today.

PETERBOROUGH, MONDAY, MARCH 26, 1917

THE SONG OF THE SIREN.

THERE ARE TWO CLASSES of voters whom the Liberals in Ontario, and right here in Peterborough, are attempting by every species of siren song, by every argument they can invent, and by every promise they can formulate, to win to their standard—the labor men and the women who will vote for the first time at the next Federal election, unless all signs fail.

The women are not likely to be wheedled by the sophistries of politicians. The majority of them are sufficiently conversant with public questions and the political history of the two parties to be in a position to form their own alliance. They are not likely to be deceived by claims that have no foundation in fact. They are asked to believe that all temperance measures, all social reforms, originated with the Liberals. But the women know better. They know that for over thirty years the Liberals used the liquor party as a political machine, holding a club over their heads in the shape of the numbered ballot, one of the most disgraceful election dodges ever invented in a civilized country. Promises with regard to prohibition were never fulfilled. The present Opposition leader in Ontario, when he faced the electorate, never could get further along the temperance trail than the open bar. The shops he would leave intact while closing the other of the accessories to the traffic. The late Sir James Whitney, during the few years of his premiership, did more in the interests of temperance than the Liberals did in over a generation in power.

The Liberals, with sublime assurance, attempt to appropriate the credit for the enfranchisement of women. The man in Opposition is free of the responsibilities of office and can, with little fear of the consequences, suggest anything in the way of changes, just as the man on the street may attempt to persuade an alderman into some policy of civic extravagance. If there is any reprisal on the part of the electorate, it is the alderman not his adviser, who is the sufferer.

The Liberals in the House may have talked of equal suffrage, but the cold fact remains that they never faced the people with that as a clearly defined plank in their platform. Their numerical strength in the Legislature is insignificant. Their moral influence is considerably below par by reason of their record. They lacked both members and force required to drive the Conservative party into adopting either prohibition or equal suffrage, and are entitled to no credit for either, except that of supporting the Administration in both issues, so as to be in a position for the larceny of honor which they are now attempting.

Ontario Liberals are using their arts as charmers upon the labor men of the Province. If the latter agree to support their candidates, the party promises in return that in the event of victory at the polls in the elecion which is not far off, to secure the appointment of an Ontario man, selected by the workinkmen, as Minister of Labor. This is another evidence of the untrustworthiness of Liberal pledges. No such agreement could be carried out, even if the Liberals swept the country. Sir Wilfrid Laurier has a Quebec man already selected for that position, and the choice of the Liberal leader would not be acceptable to Ontario wage-earners.

Workingmen of Canada know by bitter experience that they have nothing to hope for from the Liberal party. During the fifteen years the latter were in power at Ottawa, all they did for Labor was to pass an Act that organized labor in the Dominion Congress of the order last fall almost unanimously demanded be repealed, as its operation was held to bear down unjustly upon them.

It was not the Liberal party that gave Labor in Ontario the Workmen's Compensation Act, the most beneficent legislation ever adopted for the relief of the masses. It was not the Liberal party that a few weeks ago amended that measure, making more generous provision than ever, and that, too, in the face of well-organized opposition on the part of the interests.

GIVE THE ALDERMEN A CHANCE.

WHEN A CHILD at bedtime cries for sugar, the wise mother denies the request, not necessarily because she does not believe that a certain amount of saccharine matter is essential to a growing child, but for the reason that she is firmly convinced that the time for administering it is not opportune. An alderman votes against the proposition to establish municipal bathing places, and in the absence of any explanation of his position the public conclude that be has no sympathy for a proposition put forward in the interests of public health and safety.

The City Council is being constantly beset by delegations who claim to be representatives of the entire city and who ask for some civic legislation of general interest. It is as difficult for the aldermen to arrive at a decision in this case as it was for one of the characters in "Our Mutual Friend" to satisfy himself in his own mind what of all he heard was really the voice of society. The Council beyond a doubt represent the city, whatever may be the status of the delegation. It is the aldermen, not the delegation, who will be called upon later to face the music and to render an account of their stewardship. The delegation will not be required to explain their work to a more or less skeptical and exacting public.

If the deputation of ratepayers waits upon Council to ask for a local improvement that has to do with surface drainage or sewerage, the matter is easily settled, as it is not difficult to ascertain whether those who make the request are in the majority. It is an entirely different matter when the entire city is interested and when the expense connected with the improvement will be generally borne. In all such cases, the aldermen are not free to act according to their own inclinations. The interests of their city must be safeguarded, and there is always the danger of being overpersuaded by those in favor of the proposition. These are the people who appear as members of deputations. The antis are rarely heard from until the eleventh hour, that is in public. The advocates of a high level bridge are as a rule outspoken. Those who are opposed to it are given to button-holing the aldermen in private.

It is when they are waited upon by contending delegations that the aldermen are cornered for fair. It would often require the services of an expert judge to weigh the arguments advanced on both sides, and a jury to pass upon their merits. Why not act upon Alderman Dobbin's suggestion, and when there are advocates of both sides of a proposition, have the opposing delegations meet by themselves and adjust their difference, or at least arrive at some kind of a compromise which can be laid before Council? This would not only facilitate public business, but would really be getting at the truth with regard to what the people want.

Once an alderman has regisered his vote, it is a difficult matter to induce him to change it. If he does so, the act is taken as a confession of former error of judgment, and, like any other mortal, the average alderman has a dislike for acknowledging himself in the wrong.

A NEW CHINESE WALL.

THE VERY FACT that the mind of Rev. J. P. Wilson is free, from the nature of his profession, from political bias, entitles his remarks on Imperialism, made in his address at the Public Library on Saturday, to more than passing consideration. They are the sentiments of a man whose views are not warped by party considerations and who is above the suspicion of taking up a cause with a selfish end as the motive—that of strengthening himself with a certain element remarkable chiefly for effervescent patriotism.

There are Imperialists who go so far as to say that when the war is over the British Empire should embark upon a policy of isolation, and, surrounding herself with a tariff wall, shut out the commerce of the rest of the world and live entirely with the members of her own family. This, Mr. Wilson says, would be another Chinese wall, and would make the British race provincial in their outlook and would make them eventually as cruel and unlovable as the myriads of the Celestial kingdom.

Mr. Wilson also pointed out the danger of military training in our schools. All that is required to make the nation fit for the time of war is physical culture. Making soldiers of them will result in the same conditions as those which exist in Germany, where compulsory military training has developed a race of unspeakable barbarians.

ALL DOUBTS CLEARED UP.

THE GRAVE DOUBTS that have existed as to why there are so many young men who refuse to enlist have been cleared up by our contemporary. Canada's rising generation is improperly taught both in an academic and religious sense. And worst of all is the lack of penny banks in the Peterborough schools. There you have the entire trouble explained in a nutshell. If there had been school banks in this city, the 247th Battalion would have been up to strength long ago. The wonder of it is that no one ever thought of so easy an explanation before.

Our neighbor never loses an opportunity to sneer at our school system and to make light of the work of our teachers. The latter are conceded to be second to none in Ontario, and that means as good as any in Canada. They have not, it must be admitted, demonstrated their ability to make silk purses out of raw material that has always been held unsuitable for the purpose. The school buildings are up to date.

With a savings bank in every block of the down-town district, while church spires point the way upward in all sections of the city, there is no excuse for the young people to say that they have never had a chance to develop either economically or spiritually. The preachers have not been remiss in the matter of reminding young men of their duty to the Empire. Because they have done so, certain young fellows with tender consciences—or perhaps it is only sensitive natures—have fallen into the habit of absenting themselves from public worship. Some months ago the ministers of the city, by common consent, preached recruiting sermons. It was deemed wise to make no announcement in the papers of the special addresses lest those whom it was most desired to reach should stay away.

School children are certainly taught patriotism now as they never have been. Special text books on the war have been prepared by the Education Department for use in the upper grades. The youth of this country are really not neglected. The most of them are able to recognise the psychological moment for getting in out of the rain. They cannot plead ignorance of their duty in this national crisis. The real trouble is that so many of them are disposed to leave the hard work to others. Even penny banks are not the one thing lacking. It is a difficult matter for a human agency to supply a mental or moral equipment that Nature has omitted from the makeup of some members of the human family.

IF UNCLE SAM GOES TO WAR

(Chicago News.)

Wise participation by the United States in the world war will serve materially to shorten that destructive conflict. Unwise participation by this nation in the operations against the central powers would seriously cripple the entente allies and therefore would greatly benefit their enemies and ours. Germany, indeed, has laid its plans craftily and hopes to gain substantial benefit from forcing the American people to arm themselves at this particular time. If it can frighten the authorities at Washington into stopping the export of munitions and other indispensable supplies to France and Britain and Russia and Italy it will derive invaluable assistance from that display of ingenuousness. Herein lies the need for an early and complete understanding between the American government and the governments of the European nations which are opposing the aggressions of Germany.

This explanation of Germany's attitude toward the United States is understood to be borne out by the president and his official advisers. It gives special significance to the effort of the German Secretary of Foreign Affairs to sharpen and thrust against us the hatred of the Mexicans. The effort was meant to be from the American point of view provocative as well as alarming. Germany, in short, has sought to make American enmity useful to it at this critical stage of the great war.

The United States Government must not permit itself to be made the useful tool of Germany. If it should undertake to fight a little war of its own as a demonstration of its special brand of valor and a proof of its abhorrence of entangling foreign alliances, meantime cutting off or reducing the flow of war supplies to the nations which have vast armies struggling hand in hand with the armed might of Germany, it would commit a disastrous error. Having been deliberately forced into the war by German policy, this nation, in full harmony with Britain and France and Italy and the newly emancipated democracy of Russia, should marshal all its resources for the best possible employment in forcing an early peace.

A United Country.

If this country shall go to war it will be for the sake of civilization and democracy. This thought is developing enthusiasm among the people of the United States and producing a gratifying and reassuring unanimity.

The movement for universal military training and service is a vital feature of this sentiment, as is the desire for co-operation expressed by many corporations and financial interests.

Representatives of 14,000 banks of the central west gathered at the Hotel La Salle yesterday and announced their readiness to aid the United States in the event of war. Henry Ford has offered his great manufacturing plant and the government has accepted it for operation without profit. Schwab's Bethlehem steel mills will be used for the government. The Unites States Steel Corporation and very many other powerful concerns show the same effective patriotism.

The country is mobilizing. At the same time it is getting acquainted with itself, and under the pressure of danger is learning its essential unity.

EDITOR'S MAIL

CAPT. BURNHAM SPEAKS

Editor Review: While recognizing the desire and the right of newspapers to give to their readers and to the public generally political items more or less spicy and more or less true, and wishing in no way to curtail the rights of any journal in that respect, nevertheless, I am aware that the public holds me, as a candidate for its suffrage, to a certain extent responsible for rumors and items of a political nature appearing in party newspapers within my jurisdiction, therefore permit me to say that I am in no way responsible for the political news and views of The Review. They are a matter purely of that paper's own concern so far, at least, as they affect me.

J. H. BURNHAM.

The Review begs leave to express its grateful appreciation of Capt. Burnham's generosity in extending to newspapers the privilege of controlling their own columns. We believe, however, that he takes himself rather too seriously when he assumes that the public hold him responsible for "rumors and items of a political nature appearing in party papers."

When a candidate for public suffrage finds himself at odds with the newspapers it is more frequently his misfortune than it is that of the press. The Review stands for the principles of the Conservative party, not for the interests of any particular individual.—Ed. Review.

Editor Review: Much has been said and written of late upon the subject of the future prosperity of the city of Peterborough, and discussions have been held bearing upon the best means of securing this.

Peterborough has been fitly described as a "city of working men." Accepting this statement, would it not be better to re-write it and adopt as our governing principle, "Peterborough is a city FOR working men," since without the workers, prosperity must cease.

One question, very much in evidence, is that of our street railway system, now publicly owned, and presenting a fitting opportunity, in the writer's opinion, for making an experiment in the mutual interests of the citizens and the balance sheet of this public utility.

The writer would suggest that the city street railways be made a radial system within the present limits, taking the junction of George and Charlotte Streets as the radial centre, and that only one class of ticket be sold, that is to say, at the rate of 12 tickets for 25c, or, in smaller quantities, at two tickets for 5 cents. The fare being one such ticket for each inward or outward trip or portion of trip, to or from the radial centre respectively.

The writer would further suggest that within certain time limits, as covering periods during which industrial workers are proceeding to and from their places of work and houses, that one such ticket, suggested above, should cover the whole length of run of any single trip, such privileges might also be extended to our school children and students attending the public technological classes. In all cases of these extended privileges, the worker or student should possess a card of identification and qualification to be produced on demand by the street railway fare collector. The inclusion of students here seems advisable, since they are potential workers in training who should be encouraged to regard themselves as such. The time limits could no doubt be best decided by a joint representative committee chosen from the local Trades and Labor Council, the City Council and our Board of Education.

The advertising value of such an initiative move in this city would carry weight with owners and managers seeking new locations for industrial enterprise and would be a great incentive to skilled workmen with families, to settle here.

The above suggested radial system for the city would also enable long distance travellers to secure seats at the radial centre which, under present conditions, are occupied by passengers whose destinations are but a short distance beyond, and for which they would not generally be inclined to forfeit an extra ticket, and, in the interests of long distance travellers, there should be no deviation from this rule, however short the additional distance may be.

The subject of radial extensions into the surrounding country in reference to the prosperity of the city of Peterborough in the immediate future is equally important from the working man's standpoint, by bringing in food supplies, fresh, and from sources now, from lack of transportation facilities, economically out of reach. The radial extensions would also enable citizens who desire to do so, to build their houses outside the city limits, live at less cost and still retail industrial associations with us, while the possibilities of business growth to our merchants and business men generally, resulting in increased trade, revenue and prosperity to the city, needs no further comment here.

The writer has frequently spoken of the above to fellow-citizens and the repeated request for collected notes on the subject is his apology for this communication.

Health for Sick Women

For Forty Years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Has Been Woman's Most Reliable Medicine —Here is More Proof.

To women who are suffering from some form of woman's special ills, and have a constant fear of breaking down, the three following letters ought to bring hope:—

North Crandon, Wis.—"When I was 16 years old I got married and at 18 years I gave birth to twins and it left me with very poor health. I could not walk across the floor without having to sit down to rest and it was hard for me to keep about and do my work. I went to a doctor and he told me I had a displacement and ulcers, and would have to have an operation. This frightened me so much that I did not know what to do. Having heard of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I thought I would give it a trial and it made me as well as ever. I cannot say enough in favor of the Pinkham remedies."—Mrs. Mayme Asbach, North Crandon, Wis.

Testimony from Oklahoma.

Lawton, Okla.—"When I began to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I seemed to be good for nothing. I tired easily and had headaches much of the time and was irregular. I took it again before my little child was born and it did me a wonderful amount of good at that time. I never fail to recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to ailing women because it has done so much for me."—Mrs. A. L. McCasland, 509 Have St., Lawton, Okla.

From a Grateful Massachusetts Woman.

Roxbury, Mass.—"I was suffering from inflammation and was examined by a physician who found that my trouble was caused by a displacement. My symptoms were bearing down pains, backache, and sluggish liver. I tried several kinds of medicine; then I was asked to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It has cured me and I am pleased to be in my usual good health by using it and highly recommend it."—Mrs. B. M. Osgood, 1 Haynes Park, Roxbury, Mass.

WAR-TIME WARDROBES

How One Mother Makes Children's Clothes Last

An Englishwoman writes of war time economy in children's clothes, as follows: One hears a lot just now about the sin of buying new and unnecessary clothes in war time, and though this wise counsel may be necessary for some of the lucky ones, the possibility of buying new clothes, either for myself or the kiddies, hasn't arisen for a very long time so I just manage with what there is.

I have two boys, one eight and one five, and I pass all the older one's clothes to the little one as soon as he grows out of them or makes them very shabby. Boys are so terribly hard on their knickerbockers, especially at the knees, so when Bob has made a pair quite unwearable I cut them down for Dickie. I measure the length at the outside of the leg from the waist to the knee on one of Dickie's knickers, then I cut off the extra length from Bob's which always removes all the worn shiny part. Then I rip up the seams, lay the pieces on the table, and cut off as much, taking the same amount from each seam, as is necessary to make them fit Dickie. It is quite an easy plan if you rip up an old pair of the smaller size and put the pieces on the one to be cut down. I do practically the same with the coats. Making the sleeve smaller generally cuts away the shiny elbow part, especially if you take all that is necessary from that side.

My three girls are even easier to deal with when passing on. A shortening of the skirt, which can be done in quite a decorative way by running a tuck or two over the hem, and taking the bodice portion in at the under-arm seams generally secures a good fit, while a too short skirt can be lengthened by adding a hem of sateen or any stout cotton cloth, and covering it with braid, velvet, a length of ribbon, or even a strip of contrasting material.

I take a piece of the oilcloth which is sold for covering kitchen tables and shelves, and cut a sole from this to fit each shoe, and then put them in smooth side downwards. This makes the shoes practically waterproof, as it is impossible for any damp to penetrate. This hint is also excellent for business girls, and now with so much damp weather it would be a wise plan for girls who have to go out every day to line their boots and shoes with oilcloth soles.

PAST AND PRESENT

Modern Naval Recruiting Methods Followed in Canada

The method used to obtain men in Canada for the Royal Navy is very different to that which prevailed in the days of Nelson when the "Press gang" was used; the Navy was not as it is now a popular service even in Nelson's day, and in order to get a full crew for a new ship it was not an uncommon thing for the captain to send a few of his hearties ashore with an officer to press men into the service. In this way men were forcibly taken from their homes at a moment's notice and placed on board one of the King's ships to work as a sailor until they could buy themselves out by paying a substitute. As an inducement, and to prevent desertion, a "bounty" was offered to all pressed men, who were allowed to "volunteer" after a fortnight's pressed service, which bounty was paid to them on "volunteering." In some cases it would amount to as much as $300 or $400.

While the British Navy is essentially a voluntary service, the bounty mentioned above has its counterpart now in that a certain proportion of the Royal Canadian Navy Volunteer Reserve man's pay will be kept back until the termination of his service; as while actually serving the proportion of their pay given to them will put them on an equal footing with their English messmates, while the proportion saved for them will put them on the same standing with their brothers in the Army Expeditionary Force. For quickly getting overseas with a nest egg in the bank on return after discharge, the R.C.N.V.R. offered an unrivalled opportunity.

WOMEN AND WAR WORK

Good Salaries For Capable Women —Opening For All

There are good opportunities in connection with the manufacture of munitions in England. In certain factories machinery has been installed so that heavy shells are easily handled, and the necessary machine operations are conducted by women. In other places light machine work is carried on by women only, and the same physical strength is not required as in the case of shell work. Other women are employed on the gauging of shells and shell parts, and the examining of cartridges and similar accessories. This work requires speed and accuracy, and girls show particular adaptability in it.

A number of openings also occur for women of good education and general intelligence to act as forewomen or supervisors in factories, and to control departments where groups of girls are employed. There is likely to be a very keen demand for capable women of this type, and the influence of a good person in this work may be very considerable. The wages run from $7.50 per week to $12.50, and in some cases higher posts are available.

The London County Council provides training for all the above work free of charge. The course lasts six weeks, attendance being required for four hours each day.

IMMIGRATION QUESTION AFTER THE WAR ENDS

Will Rush of People Be Back to Europe or From It?—Following Facts Help Prove Former

A Canadian writes: A question that is puzzling the authorities at the present time is that of immigration after the war. The consensus of opinion seems to be that there will be a great rush of people from all the warring nations to Canada on the cessation of hostilities. However, if one looks at the situation in a reasonable light, one must admit that the rush will be back to Europe rather than from it.

First, let us take the soldiers of British descent who will be released at the end of the war. They will be in the Old Country, and the Old Country will need just such men to fill the places of the fallen heroes, and take the thousand and one jobs that will be offered to young men of sound physique and undoubtedly good character, as our soldiers are.

Russia Needs Her Farmers

Belgium will claim all her sons to help in the work of rejuvenation that must take place after the war, and the numberless jobs for the skilled and unskilled laborer, the clerk, the farmer, to name but a few, will hold the people of this gallant little nation for many years to come. Russia, with her teeming millions of farmers, will want, nay hold them all when the great war is over, to keep the nation in the running with the great powers, and to stand off the universal reaction that will assuredly take place after the war is over. The imperial ukase of the Czar forbidding the use of vodka throughout the Empire will, according to a famous war correspondent at the front with the Russian forces, be prolonged indefinitely after the war. This will have an enormous effect on the Russian nation and will raise the standard of efficiency greatly and will correspondingly advance the common people, both socially and morally, and keep them at home.

Irish Will Emigrate

France, a nation of stay-at-homes at the best, will certainly need all her manhood after war's devastations to undo the work of the Huns and restore their country to its former glory. England with its terrible drain of manhood on land and sea, will need every mother's son at home, and may hold out inducements to young men overseas that will take them back to the Mother Country from the colonies. The only country is expected to see any number emigrate will be that nation of emigrants, Ireland, and with the unfortunate occurence there, the Irish, at least the disaffected part of them, will welcome the end of the war for no other reason than to flee the country and seek outlet in another.

GERMAN "VERACITY"

From a London correspondent: "The German Newsagency for Foreign Policy" publishes the most colossal lie about Zeppelin attacks on London yet achieved by the German Press. Its Christiania correspondent interviewed a Norwegian merchant, who says that he spent the night shivering in the cellar of big business offices near St. Pancras in the company of the King, the Queen, and the Duke of Connaught, who could not get to Buckingham Palace because the streets were torn up by Zeppelin bombs. The merchant adds that the King remained for an hour and a half in the cellar, only speaking three words. The same liar says that London is a maze of underground bars, business offices, shops, and theatres, all advertising themselves safe from Zeppelins. He also says that practically every house in London is an ammunition factory.

"NO MAN'S LAND"

What it Means to Get Lost in Between the Lines

A London paper says: Seven men, including a N.C.O., went out to explore an enemy sap. The Boche awaited them. The Boche threw bombs. Five of the party got back. It was assumed that the other two had been killed or wounded. Two days later a lone figure was seen walking about between our own and the enemy lines. Both sides fired at him. The man rushed like a scared rabbit into a big shell hole. Five days later a worn, dishevelled, khaki-clad, dirty, unshaven man came over the parapet. Rough but kind words of cheer greeted him—as well as a stretcher. The poor fellow was light-headed. For a week, without either food or drink, he had been in "No Man's Land." The only food he had had was grass and daisies. Think of it. A week in "No Man's Land" without either food or drink, with a big bombardment going on intermittently from both sides and both friend and foe—your identity unknown to either—firing at you!

Odd Boots

The London Daily Mail says: Odd boots for disabled soldiers and sailors are becoming a regular feature in the retail boot trade. For many years the business was practically monopolized by a retailer, who specialized in providing odd boots for one-legged men, in addition to his regular business. He sold rights or lefts at half the price of a pair, and many cripples from all parts of London patronized his shop. Since the war boot firms have begun to announce "Footwear service to disabled soldiers and sailors," and as the customers for rights about equal in number those for lefts the odd boot business presents few difficulties.

Souvenir For Germans

"Bike" Evans, former Brantford ball player, at the front lost none of his old nerve. The story has come out that recently "Bike" crawled over to a German dug-out and called out with expletives: "How many are there of you down there?" The answer came back in good English: "Eight of us." "Then divide these among you," called Evans; and with that he hurled in two hand grenades, and in the confusion made his way back uninjured.

HOW TRAWLERS FIGHT

In the Trawler Section of the R.N.R. there are three classes: Patrol Boats, Patrol Boats and Drifters, and Minesweepers. It is no exaggeration to state that there are over 2,000 of these boats available for duty, which means that not fewer than 40,000 men are serving in various capacities. The number of boats comprising a Patrol Flotilla varies according to the particular duties. There is more merchant traffic over some sections of the North Sea than others. Some boats must be convoyed, and others need not be.

Each flotilla has a leading boat called number one. All vessels carry guns, but the leader is also fitted with a wireless installation, and is commanded by a man who has been given the rank of lieutenant in the R.N.R., who before the war was either a captain or officer in the Mercantile Marine. Every boat in the flotilla has its number and allotted place. If for any reason the leader is put out of action or withdrawn upon a special mission, number two replaces number one, and the others correspondingly move up. At work, when number one is filling her place the other boats play the schoolboy game "follow my leader." Wherever the leader goes the others follow without question. Each of these other boats is in charge of a skipper who, in pre-war time, was also skipper of a steam trawler.

PEACE AMID WAR

Farms Within Zone of Fire Remained Undamaged

A Canadian soldier writes: There is a big bush all around us, and the country is quite hilly. One or two farms, still under cultivation, are nearby. The country shows no evidence of warfare; there is hardly so much as a shell hole to be seen. The bush is, as bushes go here, a new one. It is very pretty and furnishes a nice quiet place to roam about in, and there are plenty of delicious berries and nuts. It sounds kind of funny, does it not, to get an hour's leave to pick berries and nuts, and have the former served with cream (procured from a farmhouse 100 yards away) for breakfast?

Last night we went to this farmhouse and had eggs and coffee. It seemed a bit queer to be having lunch and watch people milking the cows practically on the firing line. I don't know, but I should judge there are several batteries in position and in action once or twice a day on various parts of that farmstead. Yet the people are happy and feel perfectly safe. Their stock and holdings are undamaged, nothing is stolen by the soldiers, a good trade is going on, and still the section has been in the zone of shell fire for two years. The conditions that exist speak well for the coolness and nerve of the civilian population, and also for the discipline of the British soldier.

Colonel of Kitchener's Own

Chosen to head the 244th Battalion, which was organized as a tribute from Canada to the Organizer of Armies, Lieut.-Col. Fred M. McRobie of Montreal took extraordinary steps to recruit a corps that would be representative of the whole Dominion.

CURE FOR SHELL SHOCK

Simple Invention For Wrecked Nerves Used by Canadians

Wounded soldiers suffering from shel shock and various nervous complaints are being cured at the Ontario Military Hospital, Orpington, Kent, by a novel treatment of baths with continuously flowing water. A soldier who went into the bath a raving maniac was held down by rubber bands, and emerged cured and able to walk out after eleven days' continuous treatment. The treatment is pleasant, judging from the blissful expression on the face of a patient sleeping in the bath. The patient lies on a sheet and pillow suspended in the bath with the water up to his chin. The water is regulated to the man's temperature, and flows with a rippling motion from head to foot.

"Trench" Violin

A returned Canadian soldier had with him a one stringed "violin" manufactured by himself in the trenches from a scarred and twisted tin biscuit box. On this novel instrument he played with rare skill and feeling "Bonnie Mary o' Argyle" to his admiring friends.

Viscount Dangan, Lord Cowley's heir, acts under the name of Arthur Wellesley, and married Miss May Picard, a musical comedy actress, in 1914.

PREVENTION ALWAYS BETTER THAN CURE

Protection Against School Fires an Absolute Necessity—Preserve Human Life

The protection of pupils from fire and panic is the first duty of those in charge of schools. The principal and teachers should also familiarize themselves with the school building, noting any dangerous conditions for immediate attention.

Accumulation of papers, disused furniture and school supplies are stored in basements and attics and, accentuated by deposits of dust, create serious fire danger from spontaneous combustion. Chimneys or pipes passing through attics should be carefully inspected for any cracks or defects from which sparks could be emitted.

The care of waste paper is important. Metal waste paper baskets should be used and the contents burned as soon as the baskets are full; under no circumstances should they be allowed to accumulate. The burning should be done in a safe place, away from frame outbuildings or fences, and should be carried out by either the teacher personally or by some reliable senior pupil.

Care in Heating

The heating apparatus, be it stove or furnace, should be carefully examined and placed in fire-safe condition.

Ashes should be kept in metal containers and should never be deposited near frame buildings or wooden fences. Wood should not be placed close to the stove or furnace to dry. This is a very dangerous practice, and has caused many fires.

All doors leading from classrooms corridors and school buildings should open outward and should never be locked during school hours.

In the larger schools where a janitor is employed it should be a part of his duty to make a daily inspection of the school premises, from basement to attic. This should be imperative and not simply a matter of convenience.

Choose Conscientious Janitor

The position of janitor or caretaker of a school is an important one. The custody of valuable property and the protection of many lives are in his keeping. Too often the only qualification for this position is the low salary at which a man may be secured. The position should be made one of ample salary and a reliable and qualified occupant employed; strict attention to duty should then be insisted upon. If greater care is exercised by those in control, school fires may be entirely eliminated.—Conservation.

CARE OF YOUNG POULTRY

Crushed oyster shell is the best material for shell making. Duck eggs should be marketed frequently, as they depreciate in quality more rapidly than hens' eggs, especially during hot weather.

A promising bunch of growing chicks can be spoiled by one night's sweating. Allowing 100 or more to crowd together in a small coop is sure to be the ruination of some of them. If you would raise the finest fowls, do not allow more than 50 youngsters together at night.

The feeding of milk to young chicks has a most favorable influence on the growth and on lessening the mortality. It tends to prevent mortality from all causes, and if fed soon enough and for a sufficiently long period greatly reduces the death rate caused by bacillary white diarrhea.

When the young turkeys are large and strong enough to jump over the sides of the pen, let them run with the hen, gathering them in when a rainstorm threatens. As they are very susceptible to dampness, it is best not to let them out in the morning until the dew is off the grass.

In the Afterwards

We draw much of the joy of life, as well as much of its sorrow, from the past, and every deed has not only its present, but its afterwards. Even when we wish to have done with it, we are not always successful. We may bury it deep and do our best to hide it with stone and seal, but we cannot assure ourselves against a resurrection. If when temptation comes some alluring prospect of pleasure or success, or the wave of fear and discouragement that urges to a desperate step—we would pause to think how the deed will look to-morrow, we should be saved many a bitter regret. The artist who paints a picture moves here and there to get the best viewpoint, and the picture we are painting into our lives calls for equal care. How will they look in the light of the afterwards?

Finger-nail Facts

No two finger-nails on a person's hands grow at the same rate. The nail on the middle finger grows faster than any other, while the thumb-nail is the slowest growing nail. As a rule, the nails on the right hand grow faster than those on the left. The state of one's health, too, affects the rate of growth. The nails on invalid's hands grow considerably faster than on the hands of a healthy person. Taken on the average the rate of growth is ⅛ in. a month, or from 1 in. to 1½ in. a year.

Fire Cost To Loggers

The ordinary fire on a logging job does not destroy a chute it about half destroys it. Repairs can be figured at $750 per mile of chute burned over. The most serious single equipment loss is the burning of a main line railroad trestle. It means that the main artery of the wood work is cut and the product of all work must stand still until the damage is repaired, at a cost of $3.50 per running foot of trestle burned.

The Office Boy

An office boy, though he may wear knickerbockers, has the same ambitions, the same pride and the same loyalty as is possessed by his elders. A wise recognition of the fact that he is human will increase his value to himself, his associates and his employer without unduly enhancing his egotism.

PUT WORST SIDE OUT

Britain Hides Her Greatness—Lets Critics Talk Freely

Mr. Arthur Gleason writes as follows in The New York Tribune: England has no publicity sense. She advertises all her blunders and crimes and goes silent when she does well. We know all about the 698 labor strikes of 1915. The failure at Loos is publicly proclaimed. The Admiralty competed with the War Office in giving bad impressions of great things done. England allows freedom of speech in Hyde Park, in "The Herald," "Common Sense," "The Labor Leader," "The Nation," "The New Witness," "The Financial News." She allowed it to Ramsay MacDonald, Philip Snowden, Ponsonby, Trevelyan, Lowes Dickinson, Lansbury, Sylvia Pankhurst, and a hundred other voices or organs that continue the great tradition of personal liberty.

But when she restricts one man, Bertrand Russell, from the munitions areas she uses a megaphone to tell the world that liberalism is dead. Wherever the War Office has stepped in and encroached on the liberty of the subject and the claims of private property the civil courts have upheld the rights of the individual against military necessity. A series of decisions throughout the war prove this. But all that England speaks of is the Defence of the Realm Act, as if a band of grim officers were yanking struggling civilians into penal servitude. When England has a choice offering that would win praise and sympathy she puts a veil of silence between the attraction and the neutral public.

British Munitions Expert

DR. CHRISTOPHER ADDISON, M.P.

How this English physician came to fill the position created by and for David Lloyd-George is one of the romances of the war. Dr. Addison was a Liberal private member before the war. He succeeded Mr. Montague as Minister of Munitions when Lloyd-George became Premier. Previously he had served as Under-secretary in the Department.

ORIGIN OF THE BAYONET

Weapon First Used by Troops Out of Ammunition

The bayonet, which the quidnuncs before the war said was an obsolete weapon, has proved its great value in the movements of the British. Its name comes from that of Bayonne, a little town in the Basque country in France, but cheek by jowl with Spain, down in the far corner of the Biscay. There it was first manufactured.

The story of its invention illustrates the old proverb about the motherhood of necessity. A Basque regiment, having run out of ammunition and wishing to sell their lives dearly, took the suggestion of one of their number that they should fix their long belt knives to the ends of their muskets and charge therewith and try to break through the ranks of their enemies.

This they did—the first bayonet charge in history—and their success in extricating themselves from a very warm corner showed the value of the new weapon and led to its manufacture and adoption by every country and army in the world.

PROFITABLE COWS

Do You Keep Them, or do They Keep You?

The question has often been asked, somewhat facetiously perhaps, "do you keep cows, or do they keep you?" To many dairymen this has started a train of thought resulting in vastly improved prospects. To come right down to business, why do you keep cows? Surely it is in order that they may contribute handsomely towards income. If you are already satisfied on that point, well and good; but, one excellent result of cow testing is the solid fact that it helps men to increase their income considerably; that is one main objective point reached. The same story is repeated in all provinces in the Dominion; it runs something like this: from a man at Barnston, "My cows average almost two thousand pounds of milk more than two years ago," or again, from a man of Peterburg, "I have increased fourteen hundred pounds of milk per cow, and hope to go up another fifteen hundred," or this, from a man at Hagersville, "My herd is pretty near double in three years by weeding out," and once more, from St. Boniface, "My seven cows brought in $145 more this year, my records showed me it paid to care for them better."

Laugh, Don't Worry

If you once made up your mind that worry not only destroys your health but robs you of your good looks, and if you determine to say at least one thing to make each person you meet laugh you will have solved not only the problem of your nervous and dyspeptic ailments, but you will have started to stem the tide of opinion that Canadians are a race who love to worry.

Cleaning the Radiator

When the auto radiator gets splashed with mud do not attempt to clean it by poking it with a sharp instrument. Take a hose with a good strong stream, open the hood and squirt water through it from the rear of the radiator, using care not to wet the electrical instrument, until the mud and dirt soften and are driven out.

An ambulance for disabled horses has been invented that can be coupled behind an automobile for hauling.

A competitive test of milking machines in England, open to the world, was won by one of Swedish invention.

The Right Hon. Sir Frank Cavendish Lascelles, was for thirteen years, till 1908, Ambassador to Berlin. From his predecessor he took over the curious custom of giving an annual dinner to the boy sweeps of Berlin.

PLEASANT DAY FOR CHORISTERS OF ST. JOHN'S

FAMILIAR FACES ARE SEEN AGAIN IN CHOIR AFTER LONG ABSENCE.

Yesterday was a pleasant day for St. John's choristers, when instead of saying good-bye to one who was about to leave and make another gap in the ranks, which have been sadly depleted mainly owing to the war, several former choristers were heartily welcomed to their old places. Sergt. George Coleman, invalided home from England, Mr. Tom Ward, Mr. John Stoneley from Quebec, Mr. George Brown (who has been ill for a long time), and Mrs. Seward were all at yesterday's service and the crowded chancel brought back a vision of three years ago when the choir roll was over fifty strong. At the morning service Mr. Walter Hutchinson sang finely a solo from "Olivet to Calgary"—"Oh! was there ever loneliness like His." At Evensong the offertory was a recit. and quartette from Stainer's Crucifixion, sung by Mrs. R. J. Devey and Miss Quartermaine sopranos, Mrs. Evans and Mrs. Seward, altos; Mr. W. Hutchinson and Mr. A. Marshall tenors; Mr. H. Flowers and Mr. Tom Ward, bass. The recit., "And as Moses," was sung by Mr. John Taylor. Both quartette and recit. were finely sung and will be heard again at the presentation of all the work on Good Friday night, March 6.

SATAN'S DESTINY IS UNFOLDED BY PREACHER

An Address by Rev. J. Turnbull at St. Pauls.

How much do you know about Satan? Most people know clearly but very little. And such who attended the public meeting held last Friday evening in St. Paul's Presbyterian Church for the study of Bible prophecy must have come away greatly impressed with the description of "that old serpent, which is the devil," as given by the speaker of the evening, Rev. J. Turnbull, pastor of Beverley Street Baptist Church, Toronto. While not attempting, in the time at his disposal, to give anything like a full account of the characteristics, aims and destiny of Satan as given in the Bible, the speaker sketched his character in a way that was impressive and calculated to make people wonder to what extent their lives were being influenced by his Satanic majesty without their knowledge and because of his wonderful ability to present his wicked schemes under the guise of righteous motives. Emphasis was laid on the point that the conception of Satan as portrayed in popular dramas, where he is shown with horns, cloven hoof, etc., is a characterization of him in which he must keenly delight, inasmuch as he never presents himself in his true character, but always as "an angel of light."

The speaker opened by reading Ezekiel 28: 1 to 19, and Revelations 20, which he stated, in the first passage, in verses 11 to 19, gives the description of Satan's origin and fall, and in the last passage his final destiny. Some ministers, he said, seem to be proud that they have no program for the future. If they haven't there is something wrong, for God has outlined in His word a very clear plan and outline of future events. When men begin to set a date for the Lord's return they make a serious mistake, for the Bible declares that no one knows the day nor the hour. It is necessary also for Christians, while watching for future events, not to neglect the present.

Playing Into Satan's Hands.

Some men seem to delight in denying that there is such a one as Satan. By doing so they are playing directly into Satan's hands. In heathen lands, where his work among the ignorant is plainly manifest, his personality and power are not denied. It is only in Christian lands, where his power is more controlled because of the presence of the Holy Spirit, that it is possible for people to deny his existence.

There are three things that Satan detests. He hates to be exposed, he hates the Atonement, and he hates the doctrine of the second and personal return of our Lord. If we follow the word of God and study the record of Satan that it contains, we will never doubt the existence, cunning and power of our great adversary. The Bible tells us that he is a liar and the father of lies, a murderer and the cause of sin. It tells us that, in the beginning he was a being of great beauty and perfect in character until his fall and that he is the greatest of all spiritual beings next to the Trinity. The first picture given of Satan, where he appeared in the Garden of Eden, shows that his attempt was to gain the allegiance of Adam and Eve from God to himself. Sin then entered the hearts of men, and from that day to this Satan has been striving to with humanity away from God. This is not God's age. It cannot be as long as Satan is loose and free to tempt men.

The Scriptures show that while Christ overcame Satan at he time of His crucifixion and resurrection, he has not yet assumed his full power and will not (Hebrews 2: 8) until His enemies be made His footstool. In the meantime Satan is permitted to tempt mankind and is doing so on an enormous scale in spite of the fact that God offers to give through Christ complete freedom over the power of Satan to all who will believe in God and accept the Atonement. In the 20th chapter of Revelations we see that the time is coming when Satan's freedom to tempt mankind will be taken away from him, and not until then will God's age be established. In the meantime, those who are ignorant of Satan's power, methods, and aims, and neglect to turn to God for power to overcome them, are, because of their ignorance, "taken captive by him at his will." (II. Timothy 2: 25.)

Offers From Satan.

Satan would like to establish a kingdom of his own in opposition to that of God. He is not the originator only of evil things, but just as he offered Adam and Eve to make them as God's if they would follow his suggestions, so he today is offering men all manner of things that are naturally good in themselves if he can only lead them thereby to refuse to listen to God and neglect God's method of salvation. It is because he clothes his angels as "ministers of righteousness" and disguises his methods in such crafty ways that such multitudes today are falling victims to his power. In this age we find, in II. Thessalonians, chapter 2, that his power is being held in check by the presence of the Holy Spirit in the earth in the hearts of believers and followers of God. When at the end of the age Christ returns and takes away his saints, the wicked will be left, and Satan will reveal himself in all his malignity and power. His time then, however, will be short, as he will be overthrown and bound by Christ at the time of Christ's second coming. In the meantime he is spoken of in the Scriptures as "the god of this age." This explains the prevalence of so much evil and sin in the earth.

Satan does not hesitate to use signs and wonders as a means of accomplishing his purposes. He is the instigator of the belief in spiritualism which today is leading astray such a large number of people, including prominent scientists, who claim to have talked with the dead. He is behind Christian Science also, which denies the Atonement, and is the instigator of many other things of the same character. In view of the clear description of him given in the Scriptures, and the warnings issued to believers not to be ignorant of his devices, and of the fact that God offers to give us power to overcome him, it is the duty of Christians to study their Bibles more earnestly that they may know more about him and not fall a victim to his devices.

The address was the second of a series being given in St. Paul's Church on Bible Study and Prophecy. The third will be given next month, when the speaker will be Rev. Mr. Hollinrake, of the Barton Street Methodist Church, Hamilton. The meetings are proving intensely interesting.

NO CHINESE WALL SHOULD BE BUILT AROUND EMPIRE

Rev. J. P. Wilson Opposed to Suggestions of Certain Imperialists and to Military Training in Schools.

The Imperialism that would, when the war is over, erect a tariff wall around the Empire, would be constructing something in the nature of a Chinese wall. One danger that threatens an Empire is isolation. The United States, under the Monroe Doctrine, has isolated itself for over one hundred years.

What the British Empire requires after the war is not a military career but a great brotherhood of man.

War does not make great men but simply stages them. Physical culture rather than military training is what is needed in the school. Develop the physique of the pupils and they will be ready for military duty when war comes. The military training in Germany has produced a race of barbarians.

The above are a few of the outstanding points brought out by Rev. J. P. Wilson Saturday afternoon in an excellent address on the British Empire in the series that is being held under the auspices of the Otonabee Chapter, I.O.D.E. The speaker gave a brief history of the origin and development of the British race and dwelt on its glorious and triumphant present and bright future.

Speaking of the revolution in Russia, Mr. Wilson said that the change had been brought about without the shedding of blood simply because the people did not have access to strong drink.

There is unity such as was never known before in the British Empire, with only one exception, and even the South of Ireland will come back to the fold.

What the Russian got only last week the British people have been enjoying for the past thousand years.

Coming down to our own land, the speaker gave an account of the marvellous national development that has taken place since the Act of Confederation was passed in 1866.

Mr. Wilson congratulated the women on the acquisition of the franchise. Col. Stevenson, who presided, in tendering the speaker a vote of thanks, moved by Mr. J. A. Aylmer, and seconded by Miss Lancaster, stated that the splendid address had made him a more devoted patriot than ever.

With the advent of spring real estate is moving in real earnest and real estate men report many turnovers and prospects for good business.

But the householders are not in a happy frame of mind. There is a general tendency to raise the rents and on the first of April many tenants will begin to pay higher rent for their dwellings.

The owners say higher rents are necessary if they are to meet the large tax bills which confront them.

Open Bureau of Registration to Aid Farmers

SCHOOL BOARDS TO USE INFLUENCE ON OLDER BOYS TO DO FARM WORK.

HELP FOR HARVEST.

"Help for the harvest" was discussed at a meeting of the citizens at the city building on Saturday night.

The government, realizing that the farmers will be very short of experienced help this season, have appealed to the retired farmers or those who know anything about work on the farm to volunteer to assist in harvesting the 1917 crop.

It is proposed to have a registration bureau in each district to which the farmer will apply for help stating the date on which he wants the man.

The school boards will also be asked to use their influence on the older boys to spend their vacation profitably this season.

Mr. G. A. Gillespie, M.L.A., explained the matter to those present and offered his office as a bureau of registration and suggested the Speakers' Patriotic League as a body under which to organize for the work.

Another meeting will be called in the near future to take definite action on the government's appeal.

REV. T. A. WALKER AT ST. ANDREW'S

FORMER CLAGARY PASTOR AT BOTH SERVICES YESTERDAY.

Rev. T. A. Walker, of Owen Sound, and who for five years was pastor of the leading Presbyterian Church in Calgary, preached at both services in St. Andrew's yesterday. He is a fluent speaker, with enunciation so distinct that there is no difficulty in hearing him in any part of the auditorium. The subject of his discourse in the morning was "A Plain Man's View of Jesus," and in the evening he spoke on the rewards of a Christian life.

Mr. Walker addressed the Men's Class in the afternoon, giving an interesting account of life in the West and the business energy and the democratic spirit so characteristic of the people of that region.

"Well, I wish him luck," said Mr. Jones the other night after reading in the evening paper an account of the wedding of a popular member of the local hockey team. "But," he added, in a ruminating tone, "marriage is very much like hockey."

"Don't talk so ridiculous," snapped Mrs. Jones. "However can you compare hockey to marriage?"

"Why," replied Jones, "it looks so easy to those who haven't tried it!"

The Toothsome Oyster
Faced by Many Dangers
In Reaching Maturity

THE oyster has no easy time in reaching maturity and in arriving at that age and size at which men will esteem it as worth eating. They are liable to starve if the water in which they live is not rich enough in the peculiar food on which the oyster nourishes himself, and in addition to famine it has some active and vicious enemies. One of these is the drum fish and another is the star fish. A drum fish will grind an oyster into fragments and a star fish, by its arms and suckers, will open the oyster and then by turning its own stomach inside out will absorb it.

Then there is a little marine snail which drills a hole in the shell of an oyster, inserts its snout and extracts the meat. There is also, in some waters, a boring sponge called "cliona," which will kill an oyster, and there are other important enemies which are called in some parts of the world dog-whelk and whelk-tingle which bore through the shell of an oyster.

But before the oyster takes on his familiar form it has to run many risks. The embryos or "spats," having left the parent oyster, swim upon or close to the surface of the water with the multitude of other larval and adult creatures found there.

It is said that the oyster larvae are only about one one-hundred-and-fiftieth of an inch long. They are glassy-transparent, with one or two dark brown spots. In this stage they are food for many fish and things that live in water. When they sink to the bottom they will fix themselves to shells or stones or other hard objects if they can find them, and they soon become little white discs about one-twentieth of an inch in diameter. They have then become little oysters, and some of the highest authorities on the oyster say that for about three years under favorable conditions they will increase in diameter about one inch a year. After that the rate of growth is much slower, or perhaps it may not gain in size at all. It has been said that an oyster which has attained the age of twenty years is very rare, but that oysters of seven and ten years of age are common.

The oyster feeds on small particles that are suspended in the water, and among these are minute plants called diatoms. They are of great beauty under the microscope and are covered with transparent shells of quartz. These and other kinds of food drop to the bottom of the water in a kind of gentle drizzle, and the water containing them pours into the open shell of the oyster and is filtered through the gills. It has been estimated that a full grown oyster, in order to get enough food to live on, filters between twenty-five and thirty-five quarts of water a day and builds up its body by the use of microscopic food.

The oyster, or the genus "ostrea," is found all over the world, in the waters of the tropic and temperate zones, and there are about seventy species that have been identified. The United States is the greatest oyster-producing country in the world, and its people eat more oysters than any other. While the tabulated output of oysters for the whole world is about 30,000,000 bushels a year, the United States produces considerably more than 25,000,000 bushels. The great oyster states are Virginia, New York, New Jersey, Connecticut, Maryland, Rhode Island, North Carolina, Louisiana and California. [illegible] duces a small supply of oysters, principally from beds in the Gulf of St. Lawrence and along the coast of British Columbia.

After the United States, the greatest oyster-producing country is France, and there oyster culture is carried on with a nearer approach to perfection than elsewhere in the world.

Great Britain and Ireland, Holland and Italy are somewhat important producers of oysters in Europe. Oysters do not thrive in the Baltic sea, it being well known that the water is not salty enough, for oysters generally demand that the water contain at least three per cent. salt.

The oyster grounds of England, usually bed under culture, are in the Thames estuary and off Whitstable, Colchester, and Brightlingsea. The main places in the oyster fisheries and trade in Ireland are Wicklow, Queenstown, Galway, Moville and Ballyheige. Oystering in Scotland is a small industry, and the principal points of the trade are Inverary and Ballantrae. The principal centres of the French oyster industry are Arcachon and Brittany. In Holland oystering is carried on principally in the estuary of the Scheldt, and there is also an oyster-bearing territory known as the Schleswig Holstein.

It isn't so much the thing you do for others as the way you do it that wins you a legacy in your wife's cousin's aunt's will.

You can't gauge a man's feelings for a girl when he has to choose between a box of cigars and a box of candy.

Experience.

The signs that blaze along the way,
The woe by slips produced,
The bills the debtor has to pay,
The chicks that come to roost,
All point a warning strong, as do
The books upon the shelf,
But still the young man passing through
Must learn it for himself.

He will not take it secondhand,
Nor trust another's word,
Nor try his best to understand
From things that he has heard.
In childhood he has read about
The law of things that are,
But still he has to try them out
And fall for every jar.

His father counsels him in vain,
His mother heaves a sigh,
His teacher tries to make it plain
With precepts double ply,
But with a careless unconcern
Into the flame he jumps,
And with experience to burn
He has to take the bumps.

But that's the way it is in life.
A man must pay the price.
In picking horses or a wife
He will not take advice.
And it is very often that
His judgment flies the track.
But when he wins he has to pat
Himself upon the back.

Always a Pessimist.

"You don't look happy."

"I'm not."

"Well, but cheer up, anyway. Here's the annual holiday season coming on, when everybody forgets his trouble or tries to and pretends he's happy."

"Man, you know not what you say."

"Why, what's the matter?"

"I am the only simon pure original man who doesn't like cold turkey."

She Was the Trouble.

"I have a lot of trouble."

"Why don't you dramatize it?"

"Dramatize it?"

"Yes. That is what everybody is doing nowdays."

"Oh, but my wife could never go on the stage."

Certainly.

"Every man should learn how to cook."

"Do you think so?"

"I certainly do."

"But why?"

"So he can teach his wife."

The Canadian racing season opens at Toronto Saturday, May 19.

Toronto will not have any professional lacrosse this summer.

Joe Ray, the Illinois athletic marvel, says he got up his speed chasing horses. He's one man who accomplished something by following the ponies.

One Philadelphia writer confesses that Connie Mack has as much chance of winning the American League pennant as the Turks have of capturing London. Cheerful outlok!

Boston Braves will rely practically on their same old combination to win out in the American Baseball League.

Konetchy, Evers, Maranville and Smith will form the Boston National League club's infield.

Tom Longboat denies the rumor that he raced in California last month. He claims some other redskin is masquerading in false colors. The original Tom is cutting trees, not records, in the Old Country.

Detroit baseball fans are banking heavily on George Burns. They believe the big first baseman will have a great season.

Covaleski duels may be features in the American Baseball League this year. Detroit depends on Harry, while Cleveland fans believe Stanley will overshadow his older brother. John Covaleski also threatens to break into the big tent.

SMOKY JOE WOOD STILL IN RING HAS MUCH STUFF ON KNUCKLE BALL

NEW ORLEANS, March 26 — "Jack" Chesbro prolonged his life as a major leaguer by developing a wonderful spitball.

Other twirlers, after the hop on their fast one had vanished employed the emery ball, knuckle ball and kindred freak deliveries. I never used anything in my life but a fast ball, curve and slow ball, and when you see me substitute something else, just mark down in your book that Wood is stalling and about through as a pitcher." Thus Smoky Joe Wood unburdened himself.

"Perhaps you don't think I can throw a spiter or knuckle ball?" continued Woody.

Wood then started to warm up with Lee Fohl and announced that he would throw a spitter. He did, and the ball broke into the dirt with a sharp downward shoot.

The knuckle ball came next and it fooled Boss Fohl completely, taking a weird hop and shooting through his hands.

Wood has a hunch that he will be able to get by all right with his old repertoire: fast one, curve and slow ball. Fohl thinks so, too.

CURLING

The annual meeting of the Peterborough Curling Club will be held this evening at the club rooms.

In addition to the election of officers and the deciding on proposed amendments to the ice rules, the presentation of prizes won in the club competitions will be made.

New York cannot abolish fighting altogether. There are too many ball leagues there.

OBSTACLES.

Do not let obstacles conquer you. Any one who rides a bicycle or runs a motorcar knows that the way to go straight and avoid obstacles is to look past them down the road. By looking at the obstacles one steers right into them in spite of oneself. So in life, when obstacles are ahead, one should look past them, keep the eye on the right road, and so run past and forward.

Light From Broken Crystals.

It has been noticed that a soft bluish light has occasionally been seen when a scoop was scraped across solidly caked sugar in the bin. Loose sugar does not show this glow, nor does granulated. The cause of the peculiar light is in the fracturing of the sugar crystals. Luminescence of this type accompanies the breaking of crystals of a number of different substances, but in none is more pronounced than in rock candy. To get the best effect place lumps of rock candy between the jaws of nutcrackers or forceps and suddenly crush the crystal to fragments. If the room has previously been darkened the flash of light may be seen at a distance of twenty yards.

A Mistake Somewhere.

"Is it true, Miss Gertie," he said, "that there are just two things a woman will jump at—a conclusion and a mouse?"

"No," she answered; "there is a third, Mr. Philip."

After thinking the matter over a few moments he tremblingly made her an offer, but she didn't jump at it. He was not the right man.

The Waist.

An imaginary line is the waist,
Which seldom stays long where it's placed,
But ambles and skips
'Twixt the shoulders and hips,
According to popular taste.

Holding the Form.

The newspaper humorist went courting. He stayed late, very late, so late that the old man called down to his daughter, "Phyllis, hasn't the morning paper come yet?"

"No, sir," answered the funny man, "we are holding the form for an important decision."

And the old man went back to bed wondering if they would keep house or live with him.

EDITOR'S MAIL

WHAT IS WRONG?

Here is the case of a woman of intelligence and good intentions who is unable to save. She writes for counsel.

She is mother of four children ages 3, 7, 9 and 11. Her husband usually earns $25 a week. Recently his average has risen to $33 and during the last two months he has earned $35 a week.

"A friend of mine," this woman writes, "is doing wonders on a salary similar to my husband's. I really would like to save, but I don't know how. I haven't anyone to advise me, for my mother (who was a wonderful manager) is dead.

"We not only do not save, but we are $600 in debt for various expenses, mainly doctors' bills.

"Something is radically wrong in my system for we are actually worse off than when my husband averaged only $18 a week ten years ago.

"Here is a list of our usual monthly expenditures: Rent, $18; gas, $5; insurance, $5; milk, $3; coal and wood, $9; laundry, $6; table, $39; music tuition, $4.50; husband's expenses, $26; newspapers, 85 cents.

"That leaves from $26 to $35 a month, which goes toward the slow reduction of our debt, for shoes and hair ribbons, and the many, many things we seem to need so badly that we can't get along without. I pride myself on the fact that all of us are well fed and nicely dressed.

"But I can't save! How can I do it? Can you suggest a way?"

Hubby's expenses are too high. No man of his earning capacity has a right to spend $26 a month on himself unless he clothes and partially boards himself out of the amount. Our correspondent has here a fine chance for home mission work.

The $5 for insurance should not be classed as an expense as it is really so much money put in the bank to provide for the future.—Ed. Review.

Novelty.

"Anything new in the show?" asked the local manager.

"Yes," answered the visiting agent. "The biggest supply of new songs, new faces, new jokes, ever shown in captivity. Just to show you the trouble we've taken with that show, we've been collecting all that material for the last ten years."

Lonesome Eve.

Eve was the only woman who
Ne'er turned around to see
Just what the other woman wore,
With that you will agree!

Keep Cool.

"This cold and stately beauty seems to have a great many admirers."

"Yes. She's a sort of cold storage proposition."

"How's that?"

"When a man intrusts his heart to her she puts it on ice."

Riddle of the Ages.

O woman, you're a mystery!
You'll spend four hours of time
And ten bucks worth of energy
To save a measly dime.

SOLDIERS OF THE KING MILITARY NOTES

Pte. Harry Luzi, serving with the 6th Canadian Field Ambulance in France, writes to Mrs. Herbert Hinchcliffe, Edinburgh St., thanking Mrs. Hinchcliffe for a letter and parcel. He says:

"I wish you would continue to write as I have few friends in Canada. I was born in Italy and came to Canada when eight years old. I am 28 years old and lived in Montreal before the war, so of course I am a Canadian now and fighting for Canada and God and everything that is right. I am in the trenches and it is cold. We had your pudding for dinner today as desert, as that is a scarcity out here, and I am keeping the gum, candy and peanuts for another day.

"I will send you my picture when I go on furlough to England."

A Delicious Cup of Tea.

If you want to keep your friends guessing get from your druggist an eighth of a pound of dried orange blossoms (they are very expensive) and steep two or three to a cupful along with your tea leaves. Omit sugar, lemon or cream, as either cloys the delicate flavor of the orange buds. Be sure you get them strictly fresh and from a receptacle tightly covered and keep them air tight yourself. This novel idea was introduced into smart studios by a clever Frenchwoman and proved very popular.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. A. C. Hie of Dunsford. There were about fifty guests present. The bride wore a suit of white silk velvet with hat to match and was assisted by Miss Fern Kelly, sister of the groom.

The groom was supported by the bride's brother, Mr. Wm. Smith. The happy couple left amid showers of rice and confetti on the 4.50 train for Peterborough and Port Hope. The bride travelled in a blue military suit with hat to match.

Allan Ketcheson and Lieut. Harder.

OBITUARY

DANIEL MALONEY

Death last night claimed an esteemed and respected resident of Douro in the person of Daniel Maloney. The late Mr. Maloney had been in failing health for over a year but three months ago his condition grew more serious and he sank gradually until the end came peacefully last night at 9.30.

Deceased was a life-long resident of Douro, having been born there 64 years ago, and was one of the township's most prosperous farmers. He was a man of principle, his many sterling qualities kind words and charitable disposition endearing him to everyone with whom he came in contact. He was a faithful member of St. Paul's Roman Catholic Church, Lakefield, where he will be greatly missed as his willing hand was always ready to lend assistance when duty called him. Deceased is survived by his wife, formerly Miss Joanna McCarthy, who with four daughters and three sons mourn the loss of an effectionate husband and father. They are Bridget, Mary, Josephine and Carrie, Roger, Edward and Dan. One brother, Thomas, of this city, and two sisters Mrs. B. Leahy, Douro, and Mrs. John Shea, Santo Rosa, Cal., also survive. The funeral will leave the family residence, Lot 11, Con 8, Douro, at 8.30 Wednesday morning, proceeding to St. Peter's Cathedral and St. Peter's Cemetery for interment.

CLARION J. BAKER

Clarion J., the only son and only child of Dr. and Mrs. W. A. Baker of Hunter St. East, passed away quietly at 11.30 today after a few weeks' illness.

Private funeral service at 4 o'clock Tuesday afternoon, after which the remains will be taken to Aylmer, Ont., for interment.

A FINE OF $20

TEAMSTER INTOXICATED WHILE IN CHARGE OF HORSES.

John F. Condon was fined $20 and $9.75 costs at Lakefield this morning on a charge laid by Inspector Stewart.

The evidence showed that Condon drove into the village from his home in Douro with a load of logs. When he arrived in Lakefield he was so much under the influence of liquor that he allowed the horses to go their own way. The matter was reported to the inspector and a summons issued by Magistrate Langley brought the accused into court for an infraction of the Ontario Temperance Act. The fine was paid

FRENCH OCCUPY NORTHERN PART OF COUCY WOOD AND CAPTURE VILLAGE

Brilliant Night-Attack Wins Town Energetically Defended by the Germans--- Farm and Support Point Also Won.

FOE REPULSED IN LORRAINE

Berlin Announces Retirement by Germans to Avoid Being Outflanked by Entente Troops.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, March 27.—(Official Statement.)—"South of the Oise we continued to make progress in the lower forest of Coucy, all of the northern part of which we occupied. The enemy was driven beyond the Barisis-Servais line. South of the forest our troops made a brilliant night attack and captured the village of Coucy le Chateau, which was defended energetically by the Germans.

"In the region north of Soissons we captured a farm northwest of Margival and a point of support held in strength by the enemy.

"In the Argonne we made a successful surprise attack in the sector of Four de Paris, taking prisoners.

"In Lorraine enemy attacks on small French posts in the region of Letriecourt were repulsed completely.

"Elsewhere the night passed in quiet."

BERLIN, March 27.—The occupation by Entente troops of the French town of Roisel after repeated efforts is announced by the war office.

In the forest between the Oise and Coucy Le Chateau German troops gave way to avoid being outflanked.

According to the war office statement issued last night in Paris, the French, after determined fighting, managed to thrust back the Germans from the towns of Folembray and Le Feuilles. This conquered territory lies between Coucy and the forest of Coucy. The statement also chronicles progress to the north of Soissons in the neighborhood of Vregny.

During the day between the Somme and the Oise German forces made repeated assaults upon the new line won by the French south of St. Quentin. That this French forward thrust threatens the German hold on St. Quentin is indicated by the vigor of the Teuton counter-attacks, which, Paris declares, resulted only in heavy and useless sacrifices. Not only were all the French positions maintained in their entirety, but enemy assemblies between Benay and Orvillers were dispersed by artillery fire.

British Take Lagnicourt.

Though the British are moving forward more slowly than the French, Haig's forces continue to advance. The British official report chronicles the capture of the village of Lagnicourt after brisk fighting.

"North of the Bapaume-Cambrai road," adds the report, "we took 30 prisoners and a machine gun. During the afternoon the enemy delivered determined counter-attacks from the east and northeast, but were driven off. A third attack, caught in the open by our artillery, failed to develop."

CHURCH SHEDS CLOSED TO FARMERS WHO SEEK FREE SHELTER FOR STEEDS

Farmers who have been using the church sheds for their horses free of charge instead of paying a small fee to the standard hotel owners for the service are shocked. The edict has gone out against them.

Several of the church governing bodies have issued orders that a lock is to be put on the gate leading to the sheds and only members of the congregation who have keys will be allowed to use the sheds.

The police will be asked to get after other places where free stabling is causing a nuisance to the citizens.

Failed to Draft the Regulations for Free Market.

RIDICULOUS!

What constitutes a free market? This was the subject of considerable discussion at the property committee meeting last night. The meeting had been called by Chairman Saunders for the purpose of drawing up regulations for a free market as passed by the council.

When asked to state what he considered a free market Ald. Saunders replied that in his opinion it was a market free to the farmers for everything, including the weighing of their produce.

Ald. Dobbin was opposed to the weighing being included on the free list.

Ald. Langford, who was absent at the last council meeting, was opposed to the free market.

Opinion Unchanged

Ald. Duncan had not changed his opinion. He would again recommend to the council that Fisher's tender be accepted. Lindsay had killed her market by making it free.

Ald. Dobbin wanted to know how the committee was going to get around the deputation of merchants and others.

Ald. Smith was open to conviction. He was in favor of giving the free market a trial. Since the last council meeting he had been commended for voting for a free market and had also been told that it was a mistake.

If it was going to upset the applecart he would not change.

Ald. Duncan had spoken with a number of farmers and they thought the free market was ridiculous. The taxpayer must be considered as well as the farmer. The ratepayers realized that the benefits to them would be the same but they would have to pay an extra rate of tax.

Ald. Taylor and Langford were of the same opinion as Ald. Duncan.

Mayor Duffus remarked that Chairman Saunders' idea for a free market was "whole hog or none." He thought that the committee should draw up regulations as requested, even if the resolution was sent back to the Council. He was open to conviction that a free market was beneficial.

Ald. Duncan moved, seconded by Ald. Langford, that the committee having considered the free market regulations again recommend to the council the tender of Walter Fisher of $720 for the tolls be accepted.

Will Find Out

Mayor Duffus inquired whether the police were having an occasional load of coal weighed on the market scales. When coal was so dear, it ought to be tested.

Chairman Saunders will investigate.

German Socialist Says Submarine Won't Starve England.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

NEW YORK, March 27.—A news agency despatch from The Hague says four thousand German soldiers have crossed the border into Holland seeking food and have been interned at Zwolle.

STOCKHOLM, March 27—In an interview here with the Associated Press Dr. Albert Suedekum, a prominent Socialist member of the German Reichstag, said anyone who thought the submarine warfare was going to cause starvation in England in six months was deceiving himself. Neither was there any danger of a food shortage affecting the Germans' military strength, even if the war lasted a year or two longer, because of the large reserve of animals, of which all but those necessary for breeding, could be slaughtered.

CENTRAL POWERS PLAN CAMPAIGN AGAINST ITALY

General Confidence That the Nation is Fully Prepared and Can Meet Any Blow Directed at Her.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

ROME, March 27. — Information reaching the Italian press from Switzerland has convinced Italian newspapers that the Central Powers have planned a great campaign against Italy for the early spring.

There is no uneasiness over it, but rather a general confidence that Italy is fully prepared and can meet any blow directed against her. General Cadorna is quoted as saying he is acting on the supposition that they will come in force, and he is conscious of having neglected nothing that experience may have taught.

NICKEL TAX WILL MEAN INCREASE IN REVENUE

New Scale Will Raise Public Receipts by Nearly Million and a Quarter Annually.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

TORONTO, March 27—It is reported that a Conservative caucus this morning favored the adopted of the advice of the Nickel Commission's report to raise the minimum tax on nickel net profits from three to five per cent., with a sliding scale. It is expected that the increased revenue from the present figures will amount to from thee hundred thousand to a million and a half annually.

Legislation may be introduced this afternoon.

The Commission found that the present method of taxation of net profits is the fairest and best. If, in view of increased revenue, it should be necessary to call upon the mining industry for a larger contribution, the Commissioners are of the opinion that the [illegible] rate of three per cent. should not be raised beyond five per cent.

To expropriate the deposits plants of the Sudbury nickel area would, judging from sales of company shares, probably cost not less than $100,000,000.

There does not seem to be any good reason why the people of Ontario should be asked to adventure so large a sum of money as would be required for the purchase of the nickel deposits and plants.

FISH SMOTHER

STAMPEDE AT BUTTERNUT CREEK.

Thousands of carp and other fish in the waters of the Balsam Lake district have been smothered to death this winter, according to word received from the northern waters. Unusual ice conditions prevented the fish from getting air.

Butternut Creek, which is open during the winter, was the scene of a stampede by the fish in their quest for ozone but large numbers of them have been lost.

PETERBOROUGH, TUESDAY, MARCH 27, 1917

LIBERALISM AND LABOR.

WHAT HAS LIBERALISM, as represented in West Peterborough, ever done on behalf of Labor? What did Liberalism in this city do for, and to, Labor a little over a year ago in the municipal election? Certainly not enough to warrant it in asking now for the support of the workingmen.

When J. J. Hartley was nominated for mayor in 1915 he was president of the Trades Council, a position which he holds today. He had for years before his nomination been in the same place of honor in the local Liberal Association. He was chosen on account of his prominence in both organizations, and did not rely entirely upon the promised support of the workingmen. Mr. Hartley would never have consented to become a candidate for mayor for the second time if he had not been assured of the loyal support of the members of the party with which he had been so long and so prominently identified.

In the early stages of the campaign it was on the cards that Mr. Hartley was to have only one opponent in the person of G. Walter Green, who was coming to the front at a pace so rapid that it alarmed the ambitious in his own camp. Mr. Green was a new force to be reckoned with, for his friends were already grooming him for the nomination for the Dominion Parliament, and his election as mayor would mean a long boost toward the summit of this ambition. Mr. Hartley was chosen by the anti-Green wing of the Liberals, those who believed that the fleshpots and the spoils belonged to them by right, to put the extinguisher on the rising light in the party.

When Mayor Duffus entered the field the plan of campaign was changed. The hide-bound Liberals could not disassociate themselves from party ties. Here was an opportunity to vote the ticket and not do violence to their set habits by voting for a representative of Labor.

Mr. Hartley for the second time was knifed in the dark by his political associates, the same associates who now, with brazen effrontery, ask favors of the party whose representative they threw into the air without compunction only a few months ago.

TEMPERING JUSTICE.

IT WAS FORMER Provincial Secretary Hanna who first introduced into Ontario sane and humane methods of dealing with those who offended for the first time against he majesty of the law, and these methods, including the prison farm at Guelph, have been studied and adopted by penologists all over the civilized world. Mr. Hanna's good work is to be carried on still further, and a bill has been introduced into the Legislature providing for the parole of prisoners who have shown a disposition to reform while undergoing incarceration. A new Board of Parole is to be appointed and one of the duties of the members will be to assist paroled prisoners to procure employment with trustworthy persons. A sum of money is to be appropriated for a Prisoners' Assistance Fund, and this will be expended in securing positions for the paroled and in providing them with the tools and equipment necessary to enable them to get a new start in life.

The object of all punishment is now held to be reformatory, and, this being the case, the Legislature appears to have taken the right method to accomplish that end.

THE PLAYGROUND ASSOCIATION.

MANAGED MAINLY by the public-spirited women of the city, the Playgrounds Association last season was a success in every sense of the term. Eevn though the resources were limited, the Association, by careful management, has a small balance on hand. Both playgrounds maintained last summer were well patronized, the one at the King Edward School especially so. It is estimated, too, that of the children who availed themselves of this privilege, at least fifty per cent. were the offspring of men who were with the Canadian army either in the training camps at home or in Europe.

At the annual meeting last night the spirit of interest displayed forecasts another successful season. The members the Association, however, are naturally disappointed over the refusal of the aldermen to establish public bathing beaches, which is the one adjunct required to make the work of the Association all but perfect in every detail. The impression seemed to prevail that the aldermen had not given the various deputations a square deal and that the city fathers had turned down a proposition for which there had been a majority demand. Chief Howard was the only member of the Association who spoke on behalf of the aldermen and he did it to some purpose, taking the stand that they ahd acted in good faith and according to what they believed was for the best interests of the city. Depuations may have asked for the bathing beaches, but other ratepayers were just as emphatic on the other side of the question.

The members of the Association have not yet abandoned hope. They believe that on a strict interpretation of parliamentary rules the matter must again come before Council from the Committee of the Whole. In that event, they are hopeful of Alderman Weir, who, at the outset, announced that he would not vote for a grant for this purpose unless some financial assistance was extended to the 247th Battalion. This aid has been given, so, as the members of the Association see it, Alderman Weir's duty lies plain before him. With his expected change of vote and Alderman Worth back in his place, the question would result in a tie, to be decided by the casting vote of Mayor Duffus, who, it is believed, is friendly to the proposition.

RIP VAN WINKLE NOT SO BAD.

OUR NEIGHBOR, still smarting from the collapse of one of its pet educational fads, somewhat spitefully refers to The Review as "a Rip Van Winkle" contemporary. Even at that we might be worse. The immortal hero of that famous story did, it is true, sleep for an unconscionable number of years, but he did eventually wake up and attempt to catch step with the world in its march of progress. Better slumber under such conditions than remain dormant forever, making no motion save that of a man wandering aimlessly around in his sleep while he dreams of the glories of the past without realizing the blessings with which he is surrounded.

THE FARMER AND THE LEGISLATURE.

THE REVIEW BELIEVES, with Mr. Gillespie, the local representative of West Peterborough, that the farmers are in considerable of a bad case, one of the reasons to account for which condition is the scarcity of labor. If prices have gone up, production has fallen off, and it costs the farmer nearly twice as much to produce a bushel of potatoes or grain as it did even five years ago. Everything has increased in price except the farmer's possessions. The value of his land is kept down by the very difficulty met with in getting sufficient help to cultivate it properly. No man would buy a factory at any price unless he was sure of his ability to man it in every department. No man cares to tie up ready money in a farm that will not produce a reasonable return on the outlay.

The farmer is the hardest working individual in the world today, toiling as he does early and late, and exposed to all kinds of weather. He is the most scantily paid, too, and very often nothing beyond a bare living is left him when the hired man's wages and the taxes are paid.

Bad as the condition of the farmer is, it is not, however, as deplorable as some members of the Opposition in the Legislature claim. These gentlement are striving to induce the farmer to believe that he is neglected by the Hearst Government. He is told that they are without a Minister of Agriculture, while Sir William Hearst is himself acting in that capacity. The Dominion and Provincial Governments have done and are doing everything possible to encourage production, and various plans have been proposed to secure farm labor. Only last Saturday night a meeting was held here under administrative auspices with this end in view.

The Hearst Government has a bill before the Legislature to aid the farmer still further by loaning him money to make permanent improvemnets on his land, improvements that would increase the production of his soil by at least fifty per cent. This money will be loaned on easy terms and at a lower rate of interest than the farmer can get it from any private party, if able to get it at all. The beneficiaries of such legislation have no cause to complain of the Government which adopts it.

The agricultural bill referred to is only one of a score of instances of constructive and progressive statesmanship that are being placed to the credit of the Hearst Government at the session now in progress

THE COPPERHEADS AT HOME.

WHILE SIR ROBERT BORDEN is in England representing Canada at the Imperial War Conference that has been called to centralize every effort at the centre of the Empire, and in the overseas dominions in the conduct of the war, the Liberals at home are taking advantage of his absence by scheming to divide the Canadian people, with the one object before them of getting back into office. A meeting was held recently in Montreal and was presided over by a prominent Liberal in that city. A Liberal candidate for the House of Commons was one of the speakers. The Liberal Government in Quebec is assailed by its own party adherents for doing too much for the war, while the Conservative Government at Toronto is criticized by the party press for doing too little.

Our local contemporary joins in the partisan chorus and execrates the Borden Government for not doing something to stimulate recruiting. Party papers of the same stripe in Quebec call down maledictions on his head for even taking a National Service census. What chance in a general election has a party so hopelessly divided against itself?

EDOUARD BLONDIN, PATRIOT

Hon. P. E. Blondin's answer to those who charged him with disloyalty is to offer his services to King and country on the field of battle. It is an answer that is characteristic of the man and entirely in keeping with the fine spirit of patriotism that has distinguished his conduct since the first day of the war. Despising the taunts and jeers of men whose loyalty and Canadianism never measured up to his own, Mr. Blondin has labored industriously, unceasingly and not unsuccessfully during the past two years to awaken his compatriots to the supreme duty of the hour. No finer speeches in the cause of the British Empire, of humanity, freedom and democracy have been spoken than those delivered by this young French-Canadian statesman who now implements noble language by a self-sacrificing deed. Unlike many others, it was never his wont to talk one way in Quebec and another way in Ontario. Speaking last year before the Empire Club in Toronto, he concluded with this splendid peroration:

"Happen what may to me, happen what may to this Government afterwards—I care not—we care not so long as this country is safe, so long as this Empire of freedom is safe. Nay, let us put it the way the Allies put it, in the way it will resound for centuries in the temples of nations: What matters it whether we live or not, so long as the heritage of nineteen centuries of civilization is left for those who come after us. Rather die with liberty than live in slavery."

But equally fine was his speech to French-Canadians at Nicolet a few days before, with this impressive warning:

"What Belgium is and Northern France, what Serbia and Poland have become, we may be tomorrow. This is the question of the hour, the only one. The most solemn hour in the history of the world has struck. Thousands of miles from her a grim game is being played, with the world's destiny and our destiny at stake. On the fate of the Empire, on the success of the Allies depends our own fate. Conquered, the Allies must leave our commerce, our institutions and our liberties defenceless in the hands of Germany, the land of militarism autocracy and barbarity."

Mr. Blondin, like others who have gone before, has had slurs cast against his sincerity and his patriotism. He is reputed to have said something about shooting holes through the British flag, in connection with some memories of the rebellion of 1838, when many Canadians, both French-speaking and English speaking took to arms against a regime which was in some respects both autocratic and unjust. But like John J. C. Abbott, who, after signing in his youth a manifesto for annexation to the United States, became a Prime Minister of Canada and a British Knight, and like Thomas D'Arcy McGee who from being a Young Irelander in 1848 became the warmest advocate of British rule in Canada, Mr. Blondin has shown that he has heart enough and brains enough to advance a good cause when the good cause calls. As the Montreal Herald, a politically opposed newspaper, said generously:

"Mr. Blondin, as one who at the bottom of his heart perhaps really loves and respects the British flag, may have exercised a sort of family privilege by abusing it, but he evidently does not intend that any outsider shall have the privilege of doing so, if he can help it."

It is not by what they did or said before the war but by what they say and do during the war, that men will be judged in this country after the war. Pierre Edouard Blondin may have said things years ago that it were better to have left unsaid; but at the first sign of danger he proved himself a Briton. Canadians today, irrespective of party, salute him as a patriot and a man.

Wit and Wisdom

Mrs. DeTroop (who was short-sighted) Good mornnig, Mrs. Simpkins. Your husband must be fond of garden. I saw him the first thing this morning at the bottom of the garden And how well he looks, to be sure.

Mrs. Simpkins turned her back and slammed the door in her neighbor's face.

The latter, aghast, went to tell her daughter.

"And you told her, mother, that the thing in the onion bed was her husband?"

"Of course I did."

"Well, that's not her husband; that's a scarecrow."

Mr. Goteoin—Now, Willie, when your sister comes down and is comfortably seated on the couch with me I want you to tiptoe in softly and turn the gas down low. Will you?

Willie—You're too late. Sister told me to come in and turn it out.

Man with One Leg—Yes, sir, I fell over the side of the ship and a shark 'e came along and grabbed me by the leg.

"Good gracious! And what did you do?"

"Let 'im 'ave the leg, o' course. I never argues with sharks."

Diminishing Portions

She has a little less.

Children's Fibs

A fond parent was telling Oliver Herford of the really bright remarks of her three-year-old daughter. Herford was much impressed.

"How old did you say little Lena is?" he asked.

"Only three," answered the mother, proudly.

"Do you know," said the humorist, solemnly, "I have a suspicion that sometimes these children lie about their age."

Her Husband's or Hers

The fair customer made her way to the counter. "I want to see some socks," she said.

The elderly assistant produced boxes immediately.

"For your husband, madam?" he asked, as he opened one; "or something of a better quality?"

College Men's Ways

Gertie: How can you tell a man who has been to college?

Alphonse: Oh, when he opens a letter he always looks to see if there is a cheque.

It is said that men who never drink, smoke or stay out late at night live to a ripe old age. Perhaps that's their punishment.

Let us tarry awhile at the sign of the smile.

We never know how happy we were until we aren't.

Candor is always a good thing but there is no room for it in official war reports.

Some young men propose to a rich girl on their knees and some on their uppers.

Do not try to please everybody, or you will soon be a worn-out weather vane.

Misfortune comes often to the man who makes no effective effort to see it first.

Some people like to tell the truth when they become inured to the hardships it entails.

About the time a man begins to have good common sense old age makes him childish and he can't use it.

Any girl who punctuates a love letter is mistaken in thinking there is something the matter with her heart.

After a man is married he thinks it frightfully poor taste for his wife to remind him of his prenuptial promises.

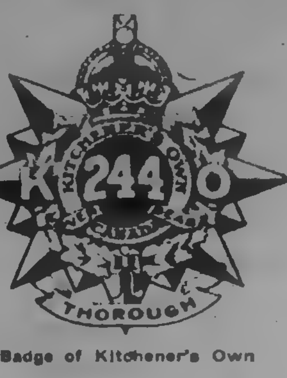
KITCHENER'S CANADIANS

Battalion as Nation-wide Tribute to Late War Minister

A tribute to Kitchener in the form of a crack battalion for overseas, was the idea upon which a group of energetic Montreal officers worked in the organisation of the 244th (Kitchener's Own) Overseas Battalion. The "K. C.'s" went into barracks in the autumn of 1916, although only half up to strength, but determined to set a high standard of efficiency. In making the regiment and its tribute to the Organiser of Armies a national one the officer commanding, Lieut.-Col. Fred M. McRobie, of the Victoria Rifles of Montreal, had the support of Sir Sam Hughes. Assurance was secured from the Militia Department that the battalion would not be broken up overseas but would go into the trenches as a unit and not as reinforcements for any other unit. It was felt that it would be derogatory to the name of the late Earl Kitchener and a blot upon the name of Canada if Canada's specific offering of soldiers to the memory of the great soldier did not become a permanent body.



Badge of Kitchener's Own

Kitchener's Own shared the privilege possessed by few infantry organisations of recruiting from anywhere in Canada. The wealthy supporters of the Victoria Rifles and the 244th were able to guarantee from the very first free transportation to Montreal from any part of Canada to prospective K. C. men who had been attested by a doctor for overseas service. This offer was taken advantage of by many who wished to join a distinctive unit and recruits came in by ones and twos from the Pacific coast, the Peace River country and the Maritime Provinces as well as from the Montreal district. These men had never heard a recruiting speech on behalf of the 244th but had long wished to join an all-Canadian unit and were specially drawn by the idea of at once paying a tribute of respect to Kitchener and preparing for overseas service in a unit that would be likely to be more than temporary in character.

HOW SOUTHAM DIED

Revenge For Major of 40th "Sportsmens" Battery

A letter was received in Hamilton by A. Kirkpatrick from his son, Driver P. G. Kirkpatrick, of the 40th battery, from "Somewhere in France," giving particulars of the death of Major Gordon Southam, the former Toronto 'Varsity rugby star and sergeant major Harvey, the Orillia hockey star. Driver Kirkpatrick said: "You have heard of the two casualties we had. Our battery, along with the rest of the brigade, was doing special work, therefore our guns moved forward slightly, and while we were getting prepared Fritz put over a few coal boxes as we call them, and it was one of these that struck our major and sergeant major.

"Major Southam had just given orders to vacate, and it was while he was seeing that everything was O.K., before leaving himself, that it happened. It certainly threw somewhat of a gloom among the boys, as the two best men were taken, but then I think there is a slight bit of Indian nature lurking around, and the voice of the crowd was 'revenge.' While this was going on I was up to our forward observing station with Mr. Scott, so I am thankful to say did not see it.

"Major Southam was a boy amongst the boys, and when we were in tight corners (and we have been in a few of them) he was the head always, and would ask no person to do anything or go any place he would not do or go himself. As much can be said for Sergt.-Major Harvey, as he certainly was a prince with the boys, and a man when on business. Their deaths were caused purely by self-sacrifice, on the part of both. Two other men were slightly wounded, one being a headquarters' man."

COST OF NEWSPAPERS

Making a newspaper is a complicated business, and the list of ingredients in this commercial pudding may prove surprising to many. Rubber, drugs, carbonic acid, felt, cotton, glycerine, gum arabic, and metals of various sorts enter into the mess—all this outside the white paper, ink, the paste, and the wrappers. Some increases in the price of these ingredients may serve to convey an idea of the increased cost of newspaper production. The cost of white paper has increased. Postage has gone up 33 per cent., carbonic acid 700 per cent., gum arabic 90 per cent., ink 20 per cent., press felts 69 per cent., rubber 33 per cent., glycerine 100 per cent., metal 70 per cent., wrappers 81 per cent., wipers 67 per cent. Can any other line of business show increases in all its producing material to match these increases in the making of a newspaper? We do not think so. In addition wages and office expenses have gone up proportionately. Wages have increased 31 per cent., while office expenses have increased 35 per cent. And the end is not yet apparently.—Ottawa Citizen.

First Labor Senator

HON. GIDEON ROBERTSON of Welland, Ontario, a telegrapher and union official, was nominated Senator of Canada by Sir Robert Borden, following excellent work in obviating labor troubles on the railways. He thus became the first representative of organized labor in the Red Chamber at Ottawa.

NEW HEALTH IDEALS

A Good Body, a Good Mind and Good Moral Objectives

Much interest was aroused in an address given in Winnipeg by Dr. Stewart Fraser, chairman of the provincial board of health. There were three essentials to good citizenship, Dr. Fraser said, a good body, a good mind, and good moral ideals.

Two out of the three requisites had been taken care of by the British people and one essential neglected. "The schools are provided to take care of the mental development, the moral ideals are taken care of by the ministers in the churches and Sunday schools, but there has been no one here to preach the gospel of a sound body," Mr. Fraser said.

Stress was laid on the importance of arousing public opinion to the fact that the body as the home of the intellect and the ideals must be groomed, developed and cared for in order to be a suitable vehicle. The body is the jewel case which holds the twin jewels of mind and ideals, and it must be suitable or else they can only be "jewels in the rough."

Dr. Fraser outlined the system being followed by the provincial board in sending nurses to the homes and to the schools in order that the children may be reached and through them the mothers. Statistics were not available for Manitoba so far, as to death resulting from preventable diseases but their number was appalling. Dr. Fraser had no sympathy with the old theory "of ills to which the flesh is heir," but states firmly that practically all the ills are preventable and that the human body, were it not for man's improvidence, "would run until worn out."

FARM FOR PROFIT

Farmers, What About Your Side lines"?

A farmer writes: The farm without a side line is not, practically speaking, good farming. The man who has nothing to sell but "just wheat" may make good money for a time, but if he thinks he is selling wheat alone he is wrong, for he is also selling the farm, unless he is purchasing some one else's fertiliser, and I think you would travel a long way in this country to find the man who would do this. I have lots of side lines but none of which are on a very extensive scale, really each line can be considered very small, yet each one is worked so as to bring in good prices, and we do not market these unless we get a good figure. There is always a time nowadays when farm products will fetch a good figure, in fact what is generally considered a fancy price.

Take the larger items into consideration, such as live stock. Usually a man must have a good big bunch, in fact, a carload to realize to the greatest advantage, but if a man will watch his chance and his markets, he can realize big profits on several head, yes, and even on one beast, or he may co-operate with his neighbors and make up a good shipment. Wheat is my greatest product, but it is chiefly grown and sold for seed; therefore, has to be recleaned, and gives me more chicken feed than I can use for my own poultry. This I keep till the following summer and invariably get a good price.

Oats are always a special crop and by growing these on good ground I always have choice seed, of which I have never been able to supply enough to meet the demand. So with the barley, but it is not as profitable as oats except as feed on the farm. This generally leaves lots of feed for home use, and a few cattle and hogs well fed will make big returns out of the screenings and any surplus feed. I aim to get my steer or steers shoved right along to be in extra good shape at two and a quarter years old, and kill them myself. Good, fat, young beeves will always bring top notch prices either in country or town. People will, or rather do, prefer it off the farm in preference to purchasing it from the butcher's shop, that is, those that can purchase by the quarter. With hogs, no matter how much more meat I have than is required for home consumption, I kill them at home and make the most of it into bacon, and it is very seldom that I have enough to supply demand at a high figure. It is much better, as a general rule, than what is found on the butcher's counter, and as it will keep indefinitely I hold it until I get my price. We sell eggs when these are a good or fair price, and eat them when too cheap, and usually have some for winter market.

STANDING ON PARAPET CANADIAN DEFIED ALL

Famous Canadian Pugilist, "Jersey" Baldwin, Fought Huns, Boers and Police—Champion's Death

"Killed in action—Infantry, 27,982, John Baldwin, kin at 374 Wellesley street, Toronto." So runs the last record of "Jersey" Baldwin, whose 52 years of life saw so much of battling, in uniform and out. There never was a time when "Jersey" was not willing to "take them all on," and he barred nobody. He fought in the South African War, in India, in France, in the squared circle of the boxer, and on the broad highway with a "cop" or two on the other side of the argument. He was not a scientific boxer, but an earnest one, and powerful, and a winner of several championships as an amateur before he undertook the more serious business of fighting the Hun.

Fists vs. Bullets

Even in France and Belgium he was eager to get at the German in close quarters, and military discipline was irksome when there was a chance of coming to grips. "Soldier Bill" Grant, who commanded his company in the early part of the war, told of more than one occasion when "Jersey" boldly climbed out of the trench, and, standing exposed on the parapet, defied any German, or any three of them, to come out into "No Man's Land" and tackle him hand to hand. More than once, too, he was fired on while proclaiming his challenge, but he never came down until he was pulled back into safety by his mates.

With Boys Against Police

One of "Jersey's" exploits was to whip a couple of policemen up Riverdale Park way in Toronto one afternoon, and for days he defied the resources of the constabulary as an "outlaw" in a place of shelter up the Don River there. All the lads of the neighborhood knew his hiding place, and he had no lack of supplies during his period of exile from his accustomed haunts, but the loyalty and admiration of the boys never admitted the possibility of his being overcome by the guardians of the law until he voluntarily abandoned his attempt to set up a kingdom of his own.

And then he laid down his life, cheerfully, one may be sure, just as he did all things, for his fighting instinct was grounded on willingness. He had been wounded before, and was in the hospital after the battle of St. Julien, but returned to service just as soon as he was allowed.

TOWNSHEND---"WHAT A MAN TO FOLLOW"

Private's Tribute to Heroic British General Who Defended Kut—Tragic Incidents

Little by little the heroic epic of the British defence of Kut under the great Townshend comes to light. A despatch rider, Private Lutener of the Seventh Hussars, since returned to England, has added incidents to the general store of knowledge. One evening Lutener was lying in his bed in Kut hospital chatting to two comrades, a sergeant and a private. Suddenly there was a great rending explosion; the hospital had been struck by a bomb from above.

"I was not touched," Lutener says, "but both the men at my bedside were killed; and for three days I was conscious of nothing but the terrible shock I had sustained. I kept feeling my head and my remaining leg; it was the only way by which I could convince myself they were still there." Thirty-one men were injured by that one bomb and eighteen of them died of their injuries.

Lutener himself is a pretty tough specimen of the British soldier or he could never have survived the deprivations of that long siege. Among the Kut wounded upon whom it was necessary to perform amputation he is the sole survivor. He had wasted to a very shadow when the end of the siege came, and the doctor attributed his existence in such circumstances to the clean life he must have led. One day, when he was slowly struggling back from the shock of the amputation the general came to see him.

"I know this man," he exclaimed at the first glance. "Private Lutener, sir, of the Signal Company; carried despatches." "And how are you getting on, laddie?" I told him I was all right, and he patted me on the back, saying: "Keep on smiling, laddie. And always think that when you get home there will be thousands like you, worse luck."

When the doctor came back he said to me: "Lutener, you are a lucky man. I've been instructed that you are to have a bottle of port wine all to yourself. It is the General's last bottle, and you must take care of it." I hardly liked to take it, but I think if I had not I should never have been here to-day. But what a man to follow!

LEADERSHIP WON V.C.

Youth and Age no Bar to Highest British Honor

A batch of Victoria Crosses was awarded to three officers and two privates in English regiments, a sergeant of a Scotch regiment and a sergeant of an Irish regiment. All distinguished themselves not only for indifference to danger, but for quick thinking. In every case the winner had rallied and led troops under fire, had snatched victory from defeat. For instance Private Robert Rider, of the Middlesex, assumed command of his regiment when all the officers had been killed or wounded, led a remnant of men forward, and with the aid of a Lewis gun cleared the trench in front of him and carried the enemy's position.

In commenting upon these and reviewing some earlier ones, the New York Sun observes that among the winners was an elderly man who left a wife and nine children at home in order to serve his country, and "that glorious boy," John Travers Cornwall, who, mortally wounded, remained at his post in the Jutland battle because, as he explained shortly before he died, "he thought he might be needed." We may be sure that when the roll of heroism for the war is completed no name will shine more radiantly than that of this lad.

HUNS GROSSLY DECEIVED

Women Most Gullible of All, Writes Northcliffe's Man

Writing of middle class Germans, Mr. D. Thomas Curtin said: "While there are an increasing number of doubters among the German mankind as to the accuracy of statements issued by the Government, in the class with which I mostly came into contact in Germany the women are blindfold and believe all they are told. So strong, too, is the influence of Government propaganda on the people of Germany that in a town where I met two English ladies married to Germans they believed that Germany had Verdun in her grasp, had annihilated the English troops (mainly black) on the Somme, had defeated the English fleet in the battle of Skagerack (Jutland), and reduced the greater part of the fortifications, docks, and munition factories of London to ruins by Zeppelins. Their anguish for the fate of their English relations was sincere, and they were intensely hopeful that England would accept any sort of terms of peace in order to prevent the invasions which some people in Germany still believe possible.

News in the Courts

In the divorce court, when Mr. Justice Searman read the official report of the destruction of two big Zeppelins there was great applause. When the announcement was handed to the Master of the Rolls and Lord Justices Warrington and Scrutton in the Court of Appeal, Lord Justice Scrutton suggested that the statement might be handed to counsel, who would perhaps like to sing "God Save the King." Mr. J. A. Hawke K.C., after reading the news, said, "We shall be safe to-night, my lords."

Automobile Club's Present

The Duke of Portland, at the Royal Automobile Club said the British Ambulance Committee had been able to equip a number of motor ambulances to convey French wounded soldiers to the base hospitals.

Danish doctors who visited all the prisoners' camps in Siberia and Turkestan for Germany state [illegible] men are kindly treated [illegible] satisfied.

THE "UNCANNY" NAVY

Efficiency of Fleet Opened Eyes of a Canadian

A writer in the Westminster Gazette says: The keeping of the seas by our navy appeals to each of us in a different manner. Our food table is a marvel; our foreign correspondence is likewise wonderful. We cannot help appreciating the power of our fleet. A Canadian soldier told me the other evening that until he came across with his contingent he had not thought much about the navy. His fleet of transports was convoyed by a cruiser from the Canadian shore, and the word was passed around that she would be relieved at noon on a certain day. Eleven o'clock came, but there was no sign of the new boat. Half an hour later smoke was visible on the horizon, and at 12 prompt No. 2 cruiser had swung round and taken her place at the head of the line, whilst No. 1 turned about. "Uncanny," was his word.

THE GREAT DEPARTED

Joffre Trained Nivelle to Take up the Burden

Of Joffre at his retirement, the Paris Matin said: "But General Joffre cannot be everywhere. The French General Staff cannot always be made up of the same men. The war has been terribly fatiguing for those upon whose shoulders lay the responsibility of conducting it, and the conditions under which this war has been fought have become modified to a considerable degree by the immobility into which it has fallen. It was perfectly natural, therefore, that the burden of active command of the armies at the front should be taken from the shoulders of General Joffre and placed on younger shoulders and that the profound wisdom, vast experience, and genius for command of the victor of the Marne and liberator of France should be put to other uses. It was also just as natural that no change should be made in the organization of the General Staff, which he created, which had proved of incomparable excellence, but only in the men upon whom devolves the maintenance and direction of this organization.

General Nivelle, who becomes Commander-in-Chief of the troops at the front, was one of the favorite pupils, one of the most faithful friends, one of the discoveries of General Joffre. It is to Joffre therefore that France owes her new Commander-in-Chief one more debt of gratitude. The new officers who take up their duties in the General Staff feel respect and devotion for the achievements of those who preceded them. They admire the marvelous mechanism placed in their hands. Their only contributions are new strength and new zeal for making the instrument in their hands yeld its maximum of results.

PROFIT FROM AGONY

Scottish Ironmaster Was Willing to Pay Extra Taxes

"To my mind there is something absolutely revolting in the idea of anybody making profits out of the nation's agony," said Mr. W. Lorimer, LL.D., in delivering the Chairman's address at the meeting of the Steel Company of Scotland. He said: "This war, God knows, will bring untold sufferings in more than one form to millions who have no war profits to collect and no war bonds to receive, and therefore I have felt in my own mind, long before this proposal was made, that in that direction the Government would be entirely justified in asking those who have made profits to assist those who are less fortunate. It may be, indeed, that before the war is ended the Government may find it necessary to take not 50 but 100 per cent. of those extra profits, and if they do, I hope that none of us will complain."

HAVE NOT LOST ALL HOPE FOR PUBLIC BATH HOUSES

Members of Playground Association Believe Ald. Weir Will Come Across and That Mayor's Casting Vote Will Decide.

The members of the Playgrounds Association, with two successful seasons to their credit, held their annual meeting in the Council Chamber last night, with Mrs. A. Mowat, the vice-president, in the chair, and prepared for another season of work on behalf of the children of the city. Naturally, the association workers feel disappointed at the failure of the aldermen to establish municipal bathing beaches, but they have not yet abandoned hope. It was Mr. J. W. Worth who extended them encouragement along these lines. He called attention to the fact that Ald. Weir had declared he would not vote for bathing beaches unless the 247th Batt. were given a grant. That grant had been voted and the alderman had no longer any excuse—or a reason—for remaining with the antis. If he joined forces with Ald. Stratton, Smith and McIntyre, and Ald. Worth was back in his place the vote would result in a tie and thus put up to the mayor the duty of making the final decision. Mayor Duffus, it is said, is friendly to the proposition and it is believed that his casting vote would give the citizens public bathing places.

The Deputation Reports

Mr. C. N. Meserve read a lengthy report of the various visits of the deputation to council, with all of which the reading public are already familiar. Mr. Meserve still maintains that bathing beaches are not only a physical but a moral necessity. He believes, too, that according to parliamentary law the matter must come before Council again at the next regular meeting.

Chief Howard to the Rescue

Chief Howard, who has always been an enthusiastic worker in the interests of the association, took up the cudgels on behalf of the aldermen. He declared that they would do all public business according to established rule and that they are guided in their official acts by a regard for the wishes of the majority. The Chief told of a recent visit to the office of Ald. Dobbin on business connected with his department, when the telephone was kept constantly ringing by citizens who sent in protests against voting money for bathing beaches in war time.

"The aldermen were willing to throw away $600 or more on a free market," put in Mrs. A. Stevenson.

Officers Elected

Treasurer Scadding reported a small balance in the treasury. He resigned his office, as did Secretary Sangster, owing to a pressure of other work. These two officers were combined and Mr. H. W. Morphet will, during the coming year, serve the association in the dual capacity. The other officers elected were as follows:—

President—W. G. Morrow
First vice-pres.—Wm. Sangster.
Second vice-pres.—Mrs. A. Mowat
Finance Committee—J. W. Worth, G. O. Cameron, Mrs. Medd, Mrs. R. Harstone, Dr. Neal, W. S. Abbott, B. F. Ackerman, W. Westby, and W. Reg. Scadding.

Equipment Committee—Mrs. F. C. Neal, M. N. Clarke, J. Smith, Mrs. W. Reg. Scadding, Chief Howard, R. F. Downey and Geo. H. Roper.

Appointment Committee—Mrs. W. R. Morris, Mrs. A. Mowat and C. N. Meserve.

Supervision Committee —The members of the appointment committe, the president, secretary-treasurer, the convenor of the equipment committee and Mrs. A. Stevenson.

Visiting Committee — Mrs. (Dr.) Mann, convenor, with power to select her own colleagues.

Entertainment Committee—Members of Equipment Committee and Adjutant McElhiney.

Executive Committee—The officers of the association and the convenors of the other committees and Mrs. James Kendry.

CANADIAN EXPLOITS

Marvellous Intensity and Accuracy of Canadian Fire.

SOMME'S INFERNO

A Canadian artillery major who went through the 1916 fighting on the Somme writes as follows: "We were at the Somme for three months. The descriptions you read of the masses of guns, are not at all exaggerated. I will never forget the first day. I never thought there were so many guns in existence. There were rows upon rows of every description from 18-pounder field guns up to the 12-inch howitzer. In our first position there was a battery of 9.2-inch howitzers and one of 8-inch howitzer, a thousand yards in advance of us, the field pieces, who are supposed to be the vanguard of the guns.

"It was a revelation when the first attack started; for a week previous the big fellows had been destroying the Huns' trenches, then just before daybreak we started our shrapnel barrage. It was just as if hell had suddenly been let loose—every gun opened at once at the most terrific rate of fire. You could hardly hear your own voice. Then we lifted our fire behind the Huns' front line and the infantry attacked. The infantry advanced right up close to the trench under our barrage, so close that our shells burst right over them, all going on into the trench of course. Then as the barrage lifted they leaped into the trench before the enemy had a chance to man his parapet. The attack was gloriously successful for our men. Then in the afternoon they attacked again, making still more glorious their victory, by taking a village which being translated means a veritable fortress. The Huns fortified all the buildings, digging great dug-outs underneath them in some instances, as much as 40 feet below the ground and capable of holding a whole company (250) men.

"You have read of that great attack on Courcelette by our Second Division. They were only allotted the task of taking the trenches they took in the morning, but no! they went on as I have described above and took the whole shooting match. It was their first time over the parapet and you could not hold them at all; in a good many cases the colonels went over with the men; this was not sound but nevertheless it was grand.

"When the battle started the whole area was blotted from view by the smoke from the bursting shells. You may imagine the intensity of the fire when there is an 18-pounder gun to every ten yards of front, firing at a terrific rate, let alone all the 4.5, 6, 8 and 9.2-inch howitzers, which fire on the supports and communication trenches. Then of course the Hun artillery opens up to add to the general hell.

All Had Their Fling

"We remained at the Somme while the whole 4 divisions of infantry had their fling—3 months in all—the Fourth Division coming last. They all did splendidly. When we got the Hun back in the trenches where he did not have all his nice dug-outs he could not stand the draft. When they had to stand the shelling in the open trenches like our men do all the time they quit like dogs.

"In one attack we covered an Imperial division; it was really most remarkable for its entire success. They actually advanced within 20 yards of the Hun trenches right up under our barrage. When we lifted they just stepped into the trench; the Huns never had a chance to fire a shot; one company never lost a man. Of course we lose some men from our own shells, but nothing like what it would be if they waited back and let the Hun man his parapet.

Lucky, Busy and Lost

"We came out of there very luckily—30 casualties in all; one officer, Hammond, was slightly wounded in the arm, just at the finish, and two men were killed; while the rest were all more or less minor casualties. We advanced our position three times; the further you get forward the more difficult it was to supply ammunition, which was some problem when you would use as much as 1,800 rounds in 24 hours. You can have no idea of the state of the ground where our last position was, for instance, we were just in front of that famous place of Pozieres; there was not one single square foot of ground which had not been turned over again and again by the shells, leaving great craters varying in size from the large ones 25 feet to 30 feet across and 10 feet deep to the small hole made by the field gun. Every landmark was obliterated; there was absolutely nothing left to use as a land mark; it was just one great sea of muck. I have seen dozens of men absolutely lost, not knowing which way to go or where they were.

"Here we had to pack all ammunition on horses, not being able to get wheeled vehicles up to the guns, which was quite a job; every horse carried 8 rounds. My men were grand; I never had to speak to a man all the time we were there. They worked like Trojans, particularly the drivers. Our horses left there in grand shape, even after the hard work and the terrible state of the horse lines due to the mud and rain."

Mental Grasshoppers

Many of us waste fully one-fourth of our time and energy by constantly breaking away from the particular thing we are doing, to do or start something else—to return in a moment or so to finish what we left. We jump—mentally, physically, or both from one idea to another and back again all day long. In most cases this habit can be corrected. It is nothing more than thoughtlessness. And it should be corrected for such persons in office or shop are not only inefficient but have a tendency to disturb others. They are nothing more than grasshoppers.

THE BLUES LINED UP

The members of the police force assembled at the police station this afternoon for their spring inspection.

DON'T BE PERSONAL.

The Crudity and the Cruelty of Being Plain Spoken.

Among the immediate members of our families, our nearest and dearest, there frequently prevails a form of affectionate personal service that is irksome and trying, yet cannot be avoided or rebuked without giving offense. There are mothers who harass independent and sensible daughters with silly little admonitions about wearing rubbers and getting home early; who bemoan continually in public their daughters' predilection for tennis and dislike for fine sewing; who never find it possible to understand why their daughters have views or feelings that differ from their own, says the Woman's Home Companion. And, likewise, we find daughters who adopt the maternal attitude to their mothers and exercise a censorship over their clothes, occupations and recreations in a fashion truly exasperating. It makes the onlooker want to shout violently at these types, "Let each other alone." Even though these attentions are actuated by the fondest love they are an infringement on individual rights. Mother should let daughter play tennis, and daughter should not try to select mother's hats. The result would be a great gain in family peace.

There ought to be a special chapter on "Being Impersonal" in every book of etiquette, and, since books of etiquette are usually consulted only by those who may want to know how many cards to leave on twin sisters or what is the time limit on dinner calls, perhaps this special chapter ought to be included in travel stories—yes, even works of fiction—so that every one who reads may see it. It should consist first of advice on how to be impersonal, with helpful hints, such as: "If your friend looks tired don't tell her so, but do something definite to help her rest." "Never condole with any one on being either married or unmarried. Both may be fortunate states." "Never criticise any piece of clothing worn by any one, not even swing stripes on a fat woman or an elbow sleeve on a skinny one." "Never remark on any family likeness. It's bad enough to have it without being told about it."

Grandmother's Pumpkin Pie.

Two cupfuls of pumpkin thoroughly mashed after having been steamed in a colander, two cupfuls of milk, one egg, half teaspoonful of ginger, one-fourth cupful of sugar, one-fourth cupful of molasses, half teaspoonful of salt, two tablespoonfuls of raisins. Boil the raisins half an hour, let the water boil away, slip out the seeds and add the pulp to the pumpkin. Scald the milk and mix with the pumpkin, add the seasoning, molasses and egg last. Bake in a plate lined and rimmed with crust.

The resignation of Sergt. Brown om the police force, to take effect Thursday was accepted by the lice Commissioners yesterday. The mmissioners thought it was a good ommendation for the local police rce when other cities could pick lice chiefs from its department.

The question of filling the vacan- was left over until the next meet- . In the meantime the board will vertise for a constable in order keep the force up to strength. The eference will be given first to a turned soldier and second to a re- ted man.

THE WEATHER

7 DAYS OF GOOD SLEIGHING DURING THE WINTER.

Yesterday the official temperature as 64 degrees, the h'ghest since last ll. Robins, blackbirds, and song arrows were plentiful for the first me. But these birds, though very elcome, are not the true harbingers spring. That distinction pertains the swallow and the blue bird, hen the latter little fellow, especi- lly, is seen sunning himself on the nce, you may "bank" on spring ing here.—W. P.

The number of days of good eighing this past winter totalled 7. This is, perhaps, somewhat above the average, indicating a com- aratively unbroken winter. The tal for the previous winter was 9.

Is Charged With False Pretences

JAMES O'RIELLY BROUGHT BACK TO THIS CITY FOR TRIAL.

Jmes O'Rielly was brought back from Cobourg yesterday by Detective Meagher on a warrant charging him with obtaining $6.75 from J. P. Pulkinghorn under false pretences, namely, issuing a cheque for which there was no funds.

The defendant refused to plead or elect at the police court this morning and was remanded until Friday.

O'Rielly was arrested by the Cobourg police on a charge of obtaining goods under false pretences and was allowed to go on suspended sentence when restitution was made.

Chief Thompson has information that the prisoner was in trouble at Hull under similar circumstances.

Police Magistrate Dumble refused to allow the prisoner to go on his own recognizances but fixed bail at $500. Mr. H. Armstrong of Gordon and Widdifield appeared for the accused.

Sleepy Time Story About Two Very Hospitable People.

HOW LUCK CAME TO THEM.

An Interesting Account of a Happening That Has Been Handed Down From Remote Antiquity—Kindly Act Richly Rewarded—Skating In Switzerland.

I think I will tell you a story of long ago, said Uncle Ben to Little Ned and Polly Ann. It is about

NOBLE TRAVELERS.

In the old times it was thought right to treat strangers kindly. I think I may as well tell you a story about that. Once long ago, in a pleasant part of the country called Greece, there lived a respectable old couple named Baucis and Philemon. They were very poor, but Mistress Baucis kept their little one roomed house spotlessly clean.

One evening some one knocked at the door, and when Philemon hobbled to open it he found two strangers standing outside.

"We are travelers who have lost our way, and are looking for shelter for the night," said the elder man. "Could we find a place by your fireside?"

"Certainly," replied Philemon kindly. "Walk right in, and welcome."

Baucis greeted them pleasantly, and when they were comfortable by the fire she bustled about to get supper.

When their guests were seated at the table the old couple were amazed to see sparkling wine flow from the pitcher Philemon had filled with spring water.

Then the tall stranger said: "The meal which you spread so willingly for the tired strangers shows that in this valley there is at least one house where kindness rules. Come with us."

Baucis and Philemon followed the strangers to the top of the hill. When they reached the top they looked back and saw where the village had stood a beautiful lake.

"So," said the tall stranger, "have I punished those who turned the stranger from their doors. Yonder is your home. Live there now in peace and comfort."

Where the little cottage of Baucis and Philemon had stood rose a splendid marble palace. Inside was wealth enough to last for many a year.

"I am the god Jupiter," said the tall stranger. "My companion is Mercury. Can we grant you any wish before we go?"

"If you please, we have lived so happily together in this world we should like when the time comes to leave it not to be parted," replied Baucis and Philemon.

The old couple lived happily for many years, but at last they grew very, very feeble. "It is time for us to go," one said to the other. Then each noticed that the other was turning into a tree. They grew side by side, the one an oak and the other a linden.

Malicious.

Florence—My cheeks are burning like fire. Her Sweet Friend—I thought I smelled burning paint.

Some Talker.

"What," asked Talkfest, "makes you so hoarse?" "Just listening to you talk."—Browning's Magazine.

A Move to Incorporate.

She—I shall have to be a little firm with you. He—Fine! Let us make it a partnership!

Live Volcanoes.

There are [illegible] volcanoes on the globe. This estimate includes merely live volcanoes.

A Sure Cure.

"Doctor, my wife has lost her voice. What can I do about it?"

"Try getting home late some night."

Very Plain.

"Why have words roots, pa?"

"How else could the language grow, my son?"

Sugar.

Fire will completely consume pure sugar, but will leave an ash if the sugar be adulterated.

Alexander Pope.

Pope's features were small and delicate. All his life he was very pale and looked sickly.

The Rarest Cents.

The rarest of our cents and the highest in price are those dated 1793, 1799 and 1804.

Risky Revenge.

Paganini, the violinist, had a narrow escape at Ferrara from a violent death. Enraged by some hissing from the pit, he resolved to avenge the insult and at the close of his program informed the audience that he would imitate the language of the various animals. After having rendered the notes of different birds, the mewing of a cat and the barking of a dog he advanced to the footlights and, saying, "This is for those who hissed!" imitated the braying of an ass. At this the occupants of the pit rose, rushed on to the stage and would have killed their calumniator had he not hastily retreated.

Telepathy In the Theater.

Sir Herbert Tree tells how some years ago, when playing Hamlet, he found himself in that scene on the ramparts when he awaits the approach of the ghost, gasping for breath and drenched with the dew of apprehension. "What a fool I am!" he cried to himself. "My back is to the audience, the scene is in darkness. Why should I waste so much mental force? Why not stand at rest, awaiting my cue with a cool pulse?" But a trial quickly showed him his error. He had difficulty to get back into the character, and, moreover, he discovered that the scene did not grip the audience with the same intensity at all. He had broken the spell.—Westminster Gazette.

As She Saw It.

A young girl who had been born and brought up in a boarding house atmosphere was suddenly transplanted into a wealthy home. After she had been there a month a friend of her patroness said:

"I expect you notice a great difference between your present and your former surroundings."

"Oh, yes," said the girl. "There when a man and a girl walk out together everybody always says, 'Will he marry her?' Here they say, 'Will she have him?'"

Brazil Produces Piassava.

Among the forest resources of Brazil one of considerable value and importance is the fiber piassava, a product of certain palm trees, which is used in the manufacture of brooms, brushes, ropes, baskets and hats. The trees also produce a very hard nut, called in Portuguese coquilho (coquila), from which excellent buttons are manufactured. The leaves are employed for making fans and in the country districts for roofing adobe houses. For making brooms and brushes especially no other material is more extensively employed in Brazil, and large quantities are required annually for domestic consumption as well as for exportation.

Torture.

Thrilled with the dread alarms,
But so far none of them has heard
A Cupid's "call to arms."

Candid Impression.

Little Pitchers—I won't let my cat get at you, mister.

Visitor—I'm not afraid of cats, son. Why do you think I am?

Little Pitchers—I thought you might be, because I heard pa tell ma you had rats.

W. D. CAMPBELL PRESIDENT FOR CURLERS; CUP DONATED FOR VICE-SKIPS 'SPIEL

Curling Club Closes a Successful Season.

Prizes Presented

The curling club members at their annual meeting in the rink parlors last night elected Mr. W. D. Campbell president, succeeding Mr. J. H. Ferguson, who moves up to honorary president. The election, while anticipated, was nevertheless the signal for a general expression of approval, for it is felt that in Mr. Campbell the curling club will have a capable guiding hand. He has been a member of the club for fifteen years, is an enthusiastic curler, and this past season was one of the District Cup skips.

Mr. J. W. McDermid, whose rink won the Grand Challenge Cup at the open bonspiel, was elected vice-president. Mr. W. G. Morrow was also nominated for the office but withdrew. Mr. Morrow has held various offices in the earlier days of curling in Peterborough and he take the stand that the honors should be passed around.

Four new members to the committee of management were: Messrs. W. G. Morrow, R. P. Best, Dr. Wightman, and Alex. Kay.

Messrs W. G. Morrow and W. G. Ferguson were re-elected representatives to the Ontario Curling Association, and Mr. G. H. Giroux was rewarded with being re elected auditor "at the same salary."

MR. W. D. CAMPBELL

Messrs. W. G. Ferguson, E. G. Patterson, D. Davidson, W. M. Lang, A. W. Archibald were nominated for the committee of management, but withdrew.

A Cup Donated

Mr. E. G. Patterson made an announcement that tickled his fellow curlers when he offered to donate a cup for competition in the vice-skips bonspiel provided the contest was arranged to be played earlier in the season. It has been the custom to hold the bonspiel towards the latter part of the season, when playing conditions are not always the best. Mr. Patterson's offer was accepted with enthusiastic thanks.

The motion of Messrs. R. P. Best and Alex. Kay that the use of felt-soled boots on the ice be prohibited by bylaw was lost by a big majority, and a motion to appoint a membership committee of five members at the annual meeting shared a similar fate. Several members were of the opinion that the use of time-worn rubbers, which in many cases are heelless, injured the ice surface much more so that the felt boots, and another opinion was that the players local and visiting, should not be dictated to as to footwear. In regard to the proposed membership committee, Mr. Gordon Logie suggested the skips be deputed to look after new members, they to have the choice of leads from these new members in the formation of rinks. No action was taken on any of the suggestions, but before closing the meeting, President Campbell urged all the members to do their part in boosting the club generally.

Mr. R. M. Waddell made the suggestion that photographs of the presidents of the curling clubs in Peterboro from the inception of the game be secured and placed on the walls of the club rooms.

The presentation of prizes, always an important part of the annual meeting unearthed the usual quality and quantity of wit and comedy. One of the wags of the crowd when presented with a pair of pyjamas "Hoped his better half would live long to enjoy their comfort." Jack Wiley in accepting prizes for Dr. Wightman his skip and himself, had a big night, being called upon on three occasions to come forth.

Votes of Thanks

Votes of thanks were passed to the retiring president, Secretary Brownscombe, the committees in charge of the competitions, Mr. Angus McIntosh, the caretaker, and the press.

On motion of Mr. G. H. Giroux the Grand Challenge Cup was formally presented to Mr. J. W. McDermid and the presentation of this trophy will be made annually. Mr. R. G. Sturgeon, who won permanent possession of the Seymour Power Trophy at Campbellford, was extended similar honor.

The presentation of the Mercantile Mug to Mr. Gordon Logie, was postponed indefinitely.

CARD OF SPORTS AT THE ARMORIES FRIDAY NIGHT

Fast Mit Artists of Toronto Will Take Part.

A smoker will be held at the Armories on Friday night at which some boxing bouts of extraordinary importance will be staged. All men in uniform or returned soldiers will be admitted free. The band will be in attendance and a good evening's fun assured to all.

The principal event of the evening will be a six-round go between Bull of Toronto, conceded to be one of the cleverest featherweights in Canada, and Gallagher, ex-champion featherweight of Canada. This bout will be refereed by Sergt.-Major W. E. Turley, formerly of the 15th Batt., but now of the staff of the Toronto Telegram. The sergt.-major held the featherweight championship for two years and got a draw for the English championship. He will entertain with a few sketches.

The bout of local interest will be between Bandsman Walno and Sgt. Giorno, who will weigh in at 125lb and the winner will represent the 247th Batt. at the Canadian military boxing championships.

There will be a burlesque boxing bout which genial Major Eddie O'Flynn has arranged. It will be well worth watching when the major refuses to disclose the participants.

The flyweight championship will also be decided by two rising Irishmen. The price of admission to the general public is a quarter of a dollar.

Norwood has furnished another recruit for the 247th Batt, in the person of Pte. Henry Garfield Puffer, who attested this morning

HOW CONFIDENCE COUNTS

In Blissful Ignorance Youngster Was a Wonder at Bat

Hughie Jennings has a yarn that illustrates how confidence helps a ball player.

"We had a young fellow who had seen the big show before I used him against Washington. Johnson was going to pitch; but in some way the youngster got the idea that Johnson was Bob Groom.

"He watched Johnson pitch the first inning, and then, turning to Crawford, he said:

"'Is Johnson much faster than this fellow?'

"Sam caught the idea, and replied: "Oh, yes. This fellow has some speed; but there isn't anything on his fast one.'

"The kid trotted up to the plate the first time up and cracked out a hit. The second time up he drove out another hit. Then he learned that he was batting against Johnson, and the last time up he looked foolish trying to bat, and he struck out."

FOR YOUNG FOLKS

Sleepy Time Story About a Greek Girl.

MYSTERY OF A QUEER VASE.

What Happened When a Curious Little Person Lifted the Lid—Many Woes Came Out to Sadden the People of the World—An Odd Garden In Germany.

Tonight, said Uncle Ben, to little Ned and Polly Ann, I am going to tell you a story that has come down from antiquity. It is about

A PEEPING GIRL.

Curiosity is wanting to know about things that don't concern you. It nearly always gets folks into trouble.

There was Pandora. I think I shall have to tell you about her.

Pandora was a lovely young Grecian girl. She had everything that heart could wish for when she was born. The gods who lived in their beautiful place on Mount Olympus had each given her a splendid birthday present. She received beauty from one, health from another, talent from another, and so on.

There was one old god, though, who thought he would play a joke on the others. So he waited until the other gods had all given their gifts, and then he gave Pandora the gift of curiosity.

Though Pandora as she grew up was found to be given to poking her pretty little nose into things that didn't concern her and asking so many questions that her guardian, old Epimetheus, was often greatly put out, she was such a charming girl and so clever that he overlooked this little fault.

Now, little faults sometimes make as great trouble as great big naughtinesses, and in Pandora's case this turned out to be especially true.

Old Epimetheus had stored away in a safe place in his house a very costly vase. The vase was always covered and in a place where no one was allowed to go.

Pandora often wondered about the vase, and she asked Epimetheus so many questions about it that he thought it wise to lecture her every now and then about staying out of the room in which the vase was kept.

The more he warned her not to go near it the more curious she became about the vase.

"I don't see how one little peep could hurt it or me," she said to herself.

So one day when Epimetheus was away from home Pandora crept into the room.

Pandora crept behind the curtain. There stood the vase in the corner covered with a dark cloth. She lifted the cloth and then started as she heard a queer humming and buzzing inside the vase.

Carefully she lifted the lid, but before she could peep in a dark winged thing had darted out and then another and another.

Pandora was so frightened that she did not know what to do. Epimetheus rushed into the room, but the vase was nearly empty. Only one little sprite remained in the bottom of the vase. His name was Hope. Care, Sickness, Poverty and all sorts of evil sprites had flown away to wander about the world ever since, but we still, thanks to Epimetheus, have Hope with us to comfort us when the evil sprites are tormenting us too much.

An Interesting Garden.

One of the most interesting gardens in the world, to children at least, is one in Berlin. The owner of the place has adorned it with statuary that every child would be glad to see, because there he has placed groups of fairies and pixies and all sorts of the queer little people that children love. A notable piece of sculpture in the garden is that depicting Little Red Riding Hood and the wicked wolf. Every child has read that fearsome story and rejoiced that the little girl was saved from the fangs of the cruel beast.

Picturesqueness For One Piece Frocks Is the Last Note.

Different Girls.

"I found that astronomer rather dull. He used to talk to me about the stars."

"I don't find him dull," averred the other girl ecstatically. "He says he talks to the stars about me."

Pretty Rapid.

Jack—Yes, I had a little balance in the bank, but I became engaged two months ago, and now— Tom—Ah, love makes the world go round! Jack—Yes, but I didn't think it would go round so fast as to cause me to lose my balance.

DRINK A GLASS OF REAL HOT WATER BEFORE BREAKFAST.

Says we will both look and feel clean, sweet and fresh and avoid illness.

Sanitary science has of late made rapid strides with results that are of untold blessing to humanity. The latest application of its untiring research is the recommendation that it is as necessary to attend to internal sanitation of the drainage system of the human body as it is to the drains of the house.

Those of us who are accustomed to feel dull and heavy when we arise, splitting headache, stuffy from a cold, foul tongue, nasty breath, acid stomach, can, instead, feel as fresh as a daisy by opening the sluices of the system each morning and flushing out the whole of the internal poisonous stagnant matter.

Everyone, whether ailing, sick or well, should, each morning before breakfast, drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver and bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour bile and poisonous toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach. The action of hot water and limestone phosphate on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It cleans out all the sour fermentations, gases, waste and acidity and gives one a splendid appetite for breakfast. While you are enjoying your breakfast the phosphated hot water is quietly extracting a large volume of water from the blood and getting ready for a thorough flushing of all the inside organs.

The millions of people who are bothered with constipation, bilious spells, stomach trouble, rheumatic stiffness; others who have sallow skins, blood disorders and sickly complexions are urged to get a quarter pound of limestone phosphate from the drug store. This will cost very little, but is sufficient to make anyone a pronounced crank on the subject of internal sanitation.

GERMANS LOSE SUPPORT POINTS

IMPORTANT SUPPORT POINTS CAPTURED BY FRENCH TROOPS

Violent Artillery Fighting in Champagne--- No New Change Between Somme and Oise Rivers.

BRITISH HOLD 55,000 GERMANS

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, March 28. — (Official Statement.) — "Between the Somme and the Oise there were no important events during the night. Artillery firing was rather heavy in the region east of the lower forest of Coucy. North of the Ailette River we made further progress and also in the sector east of the Leuilly-Neuville sur Margival line, where we captured several important points of support.

"In the region of Rheims we made a surprise attack east of Neuville, taking prisoners.

"In the Champagne, late yesterday and during the night artillery fighting became violent, especially in the region of Butte du Mesnil, and Maisons de Champagne.

"Elsewhere the night was calm."

LONDON, March 28. — The British hold more than 71,000 prisoners, of whom over 55,000 are Germans, and Germany has 32,500 British prisoners. Progress in negotiations for an exchange of prisoners with Turkey has been made, but Germany and Austria have made no reply to the British suggestions.

BERLIN, March 28. — The war office statement today says the successful manner in which the German troops are operating on the Somme front is illustrated by the fact that in Monday's engagement between Lagnicourt and Morchies about one thousand British dead were counted.

CANADIAN AND U.S. FARMERS TO HELP ENGLAND TILL SOIL FOR MAXIMUM PRODUCTION

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, March 28.—Sir Arthur Lee, formerly an instructor at Kingston Military College, Canada, and later military attache to the British Embassy at Washington, who is now charged with the gigantic task of making every available foot of soil produce its maximum amount of food, told the Associated Press he hoped to attract to Britain 5,000 skilled American farmers to help make the employment of American agricultural machinery fully successful. He would also get some skilled farmers from Canada, besides those already in England with the Canadian forces. The introduction of American farm machinery would, he says, witness a more universal employment of women on the land.

ENGLISHMAN ESCAPES AFTER THIRTY MONTHS IN BELGIUM.

LONDON, March 28. — J. P. Whitaker, an Englishman, has just escaped from Roubaix, Belgium, where he lived for thirty months without the Germans suspecting his nationality. He declares Germans stole Belgian relief supplies and substituted them with bread made of rye and sawdust, which caused much illness and a high death rate.

MAKE ATTACK AGAINST ITALY

MONTENEGRIN COMMANDER SAYS GERMANS ARE PREPARING.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

ROE, March 28. — Gen. Di Rosal, commanding the Montenegrin troops serving with the Italian army, writes as follows:

"A terrible and desperate attack is in preparation against our line. Everyone sees it and even the enemy announces it in order to intimidate us by threatening Italy with the fate of Roumania and Serbia."

STOCK TAKING REVEALS SHORTAGE

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

COPENHAGEN March 28.—The Berlin Vorwaerts says the result of the recent stocktaking of grain, potatoes and other foodstuffs in Germany was so unfavorable as to cause general apprehension. It revealed the fact that last year's harvest was not so much better than the calamitous harvest of 1915 as had been supposed.

WORKERS BURIED IN THE RUINS

PARIS, March 28.—Several persons were buried in the ruins caused by an accidental explosion yesterday in the city hall at Bapaume, among them two members of the French chamber of deputies who were engaged in relief work.

WHO'S THE LEADER?

A little clash regarding the leadership of the Liberal party occurred between Premier Hearst and H. H. Dewart in the House yesterday. It was during discussion of the further supplementary estimates. Mr. Dewart was asking a number of questions regarding items which the Premier believed to be non-contentious. Sir William told the member for South-West Toronto that it had been arranged between the leaders that unnecessary hindrance to the work of the House was to be avoided. He wanted to know if Mr. Rowell's dictum carried. Mr. Dewart said he was acting on his own initiative. As a private member he had a right to know what it was that they were binding the country to pay. Mr. Rowell was not in the chamber. Mr. Dewart had the last word.

FOR VIGOROUS PROSECUTION OF THE FIGHT

SOCIAL DEMOCRATS ARE AGAINST CENTRAL EMPIRES.

ARMY IS FIRM.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PETROGRAD, March 28—A group of Social Democrats have published a declaration favoring the vigorous prosecution of the war, leaving the demands of social democracy for agrarian and social reform in abeyance until the country is safe from danger of the return of monarchy. "Victory of the Central Empires," says the statement, "would bring ruin and reinstate the old regime."

Several Duma deputies who have been to the front, have returned to Petrograd, convinced that the spirit of the army is excellent and that all are convinced of the absolute necessity of continuing the war.

LIEUT. WALLACE KILLED.

Lieut. Wallace, formerly local manager of the Bell Telephone Co. at Port Perry, and who was well known here, has been killed in action.

FOUR CLASSES OF BADGES FOR SERVICE DURING WAR

Recognize Men Who Served at Front and Home.

OTTAWA, March 28—The government will shortly issues four classes of war badges in recognition of war service. This is in accordance with a recent order in council passed. The classes comprised are as follows:—

Class A.—For men honorably discharged after active service at the front.

Class B. — For those honorably discharged after six months' service in the Canadian Expeditionary Force or for less than six months' service, provided that the discharge was by reason of some disability due to military service.

Class C.—For those honorably discharged after less than six months' service in the C.E.F. or have volunteered to enlist and have been rejected as medically unfit.

Class D. — For those who have volunteered to enlist but whose services have been refused on the ground that they would be more useful to the state in their actual occupation than if they enlisted.

Many will be affected in this latter class. There are many who have not offered to enlist on the ground that their services were of more utility at home. Tribunals will be formed and those desiring to qualify for these badges will be passed upon.

The order provides for the free issue of the government badges and makes it illegal to manufacture, sell, purchase or wear any other badge purporting to be for such purposes as are provided in the order in council. Any infractions of the provisions will be punished by a fine not exceeding $500 or by a penalty not exceeding six months' imprisonment.

LIBERALS TALK LIKE ELECTION BEFORE FALL

WOULD RESIST PROPOSAL FOR A FURTHER EXTENSION.

OTTAWA, March 28—If the repeated declarations of prominent Liberal speakers are to be taken as a criterion there will be a general election this year. The situation is a curious one inasmuch as the Opposition largely has the say in the matter. The term of parliament expires next October and in the present session the government will ask another extension. While it now controls both branches of parliament the imperial house would hardly be asked for the further constitutional amendment obviating the need of an election without the substantial concurrence of both parties. It seems pretty clear from their platform utterances that the Liberals will resist such a proposal. An appeal to the country would thus be called for. It would of necessity take place before October and possibly much earlier. The prospect imparts the greatest interest to the resumption of business by parliament and there are divided opinions as to whether the session will be long or very brief.

JUDGMENT RESERVED.

In Lockie vs. North Monaghan Appeal.

The appeal in George Lockie vs. North Monaghan was heard in the Court of Appeal yesterday. Mr. E. Douglas Armour, K.C., and Mr. F. D. Kerr appeared for the township and M. D. O'Connell and Mr Joseph Wearing for George Lockie.

PREMIER HEARST SENDS LETTER APPROVING MOVE FOR GARDENS

Communication Was Read by Chairman Stocker at Meeting in Council Chamber Last Night---Address by Fred E. Robson.

Toronto, March 27, 1917.

TO THE CHAIRMAN,—

I am glad to know that the matter of increased food production is being energetically taken up in the city of Peterborough and vicinity. I earnestly commend the movement to every patriotic citizen. Greater production of food is one of the means, and a very important one, by which we can contribute to win the war.

Surely we Canadians, who enjoy the security and comfort which our brave men are purchasing for us with their life's blood, will do our full duty in this regard. From what I know of my fellow-countrymen, I am confident that they will not fail.

Let us realize that a great national effort is required and that every piece of uncultivated land that conditions will permit of profitable cultivation is a loss to the community as well as a help to the enemy, since it reduces the supplies we ought to have to enable us to carry this war to a successful conclusion.

I am sure that if all of us understand how important food now is to the Empire, and how very great is the help the small producer can afford in the aggregate, it would not be necessary to urge a response to this appeal, but I make the appeal with the utmost confidence to every person in this Province regardless of age or sex, to do something, be it small or great, to provide for the needs of our Empire and our Allies.

It should be a great privilege to help in this way to win the war, and, by the blessing of Providence and our own patriotic efforts, we can all do something for our country and community.

Yours sincerely,

W. H. HEARST.

The above letter from Sir William Hearst was read by Chairman Walter Stocker at the meeting held in the Council Chamber last night to discuss ways and means for the cultivation of vacant lots and which was addressed by Mr. Fred E. Robson, who came to the city under the auspices of the Ontario Agricultural Department. The communication from the Premier invested the movement with official sanction at the outset, besides showing the need for greater production of foodstuffs. Mr. Robson is a pleasing speaker, a man in love with his subject and enthusiastic for the cause he so ably advocates. He dwelt on other than the mercenary side of the proposition. There is more in the movement than the raising of vegetables. Men working garden plots side by side develop a friendly interest in each other. The benefits of a close communion with nature are not to be overlooked. A spirit of charity as well as patriotism and thrift is developed for those who do not require the vegetables they raise can pool their crops and devote the proceeds to some imperial project.

The Need of More Production

Mr. Robson began his address by referring to what Stephen Leacock recently said, to the effect that the world is facing a famine and to Lloyd George's statement that the energies of the Empire must be devoted to the production of more food. Bonar Lar, too, has said that in the first year of the war the great need was men, in the second year munitions and in the third year food.

Toronto took up the cultivation of vacant lots two years ago when, on May 17, the first potato was planted by Sir John Willison and civic ceremonies, including an automobile procession of the new amateur gardeners, marked the event.

The first step was to obtain the permission of the owners to use vacant lands. An agreement was made with those to whom the lots were allocated providing for vacating them when required. A committee made the selections and care was taken to avoid any land the cultivation of which would be too difficult. The lots were divided into plots of one-eighth of an acre each. If these plots can be worked in groups, so much the better as a community of interest is developed among the holders. It is necessary to get men of determination to work the lots in order to assure success. Each holder is furnished with an identification card so that no interloper can claim the fruits of the labor of another. It has been deemed advisable to charge a nominal fee for there is something in human nature which fails to pro-

FREE HANGS IN HIS CELL

Used Sheet From Bed for Rope.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

BROCKVILLE, March 28. — Arthur Free, in jail here awaiting trial for the murder of Mrs. Hattie Hill at Seeley's Bay on March 2, hanged himself last night to the cell bars, using a bed sheet for a rope. When cut down this morning the doctor's efforts were fruitless.

SUCCESSES BY FRENCH STRAIGHTEN THE FRONT

Moved Forward Three Miles at Some Points.

PARIS, March 28. — The French made a substantial advance yesterday south of the Somme, moving forward to places as far as three miles from their positions, with the result that the big bulge in the line formed by the lower Coucy forest has disappeared and the front runs continuously straight from the River Somme to the Aisne.

Coucy le Chateau, which is perched on a height, could not be attacked from the front, and the French, following Napoleon's maxim of going round an obstacle that cannot be surmounted, cleared the Germans out of the lower forest. The operation was carried out with skill and dispatch, and Coucy, turned on the right, fell into their hands like ripe fruit.

Main Position Found.

The Germans, naturally did not place their main position on the automatically outflanked Coucy plateau, and it evidently lies further in the rear. Behind the lower forest and plateau is a vale passing from Anizy le Chateau through Quincy-Basse and Aulers to Fresnes. On the upper side of this natural moat, rising abruptly to a height of 650 feet, lies the upper Coucy forest, from which artillery can sweep the plateau on which the old tower of Coucy stood.

It is there that the enemy's main position will be found. It is a most formidable position and admirably adapted to defence, and it is to be foreseen that the French, who are acting with the great prudence that the situation demands, will mark time here as on the more northerly sections and give the columns operating between the Ailette and the Aisne time to work up toward Anizy and threaten the position from the left flank.

The British Successes.

The British in their advance toward Cambrai have occupied the villages of Longavesnes, Lieramont and Equancourt, according to the official report from British headquarters in France last night.

HORSE ON THE TRACK.

Joe Longo's Horse Received a Double Scare.

Joe Longo's horse became frightened on Lock street this morning, and while in the early stages of its flight received an additional scare from a Grand Trunk train, and the animal took to the tracks, where it fell.

The wagon was badly smashed, and the horse slightly injured about the head.

PETERBOROUGH, WEDNESDAY, MARCH 28, 1917

AGAIN THE ANONYMOUS WRITER.

IT IS INDEED a desperate cause that has to be defended in the dark, that finds itself without a champion ready to espouse it in the open, or a newspaper to come to its rescue except through the submarine agency of the anonymous letter. Our craven-hearted contemporary, which, if it has convictions, lacks the courage to express them, resorts to its old and disreputable tactics of assailing The Review from the security of cover. We know its sentiments on the issue, and we know, too, that it is devoid of the stamina to come out and fight in the open.

There are other letters that have come to Peterborough from officers overseas, from officers who are in the trenches, and who are not skulking on the fringe of the fighting zone. Their opinions are worth consideration. Civilians are in a position to know the circumstances, unless, indeed, they are as fat-witted as the craven journalistic apologist, who speaks only from under the bed.

THE GARDENING MOVEMENT.

THE PROPOSITION to engage in the cultivation of vacant lots in this city is no experiment. It has for years been carried out successfully in American cities, and has recently become the vogue in Canada. The war has brought the question more to the front than ever.

The movement here starts out under favorable auspices. It has the sanction of both Dominion and Ontario Governments. The letter from Premier Hearst, read by Chairman Walter Stocker at the meeting last night, should inspire the promoters of the plan with new enthusiasm. That there is a general interest taken in the proposition was manifested by the attendance and by the practical questions that were addressed to Mr. Robson at he close of his address. Among the sixty or more citizens present, there did not appear to be a doubting Thomas. The man with the wet blanket, so prone to appear on such occasions, was conspicuously absent.

Mr. Robson certainly did his part, and his practical address, the information gathered at first hand which he imparted, was in itself a new inspiration for the work. All that is required now is concerted action. The committee appointed last night was representative, and a good deal is expected of them.

As usual, Mayor Duffus was on hand with a practical suggestion. He believes that to be a success the movement must be generally taken up, not supported by the Council alone or by any particular organization.

Above all else this matter must be kept free from the suspicion of politics. There is no personal glory in it for anyone, and it is a matter for felicitations that no politician has elbowed his way, axe in hand, to the grindstone.

"FIRST THINGS FIRST."

"CITIZEN," in his letter in another column, takes the right view of civic affairs when he sums up his creed in what should be taken as a slogan, "First things first." Is it not possible that ambitious builders and promoters of a city too often begin constructive work at the wrong end?

The wise man, before he assumes the responsibilities of the benedict, provides himself with a domicile. The business man proceeds according to business maxims. Before a man buys a horse or an automobile he makes sure of stable or garage.

On the same principle, the city that sets out to induce outsiders, either workmen or manufacturers, to locate within its borders, should first see to it that its house is in order for the reception of strangers.

SOME POLITICAL HISTORY.

ON THIS PAGE of The Review yesterday, in the department which records daily the events on the same date seventeen years ago, appeared the following: "Local Liberals held a meeting to decide upon a candidate in the Federal field. The names of those whose claims were considered were Richard Hall, J. B. McWilliams, Geo. E. Elliott and J. H. McClellan." In its comments on these prospective candidates The Review of that date ventured the opinion that if any of the three first mentioned was nominated, his fate would be problematic, but if Mr. McClellan should be chosen, his defeat would be assured at the start.

In those palmy days Mr. McClellan was identified with the labor movement, and, if our information is correct, held the office of president of the Trades and Labor Council. Be that as it may, he was, it appears, possessed of the ambition which distinguished him throughout his entire subsequent career.

It was not until four years later that Mr. McClellan became a real factor in local politics. It was at the historical convention of 1904 that he played his trump card. He was one of "those mentioned" for the nomination, resting his chief claim for recognition upon his connection with the labor movement. But at the eleventh hour he threw his influence into the scale on behalf of R. R. Hall. That was the convention at which outsiders dropping in as spectators took a hand in the voting, until there were two hundred—or was it five hundred?—more ballots cast than, according to actual count, there were delegates in the hall.

Mr. McClellan got his reward in the shape of the superintendency of the Trent Canal, and in the management of its affairs introduced methods, especially in connection with the pay roll, that were a credit to his inventive genius. Marriages may be made in heaven, but the alliances between Liberalism and other factions are as a rule concocted elsewhere. Labor is justified in regarding with suspicion any overtures that may come from the party with such a record behind them.

ONTARIO'S NICKEL WEALTH.

FOR THE PAST TWO YEARS a commission has been at work investigating the nickel problem in this Province with relation to the resources, the question of refining it at home, and the matter of taxation. The Opposition, who have nickel as the main contention in their platform, have been asked to withhold their criticism until the report of the commission was handed down. That report has now been made public, and the critics of the Government are answered and silenced.

The International Nickel Company have paid no taxes for the past two years, the Government refusing to accept anything until the commission had made its finding. It is now recommended that the tax imposed be not less than three or more than five per cent. on the annual output, and this means a yearly revenue from this one source alone of from $800,000 to a million and a quarter dollars.

The resources of the Province in the matter of nickel wealth are practically unlimited, equal to that of any country in the world. There is nothing to prevent the refining of Canadian nickel at home. It will be recalled in connection with this point that a Government nickel refinery is now under consideration. The process of refining that has recently been discovered will be adopted.

According to a press despatch sent out yesterday, the Conservative members of the Legislature considered the report of the commission in caucus, and decided to adopt the recommendations. Prompt legislative action will be taken with this end in view.

The war has created a new demand for the products of Canada's nickel mines. Last year's profits are estimated at sixteen million dollars. A tax of three per cent. on this output would mean a revenue of $480,000, and if the tax is placed at five per cent. the income will be $800,000. Hartley Dewart's pessimistic speeches have been so much wasted effort and misplaced criticism.

There is no difference between the timber and mineral wealth of the province so far as public revenue is concerned. All depends upon the amount of yearly production, and the method of taxation applied to one should be employed in dealing with the other. Timber cut on Ontario's Crown lands is manufactured at home, and nickel mined in Ontario should be refined here. While the war is in progress, however, nothing should be done in the way of changing business conditions to interfere with the manufacture of munitions either here or in the United States.

THE GAME NOT WORTH THE CANDLE.

THEY HAVE HAD he penny banks in the Toronto schools for years, and are now agitating for their abolition. That is the fad that a local paper that never loses an opportunity to assail the public schools—and the public schools alone—would foist upon the local educational system. A special committee of the Board of Education in Toronto has decided that the game is not worth the candle. They have reached the conclusion that the idea is all right, but the method is open to objection. Thrift is essential, but there are legitimate and recognized methods of saving money. One member of the special committee says:

> "I don't object to a little time being spent, but here are only some fifty per cent. of the pupils who are benefited with this scheme, and I have been in schools where the teachers are occupied for days in hunting up mistakes connected in some way with the banking. There may be educational value in these mistakes to the teachers, but not to the pupils. They have to suffer. No, the way we're doing now the game's not worth the candle."

The Diplomatic Conductor.

(Belleville Ontario.)

A Rochester street car conductor recently succeeded in making a crowd congregated around the rear of his car move up forward. Most of those on the back platform were women, and they did not move when he suggested that there was "plenty of room in front." The clever young man then said: "Might as well move forward. Won't do any good to stick around me. I'm married."

The Secret.

(New York Herald.)

Many a home has gone to pieces, many a marriage tie has been shattered, from lack of sincerity. Little acts of deception have caused the rift within the lute. A safeguard against evil is to have no secrets. Where there is a secret there must be something wrong. I do not refer to legitimate private affairs, but to secrets which, if told, would involve us in shame. Pity the poor wretch who for the brief moment of illicit pleasure walks every day shadowed by the spectre of exposure.

BURDENS OF YOUNG MOTHERS

Existing conditions make a greater demand on the strength, endurance and self-abnegation of the young, well bred, well educated Canadian mother than is made on women of the same social status in other civilized countries. "Help" of all kinds is more easily available elsewhere, and the low standard of style if not of living lessen the burden.

This burden is no lighter than was that of the admirable woman of pioneer days. They and their families lived more simply, and it was easier to get "help." The young bride of today who marries a man of limited means is virtually compelled to do all her own work, yet she tries to conform to a standard of style, that in Europe would not be attempted except by families able to keep several servants.

The college or high school graduate who marries is generally capable. She cooks and sews and knows more about food values and "family budgets" than her grandmother ever dreamed of. But she is generally very wasteful of the one thing of surpassing value to the family and to the country—herself. The European lower middle class housewife who does her own cooking provides for her family for one meal one staple dish, which may be excellent in quality and sufficient in quantity and which is eaten with its adjuncts without change of "cover." Many a young American housekeeper provides a variety that would do credit to a chef, and serves it with a profusion of dishes worthy of a high priced hotel.

Spoons, knives and forks, were considered not so many centuries ago such a luxury that great nobles carried their own with them when they were invited to a banquet. The Canadian housekeeper thinks nothing of washing dozens of them after each meal and the number of dishes washed during the course of the day is staggering, even when the family is still small. Yet one hour a day at the sink means thirty "daylight" days a year, the best share of a whole month spent in washing dishes! The rest of the housework conforms to the same standard of style which modern conveniences have rendered possible, without eliminating, however, the overdraft continually made on the young housekeeper's time and strength.

The burden of motherhood must be lightened for the young, educated women of moderate means if the birth rate is to be increased among them. One step in the right direction would be the universal adoption of simplar standards of style. Improved financial conditions would help little as long as the increase would simply be absorbed by style.

Another step would be the establishment of some connection between the girls who need to be trained for motherhood by actual practice in the care of children and the mothers who need help in this care. Schools have been started to give training for motherhood, but the little "hands that cling and feet that follow" will teach a girl things about children that no books or classroom demonstrations can ever teach. Viewed in the light of a necessary "national service" the work of lifting the too heavy burden of educated motherhood should not lack volunteers.

EDITOR'S MAIL

Editor Review: During the past few days much has been said about a free market. Opinions vary, but at the same time the majority of those that express their views lay stress on the advantages to the farmer, whether free or otherwise. The main object should be the attraction of a regular supply of the commodities raised by the farmer and required by the city for daily consumption and if a free market would bring such conditions about, then let us have a free market.

Looking at it from evey point of view the abolition of a market for the purpose of buying or selling farm produce would result in the near futura in what is most desired and beneficial to both producer and consumer.

As things stand at present the farmer does not attend the market unless due to sudden shortage in supply when abnormal prices can be demanded.

Cheese and bacon are two of the most important articles produced by the farmer and neither are offered at the market place. Butter should not be offered there either, nor should poultry. All industries that are successful today are those that are specialized and with the possibilities of cold storage for perishable produce, such as poultry, eggs, butter, etc., properly handled a much more even supply would be available, consequently a much evener and normal price prevail.

Butter factories, creameries, packing houses, cold storage, available and supplied by co-operation of the producer, with legislation to provide against cornering of any such articles would place the farmer in a very much better position by devoting the time spent at market or a good deal less time in carrying into effect the placing of such articles for sale by organization and co-operation. All articles then would sell according to quality as does cheese, butter or bacon.

One writer claims that the city provides a market square worth $50,000 for the farmers to dispose of their produce, receiving neither rent or taxes therefrom.

On the other hand, I might point out the ratepayers of the county provide a park in front of the court house for the use of the citizens of the city and receive neither rent or taxes from it, but grant $100 a year towards its upkeep, and if the area of the market square is worth $50,000, the park is worth $150,000. In both cases the market square and park were grants from the Crown in the one case to the town council, in the other case to the county council.

Animosity stirred from such references is a thing of the past and rural and urban citizens must cooperate for the common good of all. The object of all should be the transaction of business one with the other, not the driving away of the farmer from his adjacent towns by drastic market rules, and locking of church sheds, lest he takes advantage of the rural post service and through the same, orders what he requires from T. Eaton Co. and places all his produce on the railway to be delivered in the large consuming centres in a short space of time.

Rather be loyal one to the other and trade at your own doors whether it be on the market or at the stores in the home town.

FARMER.

FIRST THINGS FIRST

Editor Review: Lord Beaconsfield said, half a century ago, that "The public health is the foundation on which reposes the happiness of the people and the power of the country." This statement is now generally accepted and it raises the question as to what are the fundamentals of a city's development. Most authorities place them in the order of their importance as follows:—

1. Health, including:
Garbage system.
Care of sewage.
Source of water supply.
Protection of milk and food.
Prevention of epidemics in the elementary school.

2. Schools.—A good school system not only develops the young but safeguards the community against deterioration. A study of American cities shows that wherever education was neglected stagnation soon set in. The progressive American cities have fostered education in every possible way. They liberally support (one might say lavishly support) their elementary schools and colleges, their libraries, art galleries, museums, etc.

Within recent weeks the city of Cleveland has placed a man at the head of her educational institutions at a salary of $12,000 a year. In Ontario the superintendent for the whole province gets something less than $4,000.

3. Morals: A good moral tone is more essential to the permanent development of a city than is a low tax rate.

The moral tone of a city should not be left to the churches alone.

The best preventive measures against a lax moral tone are adequate opportunities for recreation and amusement, such as parks, play grounds, public baths, social centres etc. Money spent on these could not be better invested.

4. Business:—The business that deserves attention first is the development of trade with the surrounding territory by providing good roads, radials, good markets, rural free delivery, fairs, etc.

The city should then be ready to encourage manufacturers by having an adequate labor supply, water power, good shipping facilities, etc.

The merchants or distributors should be encouraged by having good fire protection, well-lighted streets, low rates of insurance, etc.

I believe this order places "first things first."

THE RIVER OF GRAIN FROM WEST TO EAST

Astounding Figures of One Railroad Show Immense Volume of Cereals Produced on the Prairies

Western Canada's crop year commences on September 1st and ends on August 31st the year following. So it happens that during September, those chiefly interested in the marketing of the crop, collect and compile statistics to show how the details compare with those of the preceding twelve months.

Grain figures are of interest wider than most. To the multitude concerned in the movement of grain from the farmers' siding to the consumer, they surpass in interest the latest fiction. To the business section, they speak of obligations and credits renewed; to manufacturers, as foreshadowing a revival of ordering and a busy season for the industries; to the farmer and his people, they take tangible form in new articles of comfort about the home; but to the men on the railways, they provoke reminiscences of days and nights on the road, and continuous striving to keep the ordinary traffic of the country in motion while the wheat was moving to the sea.

During the last crop year, the Canadian Northern Railway handled over its lines between Lake Superior and the Rocky Mountains, 109,122 cars of grain produced along its rails, and inspected by the Government at Winnipeg, Calgary and other points in the West. This is an increase of 69,222 cars over the total of the last previous year, and represents a gain of 178 per cent. A modern box car carries 1,200 bushels, so that the figures mean that one road transported more than 130,000,000 bushels of grain.

Coupled together, these 109,122 cars would form one continuous train Toronto to Montreal and back, and up north as far as Parry Sound. Split this up into freight trains of fifty cars each, which is the average, and there are 2,182 trains, each with locomotive, caboose and train crew. The cars handled over and above the total of the year before, would constitute a train continuing without a break from Toronto to New York.

DON'T PASTURE TOO SOON

Feed Cow Well During Two Months of Rest

The average cow that freshens in the spring begins her year's work with a serious handicap. She does if she is poor in flesh, and the cow that is dry during the winter or a stripper is apt to be, for a low production does not prompt good feeding. Good clover, hay and corn silage or clover hay and fodder corn will bring a dry cow up to her period of freshening in pretty fair condition, but wild or timothy hay and corn stover will not.

It is now generally recognized among farmers who make a study of their cows that good feeding during a dairy cow's six weeks or two months of rest is as profitable or even more so than at any other time. The flesh a good dairy cow lays on at this time will be converted into milk later. Her milk flow will be larger and her test will be higher when she freshens, if she is in first class condition.

Shortage of feed, the rush of spring work and the temptation to turn the cows on pasture before there is feed there for them are all to the disadvantage of the cow that freshens in the spring. Whatever may be the portion of the rest of the cows and stock, it will pay to feed the cow well that is soon to freshen. Not only a low milk production and a weak calf follow poor feeding at this time, but after birth retention which may lead to serious illness.

Horses Indispensable

The haze of uncertainty which has obscured horse breeding is steadily clearing away. Breeders are in a better position to-day to judge fairly of the future than they have been at any time in the last decade. Factors whose precise influence was problematical—automobiles, motor trucks, and tractors—have found their places, and their limitations are now fairly well understood. The greatest war in the history of the world has taught us, anew, the indispensability of horses and mules in warfare. Nations concerned with adequate defence measures must not neglect possessing plenty of horses for emergencies. Horse breeding is a world problem and must be considered as such, for horses are produced and used all over the world.

How To Carry Fowls

The old way of carrying fowls by the legs, or by the wings, is not practised by the present-day poultrymen. It is a cruel practice. Holding the fowl firmly by the legs and allowing the body to rest on the arm is a much better method.

A considerable number of munition workers left Australia for England.

ZEPPS. IN MIDLANDS

Wonderful Escapes of Villages From Heavy Bombing

A Zeppelin which visited districts in the North Midlands about 1.30 a.m. dropped at least a dozen bombs in a small area, which, however, escaped serious damage. In one locality where a number of bombs fell there were no casualties. One missile, probably an incendiary bomb, fell in a brick yard in the midst of rows of houses, and the buildings were badly splashed with molten metal, but no fire occured.

One Zeppelin was over this area for about half an hour. The inhabitants were first warned by a rapid succession of violent explosions. They retired to their cellars until the danger was passed, after which the whole population ran into the streets.

WOMEN FARM WORKERS HAVE BIG APPETITES

Remarkable Success of Mobilization of Women is Graphically Illustrated by Personal Testimony

"Ten big loaves eaten at two meals" is a fair testimonial to the appetite given by farm work to the eight girls who are learning farm work at Mrs Watson-Kennedy's farm at Cley, Norfolk. They are members of the Women's Land Council who sent them there and who are working to find and train an army of women for land work. One of the eight, Miss Lumley, was present in her farming costume at a meeting in the Kensington Town Hall, promoted by the council, where she spoke about the charms of farm life and work and about the work learned.

Her short-skirted costume, of sail-brown cloth, with cap to match, her leggings and solid brown boots, were quite attractive wear. Her pink cheeks and bright eyes bore out quite eloquently her statements about the healthiness of farm work and the appetite it gives. As to the attractions of the life she was full of enthusiasm.

Becoming Stronger

First she described her costume, adding the information that with suitable clothing such as hers, colds and illnesses did not visit the outdoor worker; she could brave all weathers. Then she described how strength developed in a woman after a few weeks' work. "At first," she said, "I found it impossible to lift a two-bushel basket. Now I can lift a full basket quite easily or a sack on my back. Churns and things I find quite easy to lift when one has got used to it. One eats much more. Between eight of us we ate ten big loaves at two meals. Before doing this work we never had such appetites."

The daily programme of the eight girls begins at 5.45 a.m. The cow houses and stables and milking are the first duties. Then two girls go on the milk round. The others clean out the stables, carry out the refuse, and feed and water the animals. Ploughing and harrowing, loading up at the stacks, helping the farm carpenter, poultry, breaking in of young horses—all these tasks keep the girls busy in all weathers.

"Never Dull"

"Once the snow was so very bad," said Miss Lumley, "that it was suggested that we girls should not be sent out with the milk cart but that some of the 'lads' should go. When this news reached us there was nearly a free fight among us as to which of us should be allowed to take the cart out. There is never a dull moment all day, and never a suggestion of slacking. But if you really want to know how jolly the life is you should go yourself."

Miss Broadhurst, the president of the league, mentioned that the league had found 3,000 women for the land, and Miss Farquharson added the information that they had trained 500 women in farm work to act as leaders or forewomen of gangs of women workers.

CANADIAN VALOR

Incidents of the Taking of Regina Trench

A Canadian official eye-witness relates the following: On Sunday we delivered a strong attack upon Regina Trench (north of Courcelette). Battalions from Montreal, Nova Scotia, and Eastern Canada, and a French-Canadian battalion took part. Desperate fighting occurred, and our men succeeded, despite heavy machine gun fire, in penetrating into several sectors. The trench was strongly built and protected by two wire entanglements which our artillery fire had not entirely destroyed. The enemy counter-attacked in force and regained the whole trench.

An action of the greatest gallantry was performed by a private belonging to an Edmonton battalion. He was taking part in a bombing attack when the advance was arrested and the supply of bombs exhausted. Although one of his fingers had been blown off by a German bomb, he jumped out of the trench and, firing at point blank range at the enemy, killed and wounded many. The remainder, 62 in number, thinking themselves cut off, surrendered. The [illegible] two other men, escorted the prisoners across open ground under heavy fire to a support trench, and then returned and reported himself for duty to his commanding officer before his wounds had been dressed. This action, undoubtedly made it possible for the battalion to capture and hold 250 yards of trench at a critical moment in the general attack.

EGGS IN WATERGLASS

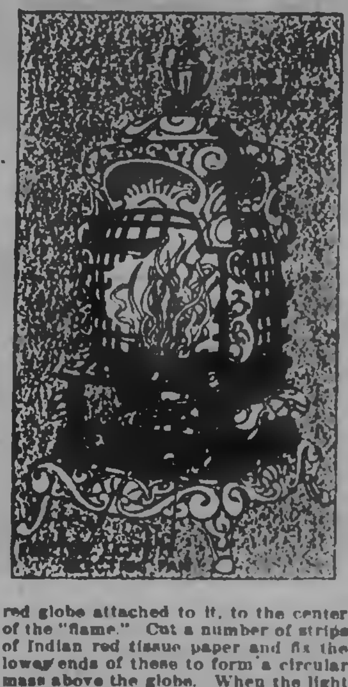
The best method of preserving eggs for home use, or for sale in a limited way, is to pack them in water-tight vessels and cover them with a solution of water glass. Cover the vessel and keep it in a cool, dark place to prevent evaporation. Only fresh eggs and those with clean, sound shells can be preserved. Those with dirty shells, even when carefully washed, will not keep well. A few dirty eggs in the vessel may spoil the entire lot.

Stone crocks holding not over 10 gallons make the best vessels. The eggs should be put in daily as gathered, but one can hold them for several days. Many village and city housekeepers buy a crate or two of eggs in the spring when they are the cheapest and preserve them in water glass. Estimate three dozen eggs to each gallon capacity of the vessel. The liquid water glass, or silicate of soda, which can be purchased at most drug stores for 15 to 30 cents per quart, is used for this purpose, one quart with 10 quarts of pure water. Rain water or boiled water is preferred.

IMITATION FIRE

Inexpensive Method For Use in Window Displays

Window decorations may frequently be made attractive by the use of an imitation fire in a stove or a fireplace, when an indoor setting is on display. To produce such an effect, put an electric fan below the place at which the imitation fire is to be arranged and run an electric light cord, with a red globe attached to it, to the center of the "flame." Cut a number of strips of Indian red tissue paper and fix the lower ends of these to form a circular mass above the globe. When the light is turned on permit the fan to direct a stream of air against the tissue paper ribbons, forcing them upward to appear like tongues of flame. The sketch shows this method applied to a heater. The fan is placed in the ash box and the electric light is conducted through the grate.—Popular Mechanics.



HABIT OF SAVING

Establishing Your Character You Will Earn Respect

One of the best habits that a young man can form is that of saving a certain part of his earnings regularly. It's going to take a strong character to form the habit of saving money from a small income, yet it can be done. There are so many allurements and attractions for a young man nowadays that it will take all of his strength of purpose to live to the motto, "I am going to save now, so that in the years to come I shall have something to show for my industry." And men can save money on a small salary if they will. It is admitted, of course, that there are times when a man with family, children and sickness must go in debt, must for the time live beyond his means. But the fact that he has formed the habit of thrift will tide him over many a hard place, and give others confidence in his ability to get out of debt if once he has been compelled to go into it. Among the many good things that may be said of a young man there is none better than to say of him: "He is a man of sobriety, industry and thrift." These things make more readily for success than one may imagine. But greater than the money that a young man can save is the character that he is establishing. Miserliness, stinginess, greed are to be abhorred, but prudence and carefulness in expenditure are graces which cultivated make of a man a power in the community and give to him a character which commends itself to all.

WIFE TOO ILL TO WORK

Her Health Restored by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.
Indianapolis, Indiana.—"My health was so poor and my constitution so run down that I could not work. I was thin, pale and weak, weighed but 109 pounds and was in bed most of the time. I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and five months later I weighed 133 pounds. I do all the housework and washing for eleven and I can truthfully say Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been a godsend to me for I would have been in my grave today but for it. I would tell all women suffering as I was to try your valuable remedy."—Mrs. WM. Best Size of Broilers

It is claimed that the most delicious, juicy broiler that an epicure can fancy is a turkey poult of about six pounds, or when about two-thirds grown, and of medium size. Many a young male two-thirds grown would be too large to broil. If rather large, however, the breast may be gashed, and thus more easily cooked through, but it must not be dried.

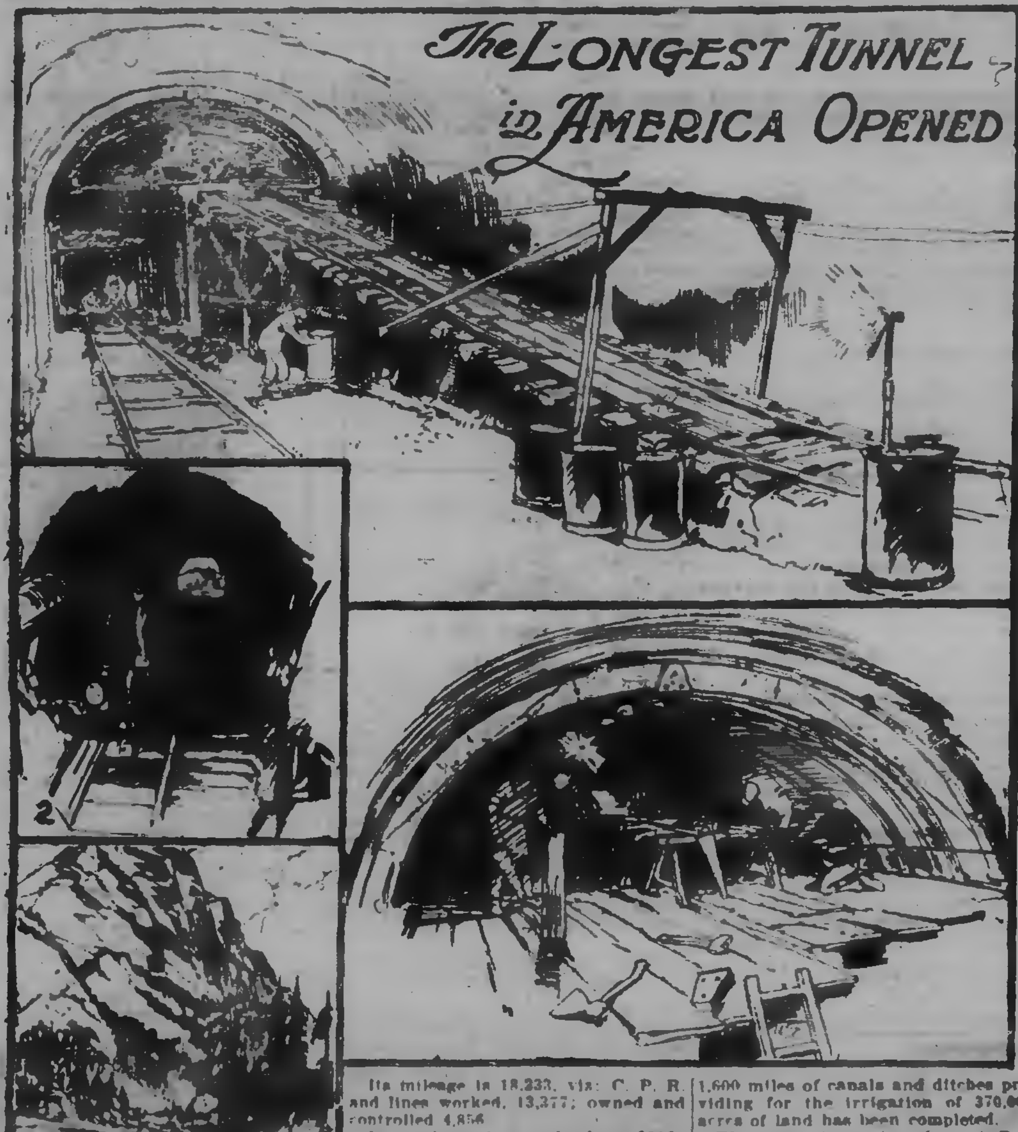
The Longest Tunnel in America Opened



THE completion of the Connaught Tunnel through Mount Macdonald in the Selkirk Mountains in British Columbia, with its five miles of double track railway lines, costing five and one half million dollars, recalls many interesting developments in construction work on the Canadian Pacific Railway since the railway began operation in 1881. The first real newspaper story after the opening of the Canadian Pacific Railway "broke" in February, 1882, near Flat Creek, now Oak Lake, near Brandon, Manitoba. That year was the worst for snow storms the province had ever experienced. One night a flanger, pulled by an engine which burned wood and had to stop to "blow up" steam every few miles, "jumped" the track. The universal fuel on locomotives then was wood. Train No. 1 of the early days left Winnipeg at 7 a.m., stopping at Portage la Prairie, 56 miles west, for dinner and reaching Brandon at 6.30 p.m. The bulk of freight traffic at that time consisted of rails and other construction material. Since that time the development has been rapid.

The Canadian Pacific is now the greatest transportation corporation in the world.

Its mileage is 18,233, viz: C. P. R. and lines worked, 13,377; owned and controlled 4,856.

Its equipment is valued at $506,-577,265.32, not including ocean, lake and river steamers.

Its equipment includes 2,255 locomotives; 2,784 passenger cars; 87,108 freight cars, and other cars, 8,287.

It has 65,000 employees with a monthly pay roll of $3,625,000 in 1916.

It carried 13,833,978 passengers in 1916.

Its capital stock is $260,000,000; preferred $80,681,921; debenture stock $176,284,882; mortgage bonds $6,399,180.

It has given 7,000 men to the British Empire; 179 have been killed and 403 have been reported as wounded.

It has 13,600 miles of pole lines and 102,700 miles of wires.

It has a fleet of 59 steamers, exclusive of the Atlantic service: Great Lakes, 5; ferry service, 2; B. C. Lake and River, 24; B. C. coast service, 26; Bay of Fundy service, 2.

Its gross earnings, according to the annual report in 1916, were $129,481,-88[illegible] expenses, $80,255,965; net earnings, $49,225,920.

Its ocean services include Canadian Pacific Trans-Atlantic, Trans-Pacific Lines and Allan Line.

It circles the world by land and sea.

The irrigation project of the company in Alberta will irrigate portions of a tract of [illegible] acres of land, east of Calgary.

The western section, comprising 1,600 miles of canals and ditches providing for the irrigation of 370,000 acres of land has been completed.

The great irrigation dam at Bassano, Alberta, built by the C. P. R., was opened April 25, 1914. It is 7,000 feet in length and contains more than a million cubic feet of earth and concrete.

The Canadian Pacific Railway has seen Canada increase from 4,000,000 population to 8,000,000; it has seen capital wealth increase from a few millions to $9,[illegible]; it has seen 3,500 miles of railway lengthened to [illegible] miles, with annual salaries and wages of $111,762,9[illegible]; it has seen scientific farming produce million dollar crops, tremendous strides in medicine and surgery and a transformation in social conditions.

It has seen the trade of Canada develop for 12 months in 1916 to $2,028,-660,788, an increase of $881,214,237 over 1915.

Canada has seen eight Governor-Generals since the Canadian Pacific Railway began operation. They were the Marquis of Lorne, Lord Lansdowne, Lord Stanley, Earl of Aberdeen, Lord Minto, Earl Grey, Duke of Connaught and Duke of Devonshire.

The following premiers have held power since its inception: Sir John A. Macdonald, Sir John Abbott, Sir John Thompson, Sir Mackenzie Bowell, Sir Charles Tupper, Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Sir Robert L. Borden; and the great railway company has seen Canada come third in the world's wheat crop estimate in 1915, with 376,303,600 bushels and 711,681 occupiers take farms and holdings.

Regimental Orders

Duties—

Orderly officer for today—Lieut. J. M. Shook.

Orderly officer for tomorrow—Lieut. T. W. Quinn

Mr. and Mrs. Dawson Kennedy, 600 Water St., have received the following letter from their son, Pte. M. Kennedy, who enlisted with the 107th Batt. in Brandon, who was transferred to the Canadian Mounted Rifles on reaching England and who has been in the trenches since last November:

My dear Father and Mother:

Your letter of Feb. 1 came a couple of days ago and was glad to hear from you again. There was a note from Perce written in Montreal with no date on it but it must have been on the road for a long time judging by its looks. Your parcel has not come yet. Am looking for it each day. Perce said in his letter that Fred expected to come across again soon.

If I could write you all I wished I could send you a very interesting letter. The winter is over and it certainly was not very pleasant. The conditions are very bad but we make the best of it and whatever may happen me I want you to know that I have always been glad I am in the army and glad to be at the front, and if I do not go back it is nothing anyway. There are thousands of others who do not go back and we are only doing what every able-bodied man should be doing today. It would surprise many in Canada to see how light-hearted are all the boys over here. I never felt better in my life than I do now. Give my best wishes to all at home. I hope you are all well. Love from your boy

Marvin.

FRENCH IS LANGUAGE OF INSTRUCTION

OTTAWA, March 28.—That Regulation 17 of the Ontario Government in regard to the conduct of the separate schools is not being obeyed in Ottawa bilingual schools was made evident from the report of Inspector Thomas Swift, read at the meeting of the Ottawa Separate School Board last night. The meeting was held behind closed doors but it was learned that the Inspector's report, which was read at the meeting, and which is in the hands of the Ontario Department of Education, stated that in all cases during E's tour of inspection in February, he had found the French language used as the language of communication and instruction. The reasons assigned by the teachers were that they found that as French is the mother tongue of the pupils they were able to make more progress when taught in their own language.

Inspector Swift's report stated that he found most of the bilingual schools from one year to eighteen months behind the public schools in proficiency.

"The language of instruction and communication is French," stated the report, "and there seems to have been no effort to teach the courses in English."

The report said the pupils were being well taught in the French language.

"I consider that a favorable report," commented Chairman S. M. Genest.

"Yes, it is in one way," replied Trustee Leclaire, "but he finds we are not observing the regulations and it means an adverse report to us. That means the appointment of another commission."

Referring to the proposed appointment of another commission by the Ontario Government, Chairman Genest remarked:

"We'll fight, that's all."

SUSPENSE WAS WORST

The following letter has been received from a Toronto man telling of the action in which he was wounded: "Our battalion relieved another on Saturday night about nine-thirty. When we were in possession of the trench, which was only about four feet deep, and two feet wide, we were told we had to dig a 'jumping off trench.' This is a trench dug somewhere in 'No Man's Land' for the first wave to get into just before the attack. During the digging of that trench it began to rain, and turned very cold, which made it bad for us, as we had no greatcoats. The trench was finished about midnight, and we returned to our original front line. The N.C.O.'s were called to Company Headquarters, where we were told we were going over at 4.50 Sunday morning.

Then came the worst part of it—the waiting for four hours and fifty minutes. There were not many words spoken that night, we were too fully occupied in thinking.

Four forty-five—'Five minutes more, boys,' our officer said; 'All ready, sir,' we answered—'Four fifty.' Exactly on the dot our artillery and machine guns opened up and over we went in three waves for the enemy's trench, 800 yards away.

"I got about 200 yards over when whack; something hit me in the thigh, and my leg refused to come forward, so I dropped into a shell hole and called for a stretcher-bearer, who was coming with the third wave. He dressed me and then went on. Poor devil, I pitied him, for I could hear the bullets hitting a tin that was just above my head. I had not been in the shell hole long when another fellow jumped in with a broken arm. We had a little conference and decided to stay there until the attack was over.

"About six-thirty things quieted down a little, so we made tracks for our front line, he walking, me crawling, and Fritz sniping us all the way back. We managed it, anyway, from there, and I crawled to the advanced dressing station, where I was dressed properly. Then a bunch of prisoners came down and an officer made them carry us to the horse ambulance which was about two miles back from this."

LLOYD-GEORGE'S SECOND

Brilliant Career of Devonport as Manager of London's Port

Lord Devonport's close association with Lloyd-George pointed to the certainty that he could if he chose occupy a high position in any Government that contained the brilliant Welshman. For years the two worked side by side. When Lloyd-George was President of the Board of Trade, Lord Devonport, then Hudson Kearley, was his Parliamentary Secretary. It is an open secret that it fell to the lot of the secretary to put into practical business shape the brilliant imaginings of his chief. So well did he perform this difficult task that he was created a baronet, and was put in charge of the work of organizing what is known as the Port of London Authority.

Up to 1909 the control of the Port of London, with its forty miles of quays and its docks occupying many thousands of acres, was divided among many different corporations, public and private. These bodies worked independently, and sometimes at cross-purposes, with the result that the river was not properly dredged and the re-export trade was seriously interfered with.

A Royal Commission having decided that all authority should be concentrated in one body, an Act of Parliament was passed and the Port of London Authority came into existence. The Port of London Authority fixes the port rates and dock charges, polices the river, borrows money for improvements and controls the Thames from its mouth to Teddington Lock. There are various delegates and representatives on this board, but Lord Devonport as chairman was the virtual dictator of its policy for the next seven years.

BRITISH COOLNESS

Changed Shirts During Charge—Much Hun Booty

An Englishman writes: Splendid work, even in the capture of prisoners, was done by the signallers, many of whom went forward with the first wave. One of them found himself all alone and wounded at the mouth of a crowded German dug out. By way of occupation he told the men they were his prisoners, and then, using the telephone strapped round his body, called for assistance and guides for the prisoners.

The whole battle—this soldier's battle—was marked by unnumbered episodes of individual personal acts of dash and coolness. Some men were too cool. They stopped to light German cigars, to taste the excellent food or don the enemy's helmets—which they wore hilariously for the rest of the day. One man, who discovered an ordnance store, deliberately changed his damp and muddy shirt for a clean German garment from the packets.

I have never heard higher praise of our artillery, and the signs of its excellence are written on the soil. Everywhere in the near neighborhood of a trench the ground is like a Gruyere cheese. Beaumont-Hamel itself was pounded to the highest pitch of powerful precision. Some of the nests, apart from their human occupants, were worth robbing. One food dump contained excellent butter, white bread, tinned hams, soda water, and other luxuries. Cigars were "frequent and free," and the ordnance stores seem to have been of good quality. One brigade took 54 machine guns and 1 heavy mortar.

ANOTHER ANZAC ORIGIN

The word "Anzac" is popularly supposed to be a kind of acrostic composed of the initial letters of the principal words in the military designations of the Australasian Forces when operating at the Dardanelles—"Australian and New Zealand Army Corps." It would appear, however, from inquiries made by the Australian Commonwealth Department in London that the word is Arabic, says the London Morning Post, and that its attribution to the above-mentioned source is merely coincidence or the result of association of ideas. It is said that the nearest approach to the correct spelling of the word in English would be "Anzak," and that as it means "to cause to jump," it may have been suggested by the nickname "Kangaroos," sometimes applied to the Australian troops when first quartered in Egypt. The Australian papers announce that the use of the word is not only forbidden in the Commonwealth for trade purposes, but it may not be used as the name of a residence, vehicle or boat.

USES OF MOSSES IN WAR

"One afternoon a week I go to McGill to sort sphagnum. It is a moss that I believe grows plentifully near Pictou and is better than cotton or gauze for dressings. What we use is gathered by the soldiers." It was only a sentence dropped into an after-the-holidays note, but it brought the scent of a new romance, and the joyful thought that, apparently, here was a national antidote to the scarcity and consequent high price of cotton which has been one of the alarming developments of the war.

Speculation became certainty, and the romance grew more intense with the first questions put to a naturalist, and his replies: "The moss, usually a light yellowish green, grows plentifully, in the temperate zone, and there are nineteen varieties on the North American continent. It forms the soil in which orchids flourish, and as it dies it transforms itself into the peat bogs which give the Irish peasantry their fuel. In Canada and the States, its chief users have been florists and nurserymen, the former making it the bed for floral designs because of its capacity for holding moisture, the latter wrapping it about the roots of young trees and shrubs to preserve them during transportation."

Splint pads, bed pads and elbow cushions are made of slightly coarser moss than that used for the absorbent pads, which, at McGill, are made in four sizes. Voluntary workers were given permission early in the war to gather sphagnum in the New Forest for the British Red Cross, and it is being used also in the French and Belgian hospitals and in Malta, Alexandria, Gallipoli and Serbia.

GARDENING IS CHICAGO

"Get your feet and hands into the soil. It's good for the soul."

That is the motto that will decorate all the stationery and advertising used by the central garden bureau in carrying through to completion Chicago's citywide movement.

"Cleanliness is next to godliness, all right," said Chairman Perry G. Holden, "but dirt has its place in the scheme of life, and contact with it in the right way makes better and healthiest people. The best way is through the garden. Scores of thousands of Chicago people that now have the garden fever should not let their good impulses slip by, but should communicate with our bureau. We will help them in every way possible to plan and make a successful garden. That is what we are here for."

Big signs at different points in the city hall point garden enthusiasts to the headquarters in the mayor's office on the fifth floor.

The plowing problem is believed to have been solved through the offer of the city teams from the street cleaning department and securing teams through the applicants to that department for work. Tractors will be used on the larger plots. A week's lecture campaign will be staged soon with a thousand meetings planned throughout the city to enlist applicants for gardens and to get the use of vacant lots.

FORTY BUYERS AT FIRST SALE

BIG DEMAND FOR HORSES AT THE MARKET SQUARE.

The first of the monthly horse sales days under the auspices of the Ontario Horse Shippers Association was held here today. About forty buyers were on hand to buy what the farmers had to offer. The bad roads and weather was a detriment to a large sale. Quite a few animals were purchased and the visiting buyers were quite happy, feeling sure that their next visit on the last Wednesday in April will be more profitable and better attended.

They wished it made quite clear to the farmers that any horse which cannot be used by the owner will find a ready sale at the monthly market. Buyers will be on hand to buy mares for breeding farm horses for express deliveries, lumbermen's teams, good drivers and any general purpose horses. Condition, soundness or anything else does not count. There is a bidder ready for each animal to be sold.

The next sale will be on Wednesday, April 25.

Call for Militia Act

Acting on the request from the Montreal Board of Trade the Council of the Kingston Board of Trade has endorsed the action of the Montreal Board calling for the enforcement of the Militia Act and will recommend the local board to endorse it.

Insurance and Financial Review of March 1917, has the Following to Say of

Scott & Walmsley Limited

The underwriting firm of Scott and Walmsley, which is so well and favorably known throughout Canada for its sound business principles, and which has under its management The Queen City Fire Insurance Company, The Hand-in-Hand Fire Insurance Company, The Millers and Manufacturers Insurance Company, and the Fire Insurance Exchange Corporation, has had one of the best years in its experience.

During a particularly trying year, when many fire companies were well satisfied if they succeeded in breaking even, it had the happy experience of making a profit in the four companies under their management of $84,000.00, and this after paying liberal dividends to shareholders and to policyholders in the mutual and stock companies.

Fire underwriting is always something of a gamble, but when one sees, year after year, a substantial profit made by the same underwriters, there is something more than an element of luck entering into it, and credit must be given to the men in charge, not only for sound business methods, but also for careful underwriting. Had the same care and attention been given to detail, in many of our Canadian fire insurance companies which have gone out of business, there would have been a different story to tell.

The shareholders of the companies under the management of Joseph Walmsley, Col. John D. Chipman and F. E. Dingle, of Scott and Walmsley, Ltd., general agents of the four companies, are to be congratulated on having three such able men to look after their affairs.

COMMISSIONS HERE WILL BE DISCONTINUED

OPPORTUNITY FOR CANADIAN OFFICERS TO GO OVERSEAS.

OTTAWA, March 28 — No more commissions are to be granted in the Canadian Expeditionary Force. The Militia Department has issued a circular to some units, and soon all will be apprised that the practice of granting commissions is to be discontinued. It is pointed out that there are many well qualified lieutenants in the country who have been unable to get commissions in overseas units. The artillery units alone have over 700 officers on their waiting list. The circular states that arrangements have been made that officers now unattached may be posted with battalions in England and given an opportunity for advancement.

The letter reads as follows, and is addressed to the commanders of the various units: "I have the honor by direction to inform you that there are in Canada many lieutenants who are qualified and who are awaiting appointments in the Canadian Expeditionary Force, who have no chance of going overseas unless they are either seconded or resign their commissions, and if they elect to enlist they will not need to serve with units in Canada, but will be collected at convenient centres and sent over to England in drafts as soon as troopships are available. On their arrival in England arrangements will be made, if possible, to allow them to be posted with any unit they prefer (subject to the exigencies of the service), and with the qualifications they possess their advancement should be rapid.

"I am directed to request that you will please report how many lieutenants there are in your unit who are likely to avail themselves of the opportunity now offered.

"The intention is that, in future, no more commissions will be granted in the Canadian Expeditionary Force in Canada."

Ask for Compulsion

The Hamilton Recruiting League decided to petition Premier Borden, the Dominion Cabinet, Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Major-General Mewburn expressing the desire for compulsory service or the enforcement of the Militia Act to secure the required 50,000 additional recruits to take the place of that number of Canadian soldiers under orders for overseas.

HOW FARMERS CAN RAISE MONEY FOR IMPROVEMENTS

Attorney General Lucas Explains His Bill Providing for Agricultural Loans.

TORONTO, March 28—When the bill respecting loans for agricultural purposes was in committee, Hon. Mr. Lucas said the general policy was one of assisting in increased farm production. It was not primarily a financial measure. The policy of agricultural credits had been accepted in practically all the provinces, although some of the systems were on a different basis. The bill which was being discussed was along fairly conservative lines.

In reply to Mr. Thomas Marshall (Lincoln), the Attorney-General said the township first passed a by-law saying it wanted to come under the farm loan proposition. The general by-law would be passed by the Council which would authorize proceedings under the Act. Then the individual farmer who desired a loan must make on a prescribed form his application, showing the purposes of his land, one-half of which must be for permanent improvements and the other half may be for such purposes as may be set out and approved by regulations. If the Council approves of the application it is passed on to the Provincial Treasurer. Then, when the improvements are made and the money is expended in whatever way is approved of, and when an official certifies that the work is done for which the money is being borrowed, the township will pass a by-law and levy a rate against the man's farm for the repayment of the loan covering a long period of years, the interest and principal repayable each year. Any attempt to advance money before the expenditure was made by the farmer would involve very large increased cost of administration of the loan. The loan is limited to two-thirds of the assessed value of the farm.

Mr. L. P. Wigle (South Essex) suggested that after the township council had approved an application temporary advances might be made before the farmer had completed his improvements.

The Attorney-General said this would be taken into consideration.

15cts FOR SHAVE OR BEARD TRIM

BARBERS HAVE INCREASE UNDER CONSIDERATION.

Increased prices for shave and beard trim are under consideration by the barbers, and it is expected all the shops will be lined by tomorrow. An announcement of the increase from 10 cents to 15 cents will likely be made shortly.

Fifteen cents is the prevailing price in the majority of other cities.

RESIGNS HIS SEAT IN COUNCIL OF APSLEY.

APSLEY, March 28.—We regret exceedingly that Mr. Williams has resigned his seat in Apsley council, having held it for three years. He was one of our best councillors. His supporters are in hopes of re-electing him in the near future.

INSURANCE ADJUSTED.

The County Property Committee met yesterday afternoon to consider the adjustment of the insurance on the county building and jail. The cheque for $18,700 in settlement of the loss is expected daily. This was Messrs. Finnie and Graham's estimate of the damage. The work of re-construction will be proceeded with as soon as the weather permits.

Don't think too much of your own methods. Other people may be right about them.

PREMIER HEARST SENDS LETTER

perly prize anything that is obtained for nothing.

The procuring of seeds and plants was arranged for and this afforded big minded people the opportunity to make donations.

In the first year of the experiment there were 130 gardens and 462 gardeners and the value of the produce was $5,700. The second year there were 254 gardens and the value of the crop was $9,000. Each garden is beautified by the planting of a row of flowers.

Types of Gardeners

Nineteen trades and seven nationalities were represented by the gardeners. Women were especially successful in this new line. Men, boys and girls will garden not because they need the vegetables but as a patriotic duty. The movement is general. Mayors of all the towns and cities in Ontario are writing to Toronto for instructions and in Lindsay several prizes have been donated for the best gardens.

The Question Drawer

After Mr. Robson had received a hearty vote of thanks, moved by Rev. Father McColl and seconded by Chief Howard, he answered a number of questions propounded by his auditors. One-eighth of an acre, he said, is sufficient for one man. Intensified cultivation is better than skimming over the land. Gardens for children are graded according to the size of those who work them.

The sympathy of the ladies is desirable and in Toronto they are holding potato teas instead of pink functions and bridge parties.

The best kind of land to cultivate should be settled by a local committee. Land easily drained should be given first chance and if possible the soil should be fertilized.

Expert gardeners can be secured at any time to give instruction by applying to the Agricultural Department.

The committee should determine the value as a fertilizer of the charred grain at the Quaker Oats plant. Mr. Robson promised to have a sample analyzed.

Secretary Meserve of the Y. M. C. A. asked what form of organization was preferable. Mr. Robson said the aim should be to make the interest as general as possible. He suggested a Peterborough Garden Club with a nominal membership fee. A committee should be named to draw up a form or organization.

On motion of M. J. Maher, seconded by Walter Oke, Chairman Stocker nominated Ald. Dobbin, Rev. Father McColl, Chief Howard, Frank Wise, ex-Ald. Crowe, F. H. Ellis and himself a committee to arrange for the organization of a Garden Club. The committee will meet in Ald. Dobbin's office at 2 o'clock this afternoon.

Messrs. J. J. Turner & Son have donated the use of the Grand Opera House for Tuesday evening, when a public meeting will be held in the interest of this movement. Representatives from the Agricultural Department and other experts will make addresses.

A Banker's Liberality

Chairman Stocker announced that Manager Pennefather, on behalf of the Union Bank, had donated 20 acres of land in the south end of the city for gardening purposes.

DRINK, CAUSE OF DOWNFALL

FORMER LAW STUDENT AT NAPANEE AWAITS SENTENCE.

WINNIPEG, March 28.—Thomas Laferty, alias "Wilson," convicted of breaking into fourteen Winnipeg homes, was formerly a law student in Napanee, Ont., and became a criminal through drink, according to a statement handed to Sir John Macdonald in the police court Saturday. The statement was a detailed story of Laferty's life, the magistrate said. He admits having served a penitentiary term in the West. Laferty is believed to be of good family. Information to that effect is contained in the statement, it is understood. He will appear for sentence for fourteen burglaries today.

HORSE MARKET

TORONTO, March 28. — The demand for horses for Western trade still continues, but it is less pronounced than earlier in the season. Three cars were the extent of Toronto shipments to the Prairie Provinces. Prices ranged between $120 and $165 for farm blocks, 80 per cent. of which were mares. Ontario trade is more active, with a moderate demand [illegible] in the neighborhood of Toronto for spring work. The fact that more horses are required for seeding operations gives the impression that a larger acreage will be under cultivation in Central Ontario. One load of blocks and mares selling at $120 to $160 each were sent to Cobalt, and another load of bigger horses that brought $140 to $170 went to Montreal, both shipments through the Repository. At the Union Yards there were 95 horses sold last week at $135 to $185, most of which went at private sales. All of these were farm blocks, mares and geldings. French army inspections were postponed for the week at most of the Toronto horse exchanges. The supply of horses is light at present, and more could be shipped with satisfactory results.

BACON HOGS ARE NOT EXPENSIVE FEEDERS

O. A. C. Experiments in Feeding Have Proved This.

BARLEY AS HOG FEED

Hogs Fit in as By-product in General Farming—Steady Production is What Counts for Profit—In and Out a Losing Game.

An article appearing in the Toronto Globe of March 21, 1917, written by Prof. George E. Day, Ontario's best authority on the bacon hog:

The man who makes the most satisfactory returns out of hogs is the man who is in hogs all the time, and only to the extent that his farm will conveniently carry. An "in and out" policy does not pay. The hog, as Prof. Geo. E. Day has pointed out in a bulletin dealing with the subject, is essentially a by-product of the farm and a means of turning to valuable account commodities which would otherwise be largely waste, such as whey or skim milk, small potatoes, grain shelled in the field. The hog, like other meat animals, also renders it possible to make a double profit out of coarse grains—one profit in a real "home market" for the grain itself, and another in the manure produced in feeding.

For Ontario farmers, the bacon type of hog is beyond question the type to be produced. That is the type which both the home and the English market calls for, and for this type these markets will pay a premium.

Bacon Hogs Make Economical Gains

Moreover, contrary to the opinion sometimes expressed, the bacon type can be produced at least as cheaply as the thick fat. At the Ontario Agricultural College farm four experiments were made by Prof. Day with six breeds of hogs. These included the York and Tam., which are pre-eminently the bacon breeds; the Berk and Chester White, which may be classed as semi-bacon type; and the Poland-China and Duroc-Jersey, which are of the thick fat class.

In the first experiment the amount of meal used for 100 lbs. of gain in the different breeds was as follows: Berk, 398 lbs.; Tamworths, 400; Poland-China, 417; Duroc-Jersey, 424; Chester White, 452; York, 468.

In the second test, Berk used 327 lbs. of grain per 100 lbs. of gain; Tam., 331; Poland-China 333; Chester White 340; York, 341; Duroc-Jersey, 358.

In the third test York came first with 350 lbs. per 100 lbs. gain; Berk, second with 370; Duroc-Jersey, 376; Chester White, 378; Tam., the same; Poland-China, 383.

In the fourth test, Berk ate 409 lbs. for 100 lbs. gain; York, 422; Duroc-Jersey, 426; Chester White, 433; Tam., 462; and Poland China, 474.

In all cases save one, a thick fat was at the foot of the list. In three cases Berks came first in economy of gains; in one case York was first; in two cases Tams stood second, and Yorks and Berks, were second in one case each. In no case did the thick fat get better than third place. The Berk., on the whole, made the best showing in point of economy of gain, and the Berk crossed with a York or Tam makes an excellent bacon hog.

Barley One of the Best Feeds

For the production of the bacon type of hog, one finished at 175 to 200 pounds, barley is one of the best of feeds and will give a greater gain for the amount of feed used than will corn; but barley should be mixed with other grains to increase its palatability. In a general way oat chop is the best grain for growing hogs and barley and corn and shorts for finishing. Milk in all cases adds to economy in production.

The cheapest gains are the early gains. At Guelph Agricultural College 310 pounds grain were required for 100 pounds' increase for hogs weighing 54 to 82 pounds; 375 for those weighing 85 to 115; 438 for hogs from 115 to 148, and 455 for hogs from 148 to 170 pounds. For hogs from 200 to 350 pounds in weight American experiments show that from 482 to 535 pounds of grain are required to produce 100 pounds of flesh.

THE LIGHT-HEADED BRIGADE.

Married wife, man and wife,
Unmarried wife onward!
All to the courtroom went Wedded Four Hundred.
Forward the huge brigade,
All for divorce now prayed,
There in the crowded court
Stylish Four Hundred.

Forward the huge brigade,
Was there a one dismayed?
No, for they all were glad,
Glad to be sundered.
Theirs not to make a sigh,
Theirs not to sadly cry,
Theirs but to break the [illegible]
Seeking a quick divorce,
Eager Four Hundred.

Lawyers to right of them,
Lawyers to left of them,
Lawyers in front of them,
Argued and thundered.
Deafened by voice and word,
Calmly they sat and heard
Talk from the mouths of them,
Patient Four Hundred.

Flashed many bright eyes there,
Flashed, but they didn't care,
Though all the lawyers there
Told many scandals while Simple folk wondered.
Dressed in the height of style,
Waiting with hopeful smile,
Women and husbands;
Then in a little while
All were quite sundered.
Much could the kind judge do,
Making each one now two,
Four hundred pairs were now,
Now just eight hundred.

Oh, they were fickle men!
Each chose a wife again
Out from those sundered.
Honor the pairs new made,
Honor the huge brigade,
Once more Four Hundred!
All were rewedded there,
All of those ladies fair,
Who once had blundered;
Thought they would try again,

Engineers Won From Factory

Monday night at Water Street Alleys a friendly game was played by teams from the Can. Gen. Elec. A team representing the engineering staff won two out of three games from a team representing the factory.

The factory team bowled 851 in the second game which was high score for the evening.

Bombing Feat

For a remarkable bombing feat, Lance-Corporal A. English of the Northumberland Fusiliers, has been awarded the Distinguished Conduct Medal. When the Germans exploded a mine he threw 103 bombs at them from an exposed position. He also invented a new projectile on the spur of the moment. He threw six full boxes of bombs at the enemy, first taking the pin out of one of the bombs. The explosion of one bomb would blow the box to pieces and scatter the other bombs, which would explode a few seconds later. This feat gained the mine crater for the British.

PREHISTORIC SPIT BALL

It Was in 1873 Only Glycerine Was the Lubricant

One evening in Washington some of the White Sox and Washington players were discussing the spit ball. Most of the younger generation held that Elmer Stricklett who revived it and taught it to the White Sox pitchers, was the inventor.

One claimed that Al Orth used it, which he did, in a peculiar manner. The Little Judge declared he had seen the spit ball used years before Orth started. Finally it was decided to ask Uncle Mike Scanlon, who is the final resort in such cases. Uncle Mike was one of the organizers of the first Washington base-ball club and during the late sixties and early seventies, he was a player and manager.

"Well," he said, "I can't recollect who the first pitcher was that I saw use the spit ball. The first one of whom I have any keen recollection was Tommy Bond, when he pitched for me at New Bedford, in the Eastern league in 1873. He used to carry a bottle of glycerine in his hip pocket and put a drop or two of it on his finger tips before pitching."

Gloves, belting and other leather articles have been made from sea lions' hides in a British Columbia factory.

DICKY BOON FAMED IN HOCKEY CIRCLES

He Was Crack Player in the Good Old Days.

Dicky Boon, manager of Sammy Lichtenhein's red banded Wanderer club, can claim pre-eminence in his line for the N.H.A.

Dicky has been managing for so long that it's become a habit with him. He started out in Montreal with a junior team, the Crystals, and was manager of them for a couple of years in 1894-95. In 1896 he was with another bunch of youngsters, the Monarchs, and handled them also. From 1896 to 1906 Boon didn't do any managing although he had a long stretch of playing, a turn as captain of a Stanley Cup club and plenty of hockey experiences.

Then, in 1906, he was selected to pilot the Wanderers, two years after Jimmy Strand, Bob Hern, Jack Marshall and a bunch of others, including Boon, had formed the Wanderer club as an off-shoot from the M.A.A.A. seven. Since 1906 Boon has been in control of the destinies of the Wanderers. He is the only hockey player or manager in the game with the exception of Jack Marshall to manage a Stanley Cup club, the Wanderers grabbing the supreme honor in pro. hockey in 1906, when Boon took hold and repeating in 1909. In 1904 the Redbands held the title for the Federal League and played a tie game with Ottawa for the cup but a dispute arose, the game finished in a draw and no further chance was given the Wanderers to wrest the silverware from the Ottawa holders.

In 1897-98 Boon played with the M.A.A.A. juniors and, in 1900-01-02-03 was with the seniors. In 1902 he had the honor of captaining the Stanley cup-holding "Little Men of Iron" and had Jack Marshall, Jimmy Gardiner and Nicholson as team mates. The "Little Men of Iron" made hockey history. The lightest senior team playing the game they made up for their lack of avoirdupois by sheer courage, speed and stick handling ability. And, of their forward line none were better than Boon. He had a bullet shot and was about as shifty a player as ever handled a stick.

DICKY BOON

In 1904 came the split. Dissension broke out in the club after the championship was lost and the dissentors got together and formed the Wanderers. Ere long the M.A.A.A. were to drop out to the senior game with the coming of open professionalism and the Wanderers continued alone in the Stanley Cup games.

Boon has a hard task with the Wanderers. They have never been an easy club to handle. Getting them and keeping them in shape is usually a tough proposition. However, although not a driver he gets the very best out of his men. They swear by him and have every respect for his hockey ability.

ONE-LEGGED SWIMMER

Cambridge secured an extraordinary swimmer in the person of J. F. Resleuse, an Australian freshman, who won the fifty and 100 yards' races in a contest with the Richmond Swimming Club. His right leg has been amputated, but he possesses remarkable speed. His early education was obtained at Sydney High School, Australia, and at the age of sixteen he won the High School Championship and finished second in the Three-quarter Mile New South Wales Championship. Since then he spent three years at a university in California, where he broke the Pacific Coast record for the quarter mile in five minutes forty-nine seconds. In Germany where he pursued his studies for eighteen months, he won the 600 meters race at Magdeburg in eight minutes fifty-one seconds. He is the present holder of the Austrian Championship of 500 metres, which he won in seven minutes thirty-nine seconds.

Cautious Klem

The White Sox and Giants were aboard the Orontes, nearing the equator. Half the party had been summoned on deck to watch the crossing of the line. Joe Benz thought he saw it in the distance, but Steve Evans declared it was high water and the equator was submerged. An argument arose and the matter was appealed to Umpire Klem.

"Is it in or out at this season?" demanded Steve.

"I cannot make a decision," replied Klem; "I didn't see it."

Irish Concert at Rev. Father Fitzpatrick's Parish, Successful

The Medicine Hat Daily News gives an account of a St. Patrick's Day concert in the hall of St. Patrick's Church, Medicine Hat, of which Rev. Father Fitzpatrick, formerly parish priest at Ennismore, is pastor. The concert was most successful.

In the course of a short address Rev. Father Fitzpatrick said he had thought when he left the East, with all the talent they have there, he would have to leave that behind him, but he must confess that he had never heard a better concert than he had heard that night. He was very pleased to see Rev. J. W. Morrow present. It showed a kindly feeling, and he hoped it would pave the way for more harmony between all nationalities and all religions in this community, "and," said the speaker, "as long as I am here I will do my best to foster this feeling." At this time all nations and all religious are standing side by side in the trenches, fighting and dying for a common defence and liberty. He thanked the Rev. Mr. Morrow for setting the example, and hoped that everyone would let bygones be bygones and live in the future in friendship and amity.

One of the numbers on the concert program was a recitation by two juveniles, who gave one of their own compositions, which was in part complimentary to Bishop McNally, in the following lines:

In the list of your talents, by no means the least
Is your judgment and wisdom in placing a priest
You sent Father Fitzpatrick to Medicine Hat,
And from the depths of our heart
we thank you for that

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, March 29. — The British army in Palestine has defeated a Turkish army of twenty thousand men, capturing nine hundred men, including a general, the war office announces. The entire divisional staff of the Fifty-third Turkish Division was captured. The statement reads:

Telegraphing yesterday, the commander-in-chief in Egypt reports: "We advanced our troops fifteen miles from Rafa to Wadi Ghuzzeh, five miles south of Gaza, to cover the construction of a railawy. On Monday and Tuesday we were heavily engaged in this neighborhood with a force of about twenty thousand of the enemy. We inflicted very heavy losses on him, taking nine hundred prisoners, including the general commanding and the whole divisional staff of the Fifty-third Turkish Division. These figures include four Austrians officers and thirty-two Austrians and Germans of other ranks. We also captured two Austrian 4.2-inch howitzers.

"All our troops behaved splendidly, especially those of the Welch, Kent, Sussez, Hereford, Middlesex and Surrey regiments and Anzac and Yeomanry mounted troops."

The advance made by the British was along the Southern Palestine coast to the Mediterranean, where the British forces have pushed forward from Rafa to Wadi Ghuzzeh, a river five miles south of Gaza. Gaza is twenty miles north of the Egyptian-Syrian boundary.

A Faithful Servant of the City Has Passed on

Thomas Alexander Stewart Hay M.C.S.C.E., late city engineer, passed away at his residence, McDonue street, last evening He had not been in robust health for the last couple of years, but it was the hope of his friends that he would survive the last attack as he had done several before, but the good Lord called him to Himself, leaving behind him a host of friends to mourn his departure

When a young man, the late Mr Hay spent some years on the Midland Railway, afterwards becoming chief engineer. When the Midland Railway was taken over by the G T. R., the engineering department was merged into the chief engineer's office at headquarters in Montreal and Mr. Hay was appointed chief draughtsman on the Trent Canal, and as such designed the masonry and layout of the embankments of the Peterborough lift lock, which has been the admiration of the whole engineering world.

Resigning his position on the canal, he was appointed city engineer which position he had held for nearly seventeen years. His record as such is known to us all, and the splendid work he has done for the city will stand as a monument to him as long as the city remains The lift lock, the Smith street bridge the several parks of the city which he laid out, the several city improvements which he carried out as city engineer, form a record that any engineer might well be proud to have had to his credit. He was a charter member of the Canadian Society of Civil Engineers.

He was for many years the mainstay of the Peterborough Historical Society. Afterwards he was appointed curator of the museum. The splendid museum he has made is the result of his untiring efforts and is a credit to the city.

Prominently connected with the Masonic fraternity, he had held the highest offices that could be bestowed on him by the local (Corinthian) Lodge. He was always connected with the militia, and served his time in the Queen's Own, and was with that corps in the Fenian Raid in 1866 and was a prominent member of the Veterans' Association.

He was an active member of St Paul's Church and was a member of the board of managers.

"Tom Hay," as everybody knew him, was a good citizen, and there was no movement for the betterment of the public welfare that did not have his active support.

He was born and educated in this city about sixty-seven years ago. He served his time as an engineer with his uncle, George A. Stewart, C.E. who was one of the prominent engineers of the time.

He married Elise, daughter of the late Rev. Charles Roux, professor of modern languages at Lennoxville College, in the Provinec of Quebec He leaves to mourn his demise his wife and two daughters, Isabel, at home, and Helen (Mrs. Dr. Crawford), of Marmora.

WILL NOW MAKE AN EFFORT TO SAVE DAYLIGHT

CITY DADS PAVE WAY TO BURN UP MORE ELECTRIC ENERGY.

OPPOSITION IN VIEW.

Daylight saving will come up before the council at the regular meeting on Monday evening. Ald. Worth, who brought the matter up in committee last night, is strongly in favor of it, pointing out many advantages to be derived from its inauguration. It would help the cultivation of the vacant lots, save money by saving light bills. England, France and other countries had turned the clock ahead

Ald. Stratton was not in favor of the idea unless it was made general. It caused a lot of confusion. The Government should deal with the matter.

Ald. Dobbin was in favor of the scheme if it would not work a hardship on the young girls who work in the factories.

Ald. Duncan thought it would be well to consider the subject and decide on it on Monday night.

Ald. Smith was in favor of it either by Government or municipal control. The fact that it was not general was the only drawback it had.

Ald. Taylor and Langford would like to consider the subject further before deciding.

Ald. Worth and Dobbin sponsored a resolution that daylight saving go into effect on April 15.

Ald. Saunders and Weir moved in amendment that no change be made.

Before a vote was taken Ald. Worth withdrew his motion and the amendment also fell, with the understanding that the question would be dealt with on Monday night.

Ald. McIntyre wanted a vote on the question at once. He was opposed to daylight saving. and moved that no action be taken. Ald. Saunders seconded but on a vote being taken the motion failed to carry, so on Monday night the decision will be finally made—maybe.

It is understood that the Quaker Oats Company is hurrying with all dispatch the plans for the new plant to be erected on the site of the burned buildings, and an early start will be made in clearing away the debris

MR. GORDON IS DISQUALIFIED AS MEMBER OF BOARD OF EDUCATION

Dr. Pyne Minister of Education, Rules That Under the High School Act He is Barred Because of Office as City Attorney.

Dr. R A. Pyne, Minister of Education in the Ontario Cabinet, has sent to Peterborough a written decision in which be rules that Mr. G. N. Gordon is not qualified to sit as a member of the Board of Education, his disqualification consisting of the fact that he is an official of the City Council. The decision was received in the city last night and a question that has been in dispute for the past two and a half years now seems to be disposed of finally.

Minister Pyne in his communication quotes Section 12 of the High School Act of Ontario, which says:

"Any ratepayer who is a British subject, has attained the age of 21 years, resides in the high school district, and who is not a member or officer of a municipal council shall be qualified to be a high school trustee."

Under this section, Dr. Pyne finds that Mr. Gordon has no right to sit as a member of the board. In the letter sent to him asking for a ruling the fact was clearly stated that the Peterborough Board of Education is what is known as a union board, that is, one having control of the affairs of the Collegiate Institute as well as those of the public schools and that is probably the reason why the High School Act was cited by the Minister.

The move to unseat Mr. Gordon has originated, not as might naturally be supposed, in the house of his enemies, but in his own political camp. Jealousy was really the inspiration as it was felt that he was advancing too rapidly toward the goal of his ambition, the nomination for the Dominion Parliament. There are other aspirants for the honor who are anxious to unhorse him and so leave the way a little more open for themselves. Mr. Gordon's colleagues on the Board do not appear to figure in this move and are not likely to exert themselves in any way to see that the ruling is given effect.

If Mr. Gordon is finally compelled to resign from the Board, it is not likely that this will occasion him any deep regret. At the last election by coming in a close second on the list, he demonstrated his popularity with the voters in the city and that may have been his real purpose in running for the office in the face of the legal contention with regard to his qualifications.

Mr. Gordon was first elected to the School Board two years ago last January, being at that time City Attorney. His right to sit was challenged unofficially but the matter was not pressed to an issue until it was brought up before Judge Huycke when Mr. Gordon's famous charges against several of his colleagues were aired. Judge Huycke held that Mr. Gordon had a right to hold the two offices so long as the duties did not conflict. If such conflict did arise Mr. Gordon would be under the necessity of resigning one or other of the positions.

There has recently been some unfraternal feeling developed among the members of the Board over the penny banks agitation. It is alleged, that some person reported at headquarters that certain members of the Board were opposed to the proposition, whereas they were simply waiting for an expression of opinion on behalf of the ratepayers.

PETERBOROUGH, THURSDAY, MARCH 29, 1917

DAYLIGHT SAVING AGAIN.

ALDERMAN WORTH has brought up the question of daylight saving, and it must be admitted that this matter is much more timely, that there is greater necessity for it under new conditions, than there has ever been. Daylight saving is the handmaiden of the production campaign as carried on by means of the vacant lot and backyard gardening. To make the new movement a success, time must be devoted to the cultivation of the plots. That time will be available only during the evenings, as nearly all of the new gardeners are members of the working class. An hour saved in the morning means an extra hour for working with the hoe in the evening.

There is no question as to the benefits to be derived from daylight saving, but the same objections to it that accomplished its defeat in this city last summer can still be urged. The trouble is that a checkerboard plan of reckoning time results in confusion. Hamilton adopted it last year, but abandoned it in the middle of the season. In other municipalities where it was adopted public sentiment was more or less evenly divided for and against it. The general opinion seemed to be that it could never be made to work out satisfactorily unless made Dominion-wide by Act of Parliament.

Alderman Worth and those who stand with him for daylight saving should direct their energies to the wider field and unite with other municipalities in bringing pressure to bear upon the Federal Government for legislative action. The countries of Europe that introduced it a year ago made it general, and there has been no question as to its success.

The claim has been made that the nations at war resorted to this change in order to obtain more daylight in which to slay their enemies. That was not the reason. Soldiers do not work according to union rules. Day or night their task goes on. But daylight saving was introduced to give the lessened population left at home greater opportunities for production and so help to sustain the millions under arms in the trenches.

NO FREE MARKET.

MAYOR DUFFUS found himself in a tight corner again last night, when he was called upon to give the casting vote on the free market question. When the aldermen divided evenly on the question it was considered as good as lost, for the Mayor had already expressed his views.

There was really very little at stake in the matter. Alderman Stratton's amendment simply provided for the abolition of the fees for vehicles on the market and on articles that are carried in baskets to the place of sale. It was meant to encourage farmers to come to Peterborough with their produce, and the principle was sound. Every farmer who comes to this city is an asset, as he is sure to leave more or less money behind him. When the Merchants' Association asked for the abolition of the market tolls they not only had an eye to their own interests, but to the advantage of the city generally. Farmers may profess to be indifferent in this matter, but the fact remains that the majority of them would appreciate anything in the nature of a concession.

The letter of "Farmer," published in The Review yesterday, was one of the most comprehensive and practical statements on the market question that has appeared yet. "Farmer" got at the core of the situation. The cold storage plants are, if properly handled, the great agency in regulating supply and demand. These plants can preserve the food supply in the seasons of abundance and carry it over until the times of scarcity in the ordinary course of Nature. Just as the careful housekeeper "puts down" fruits and vegetables in season in order to assure a supply for the winter. All that the cold storage plants require in order to fill the bill is proper regulation. The cornering of the food supply must be prevented. The fact that the price of food is sometimes kept at an abnormally high figure by virtue of the ability to preserve it indefinitely, or almost so, in cold storage, is only another evidence that abuses are likely to arise under any system that may be devised.

The farmer would prefer a steady price for his produce rather than one that fluctuates, keeping him constantly in hot water figuring as to the best time to sell. A day spent in coming to market is a day lost so far as work on the farm is concerned. If the farmer took this fact into consideration and allowed himself and his team the regular rate of wages every time he takes a load of his wares to town, he would be surprised at the difference the computation would make in his profits.

Something, however, should be done to induce the farmer to deal in the city. The merchant wants his wares and also is anxious to sell to him. The prosperity of one class depends upon that of the other. Trading with mail order houses should be discouraged as much on behalf of the farmer himself as on that of the home merchant. The farmer is just as well off, or better if he takes time to come to Peterborough, as if he pays out money for express charges. He may think he is getting the goods from the mail order houses free of transportation charges, but he is not. That is all a matter of figuring. The cost is really added to the price of the goods. "Jones may pay the freight," but the mail order houses get it out of their customers in the country.

WHEN THE WAR IS OVER.

THE WAR HAS EMANCIPATED the myriads of Russia. Before peace is restored to the world there will probably not be left in all the world a head wearing the crown of absolute monarchy. The Germans may wake up just as the Russians have done, and there are already signs of the disintegration of the Austrian Empire, and that two republics will replace the dual kingdoms that exist today. Out of all this pain of nations will come a new freedom to the people.

If Lloyd George makes good in his present task, if he can manage to bring the war to an early and successful conclusion, crowned by an honorable peace, the Premiership of the Motherland is likely to be his for the remainder of his life. What a Government directed by him in the time of peace, when all his attention could be devoted to domestic problems can easily be imagined. England and her associate nations would develop a spirit of democracy never before dreamed of.

The war will have an important bearing on the subsequent history of Canada. New conditions will arise. The returned soldiers are already organizing, and it is evident that these are the men who in the years to come will shape the political destiny of the country on whose behalf they have made such heavy sacrifices. The soldiers' vote will be the controlling factor in all public questions. Officers and men united in a common union will hang together like brothers, with interests in common. Everything that is good in sight will be theirs. The record of every great war in a democracy is all that is required to prove this. Even the military reverses met with by France in 1870 brought the blessing of freedom to the people.

The women of Canada, with the ballot in their hands can, by intelligent effort and united action, work out their own temporal salvation. It is idle to forecast any struggle between the male and female wage-earners arising from the newly-acquired powers of the latter. Men who work for a living have been the most fervent advocates of equal suffrage. That has been a plank in Labor's platform for years, and was the natural outcome of Labor's insistence that women engaged in the same line of work as men should receive the same pay. Men do not fear the competition of women in the industrial field, provided that competition is based on justice to each class alike. The labor unions are open to women and already include hundreds of female members.

The question has been raised as to whether women are physicaly capable of holding their own with men in industry. No one has yet been heard to claim that in this regard the sexes are equal. But Nature, that made one pair of shoulders broad and another narrow has designed burdens fitted for each. There is room enough in the industrial world for all, and duties sufficiently varied to give scope for every form of attainment.

After the war, class distinctions are likely to be broken down. The man with the title and with the ribbon on his coat may find himself as uncomfortably lonesome as the man who lacked the wedding garment at the historical feast.

Assumed individual greatness is likely to find little encouragement. No man can, by reason of his success in a particular line, take it upon himself to pose as a superior being, the chosen of heaven to watch over his fellows and direct their coming and going. Kaiserism in members of society is as distasteful as the same weakness displayed by a ruler who through the accident of birth wears a royal crown. Even though a man may have achieved political success, the majority vote that places him in office does not confer upon him any prerogative in the way of shaping the morals and dictating the religious creed of the masses. This is the spirit which in bygone ages was fed and nursed until it developed into the absolutism out of which came the present war. Democracies are free in every sense, free to think for themselves and to worship where and how they will.

THREE IN A ROW.

THE EXAMINER had three of them last night, three anonymous letters, each containing a slam at The Review, three puff adders, as it were, crawling through the grass and spitting their virus into the atmosphere. At a venture, we would undertake to name the author of two of these, because we are convinced that they emanated from the same source. Experience has put us in a position to recognize the fine Italian hand. If they were not written by the individual we have in mind, they were at least inspired by him and actually prepared by some of his satellites, for safety first has always been the chief tenet in his faith. We have fed to the waste-basket in this office bushels of communications from the citizen in question. We have one on our desk now from him awaiting his signature, lacking which it will go the inglorious way of so many of its predecessors.

Yes, we know him well. No class or individual is safe from him if he gets his way. Prominent military officers have been made the target for his attacks, chiefly on personal grounds. He is dangerous only when unrestrained, but is really not hard to control. All that is necessary is to apply the extinguisher. Now that he has been denied the use of the laundry appurtenances here, he is welcome to carry his dirty linen to any place where they are willing to do his washing.

CHARACTER READING FAILED

"Why did you pick me out for this delectable bargain?" asked the steel man, as he cut the end off his after dinner cigar and settled himself in the Empress Hotel settee for a smoke.

"Thereby hangs a tale," said the promoter, who was using his button to get business. "I wanted you to get in on this fancy opportunity, which is bound to double business in six months, and pay 5 per cent dividends before Christmas. And I picked you out for a reason."

"I'm listening," said the steel man postponing his newspaper.

"A long time ago," continued the promoter, "when I first began to promote paying enterprises, I went to Prof. Poke and got some deucedly good advice on character. I have applied it ever since. He provided me with charts and books on "How to read Character at a Glance;" or, "Face to Face with Physiognomy." By studying those I was enabled to read the character of maan, woman and child at a glance. They explained to me how one's characteristics were vividly sketched in chin, eyes, nose ears, and mouth.

"For instance, a man with a certain kind of nose had certain habits and there was no getting away from it. A man whose mouth turned up at the corner was a different sort of person from the man whose mouth dropped at the corners. There were more than eighty-nine different types of chins and each chin revealed a different character. For instance in your case I was enabled to tell from your nose, ears, chin and hands, as well as your eyes, that you are a man of generosity, of wide interests, a man who is ready to be convinced."

"Picked me for a soft one," laughed the steel man. "How do you tell a piker?"

"I'll show you," said the promoter, producing a sketch of a man's head from an inside pocket. "Here is the type. Ears of this shape, with that peculiar lobe; eyes set with this relation to the nose eyebrows a trifle aslant, like this; a chin and mouth so—why what's the matter?"

"Sorry, got to skip!" exclaimed the steel man, hastily making for the revolving door, "forgot an engagement."

"Strange follow," mused the promoter, folding up his chart. "I wonder why he looked so queerly at me, anyhow?"

RESULTS EXCEED EXPECTATION

Receipts from the special war taxation, enacted shortly after the outbreak of war, have so far greatly exceeded expectations. Under the Special War Taxation Act the Canadian banking institutions are obliged to contribute one million dollars annually to the country's revenue, and loan, trust and insurance companies are also taxed for substantial amounts. Other special levies such as the postal war tax, stamp tax on drafts and cheques and the tax on railway tickets have also produced large sums for the public treasury.

The Excess Profits Tax has proven particularly successful and returns from this source have been much beyond what Sir Thomas White first estimated. When he imposed this tax the Finance Minister estimated it would produce thirty-five million dollars during the full period of three years over which it extends—an average of twelve million dollars yearly. The tax being retroactive, this year's taxation was collected upon the accounting period corresponding roughly to the first year of the war. At that time business was very much depressed and dislocated. Sub-normal business conditions notwithstanding, it is estimated that the tax will produce for this first year period at at least fourteen million dollars, and possibly fifteen million dollars. The tax for the year 1916 will yield the enormous sum of between twenty and twenty five milion dollars. The first two years of the taxation will thus produce an amount equal to that secured in the three years. The third year, 1917, is expected to produce another twenty-five million dollars. The final results will thus be almost double the original estimate.

CLOSE THE COLLEGIATE.

Editor Review: If our city authorities would use their influence with our school board to have them close the Collegiate Institute early in April, as Toronto is doing, they wil confer a greater favor on the farmers then they will by giving them a free market. This cutting off of revenue of about $2000 a year from our market is like burning the candle at both ends. Taxes mounting up, revenue cut off.

Leave the market as it is, and see to it right away quick that the big squad of young men are liberated from our high school to help in seeding not later than April 15.

JNO. CARLISLE

Editor Review: Great indeed is the power of the legislators at Toronto. Even the medical profession must hand it to them.

An epidemic broke out in London Ont., and a doctor there prescribed whiskey by the quart for it. The cure was ineffective. The more whiskey prescribed the greater the spread of the sickness. Then the lawmakers stepped in and the disease vanished as if by magic!

I WONDER WHY.

POINTED PARAGRAPHS

All the fun of staying out late at night is lost when there's nobody at home to make a fuss about it.

It is easier to make enemies than friends, but it is easier to get rid of friends than it is to get rid of enemies.

Maudie, the beautiful high school girl, finds her greatest sorrow in the fact that she has coarse parents.

Sir George Foster had a conference with representatives of shipbuilding interests with a view to speeding up construction of vessels ordered through Munitions Board.

Wit and Wisdom

"I'm going to be married next month, Lizzie, if Jim can get a week off from his job."

"Do you think he can?"

"Yes, I think so. You see, it ain't as if he was askin' for a vacation to have a good time."

"I've decided not to marry him."

"Why?"

"He toook me out to dinner last night and gave so many instructions to the waiter as to how he wanted the meal cooked and the courses served, that I made up my mind there'd be no living with a man as fussy as that."

When Billy applied for a job as office boy he produced testimonials from two clergymen who knew him well. But the hard-hearted business man was not particularly impressed by them.

"We don't want you on Sundays, my lad," he said. "Haven't you a reference from somebody who knows you on week days?"

Jones entered the employment agency office hurriedly, barely pausing to wipe the perspiration from his brow.

"Have you a cook who will go to the country?" he enquired anxiously.

The manageer turned and opened a door leading into the adjoining room and called out:

"Is there anybody who would like to spend a day in the country?"

The Trainman's Joys

A woman swayed back and forth in the aisle on the front car on train 106.

"There are plenty of seats in the rear cars, madam," said the conductor politely.

"Let 'em stay there," she snapped back pettishly. "What I want is more vacant cars in the middle of the train. If you don't provide them so's I can get a seat when I want it I'll complain to the management and to the Railway Commission. Seats in the rear car, indeed! I want a seat in the middle of the car or none at all."

She got what she wanted— standing room.

Helen was the little daughter of a thrifty woman, who always took advantage of bargain sales.

One day the little girl rushed home from the post office, and said to her mother:

"Mamma, you can get a five-dollar money order at the post office for five cents."

Getting Even

A young man and a young woman leaned on the front gate. They were lovers. It was moonlight. He was loth to leave as the parting was the last. He was about to go away.

"I'll never forget you," he said, "and if death should claim me my last thought would be of you."

"I'll be true to you," she sobbed. "I'll never love anybody else as long as I live."

They parted. Six years later he returned. His sweetheart of former years was married. They met at a party. She had changed greatly. Between dances recognition took place.

"Let me see," she mused, "was it you or your brother who was my old sweetheart?"

"Neither," he replied; "probably my father."

PEACH BLOSSOM GIRL

A Story of Everyday Life with a Moral that is Obvious

By H. M. EGBERT.

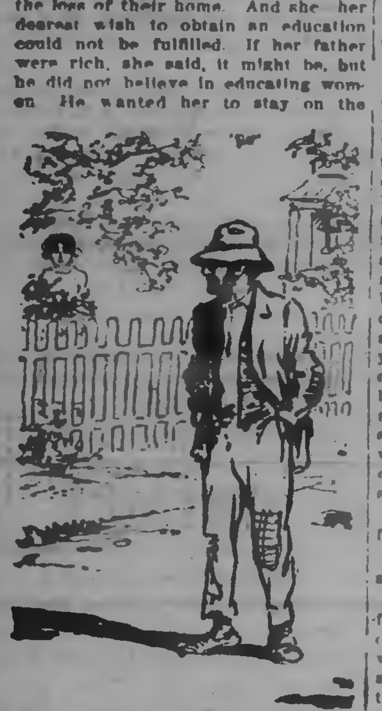
"The phenomenon of conversion," said the evangelist to the psychologist, "may be, as you say, the culmination of a series of obscure mental impressions, but the condition itself is the result of a moment. Something which was not in the sinner's heart enters there and drives out something that was there before.

"I knew a man—never mind who or what he was. He was uneducated, the sort of average American countryman who is the staple human product of this nation. With good fortune he might have become anything. With bad fortune he might have sunk to any depth. His will was weak, his senses stronger than his character. At the age of thirty he was a tramp plodding along a country road in Carolina. Unwashed, unshaven, hungry, his self-respect gone, he would have run from a barking dog or cringed for a meal to any housewife.

"And then the moment came. It was early spring and the orchards were aglow with peach blossoms. As he passed outside a long line of blossom-bearing trees he saw a girl standing on the other side of the fence, her arms full of spraying boughs. She was about sixteen, beautiful, innocent, and good. A simple-hearted country girl, in short, born into just such circumstances as himself.

"The sight of her brought back memories that had been submerged for years. The ragged, outcast man felt an intense yearning for human sympathy, for friendship. He stopped and spoke to her, and she was the first human being who had treated him as an equal in nearly a year.

"He learned something of her circumstances. Her parents had been compelled to mortgage their farm; they were heavily in debt; they feared the loss of their home. And she—her dearest wish to obtain an education could not be fulfilled. If her father were rich, she said, it might be, but he did not believe in educating women. He wanted her to stay on the farm and help maintain it, with the prospect of marriage to some farmer's son.



Saw a Girl Standing on the Other Side of the Fence.

"The ragged man could see that this was the type of girl whom education would bring the highest success. She was quick-witted, earnest, and with a superb simplicity and radiating goodness. Of course he did not think it in these words. But he learned her name and that of the postoffice, thanked her for a drink of water that she gave him, and, as he heard her mother's harsh call from the house, went on his way.

"At that moment he was converted. He lost his desire for vileness. He resolved that, since his own life had been spoiled in the sight of his maker, he would give him that of another.

"He jumped a freight train and made his way by stages westward. He obtained a menial position, and every penny that he could hoard he put away in a bank. When he had a hundred dollars he sent it anonymously to the girl. 'For your education,' he wrote on the envelope. Then he began saving again.

"Gradually the memory of this girl took possession of his life. As the months changed into years he pictured her first completing her course in high school, then going to college. He even ventured once to suggest the name of the college she was to enter—a famous one in Georgia. Seven years later he was a man of moderate means and he had spent two thousand dollars on the peach blossom girl.

"What was she to become? No stenographer or clerical assistant in any business, of that he was resolved. Why, she should go to Paris, of course, and achieve triumphs there. He knew nothing of Paris, except its name as the capital of France. But that would demand a heavier expenditure. He set aside his whole accumulation of money—seven thousand dollars—and sent it to her. This time he wrote his first detailed instructions. She was to have an annual income of twelve hundred dollars and to follow any career she fancied after she returned.

"She had become like a daughter to him, in his imagination, but when ten years had passed he suddenly found himself growing into middle life and very lonely. He dared to begin to imagine dearer things than that. And at last the day came when he turned his dreams into actual plans—he would return and humbly ask her to be his wife.

"It was not until he actually descended from the train at the obscure little Georgia village that the futility of his dreams suddenly dawned upon him. He had heard nothing from her during ten years. It might be that his money had never reached her; it might be that she was already married. A thousand chances might have intervened. And she was twenty-six and he a man of forty. He was bent on the wildest and most quixotic errand that had ever befallen a man.

"Another thing, too, came to his mind. He had educated her in Paris and at the best college in the state. But he himself was a crude and ignorant man; he had even retrograded in knowledge and manners, living in his western town. How could he ask her to link her life with his?

"And by the time when he saw the peach orchard looming up in front of him all his resolutions had shrunk to this: that he would ask for a drink of water and inquire after her, learn how she was and what life had brought her, and go his way again.

"When he heard the harsh voice of the mother at the door, he told me afterward," continued the evangelist, "he was conscious of an absurd desire to run away, just as when he had passed by the house, a tramp, ten years before. But the woman, seeing that he was dressed like a man of means, invited him in to rest, and she gossiped readily about her circumstances, and was loud in complaint of her husband. He had acquired a good deal of money, she told my friend, and had squandered it all in speculation. Ten years before he had been on the verge of bankruptcy, and though things had brightened he was still in the same position. She wished that they could sell out and move into a city, but it was hard to find purchasers for peach orchard land in that section of the state.

"'How much do you want to sell for?' he inquired.

"The woman hesitated. 'Four thousand,' she said at last.

"He had twice that sum. With the farm he could live among the memories that had controlled his life; he wanted nothing better. 'I will buy it at that figure,' he answered. All this time he had not found the heart to ask about the woman's daughter, but now she voluntarily spoke to her.

"'There's one trouble I've got,' she grumbled, 'and that's Bessie. She declares she won't go to a city. She hates city life and says if I go she's going to hire out somewhere.'

"'Hire out?' stammered the visitor.

"'Yes,' grumbled the woman. 'She ain't a bad girl, but somehow she never quite saw her duty toward her father and me after Jim refused to give her an education. She wanted to go to high school, and Jim hadn't the money.'

"At that moment the farmer stamped into the room casting a suspicious look at the visitor. The woman introduced him. 'This gentleman talks of buying the farm,' she announced.

"The farmer's visage cleared. 'Maybe you'd like to come and talk it over outside,' he said, and my friend followed him. He followed him down to the peach trees and then he turned about and put his hand on his shoulder. A wild, uncontrollable rage was seething in his heart. This man had defrauded two lives, his daughter's and his own. He had squandered the money with which the man had hoped to redeem this young life from ignorance and servitude; ten years of work had gone for nothing, flung away in foolish speculation or extravagance, of which even his wife was ignorant.

"The habits of ten years fell away from him, and the old devil came back. He would murder him as surely as he himself must die for it.

"The farmer, looking into his face, and seeing the wild passion there, and being a coward, like every thief, trembled. He looked right and left for some escape, and the stranger's clutch was like steel upon his shoulders.

"And then, coming through the trees, my friend saw the peach-blossom girl, and his hand fell from the man's shoulder and the old sense of peace came back to him. Except for a certain maturity of face and figure she was the same as when she was sixteen, and the same serene innocence looked out of her eyes, and she wore her tattered dress as a queen might wear her robes. And in her arms she carried branches of peach-blossomy boughs."

"Well," said the psychologist, "I can guess the rest. They were married and settled [illegible] on the farm and spent a life of [illegible]."

"That's obvious," answered the evangelist. "But now that you have the story, you must endure the moral. Suppose that the money had reached her—would it have benefited either of them so much as that which actually occurred? He had come back, an ignorant man, not daring to ask what he had so long dreamed, and he found an ignorant country girl of his own station in life in place of a fine, vain lady. And the years of toil and discipline had not gone for nothing. So you see, conversion is a matter of the soul, and whatever results it brings about, one may be sure that it can have only good to follow it." He hesitated a moment. "If ever you gentlemen are passing down my way," he said, "you must come and visit my peach orchard."

Cured His RUPTURE

I was badly ruptured while lifting a trunk several years ago. Doctors said my only hope of cure was an operation. Trusses did me no good. Finally I got hold of something that quickly and completely cured me. Years have passed and the rupture has never returned, although I am doing hard work as a carpenter. There was no operation, no lost time, no trouble. I have nothing to sell, but will give full information about how you may find a complete cure without operation, if you write to me, Eugene M. Pullen, Carpenter, 580 Marcellus Avenue, Manasquan, N. J. Better cut out this notice and show it to any others who are ruptured—you may save a life or at least stop the misery of rupture and the worry and danger of an operation.

AUTOMOBILE HINTS

In drying a car after washing it, or after it has been rained upon, use only clean chamois skins or very soft cloths. Some kinds of cloth would scratch and dull the finish in a short time.

A very handy tool is a portable vulcanizer. With it the tube may be patched and thus is expense saved. It may also be used to close up small cuts in the tread of the outer shoe, thus prolonging its life. The method of using it may be easily mastered after a few attempts. Use an old tube to practice on and you will be surprised at the good work you can do.

The use of the self-starter prevents one from keeping in as close touch with his motor as he should. Where we used to crank the motor to start it we found out if it was properly lubricated and if the compression was good or not. Whenever there is any sign of loss of power the starting handle should be used to see if the crankshaft turns freely and the compression is good. Do it now, while the engine is in proper condition, and then you will have a basis for comparison when something goes wrong.

Be sure to change the water in the cooling system at least once a week. This will carry off most of the rust and so assist in preventing a clogged radiator.

Do not neglect to put a wrench on every nut and bolt on the car at least once a month, and on the steering connections once a week. No other mechanism receives the racking that the automobile gets, and it is impossible to keep the motor together if the nuts and bolts are not attended to frequently.

Be careful in the use of the airhose. It is so easy to connect to your tire and wait for it to be blown up that one often gets too much pressure. There is but little danger of the tire bursting. The harm is in making the tire too hard and so losing the benefit of the air cushion.

When an automobile motor is hot care should be taken not to pour cold water into the cooling system too rapidly. When the cold water strikes the overheated cylinders it is very apt to crack same, due to the rapid contraction which takes place.

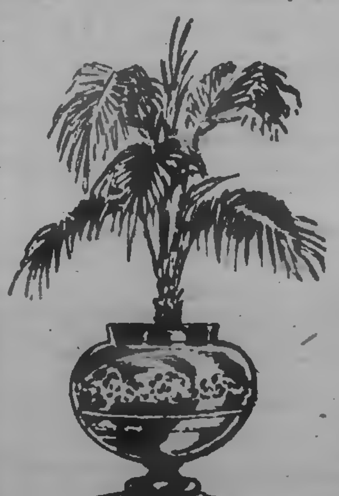
When the proper oil level in the crank case is determined the installation of a drain cock in each compartment will enable the operator to keep his oil at a fixed level. This is an inexpensive installation and may obviate considerable trouble for the automobilist.

The gasket under the spark plug of the auto often causes a slight leak by holding a piece of dirt against the countersink. The dirt, even though it be very small, may cause the gasket to permit gas to leak out around the spark plug. When replacing the plugs it is well to clean the gasket and its seat thoroughly.

USE FOR OLD LAMP BODY

Handsome Jardiniers Made From the Old Metal Bowl

Some of the metal bodies of old lamps, and they are usually brass, are of such ample size and so neatly embossed that they can be readily used as jardinieres instead of being handed to the junk man. It is only necessary to remove the lamp part, and set the plant pot into the bowl of the stand, as shown in the sketch. From Popular Mechanics.



Fortune in Seaweed

Sir William Macgregor said they had on the seaboard of Newfoundland and Labrador a submarine forest of unrivalled value seaweed. They could not develop agriculture in Newfoundland unless they had a plentiful supply of potash, and it was certain that Germany after the war would place a heavy export duty on her potash. But a supply was to be found in the seaweed. At one time potash making from kelp on the west coast of Scotland thrived until it was killed by Free Trade. If the matter were taken up in the proper way Newfoundland would be able to start a new industry of the greatest value and supply all the potash she required and more besides.

Admiral's Decoration

Vice-Admiral Sir Reginald Bacon received permission to wear the insignia of Grand Officer of the Order of Leopold, conferred on him by the King of the Belgians.

It was officially stated that Captain Bowen-Colthurst, who was tried by court-martial in Dublin, and was found insane, had been removed from the army.

Mr. A. Courtenay Welch, principal of the Army College, Farnham, presented a war shrine to the district.

Green Bones Better

Green bones contain the natural juices as well as the adhering substances, making it superior to the bones that have lain on the ground for a while and lost all the natural juices or animal matter. Green bones are also more soluble and capable of having the mineral matter digested.

Logs on the ground burn on the end, or, where they lie across others, pockets burn out of the sides. A fire seldom destroys them, but it reduces their value between 10 and 15 per cent.

A day spent in running water furrows or opening outlets of drains is better spent than the same day given up to plowing in water.

"MAPLE LEAF" CAME TO ANZACS' RESCUE

Incidents in the Great Somme Battle—Canadians Proved Their Worth in a Crisis

A correspondent with the Australians writes: I am allowed to tell how it was that the Canadians relieved the Australians on the dreadful crest on which, during some periods of the fighting, the latter had borne the brunt. The weary-eyed remnant could scarcely stand for fatigue, and men dropped asleep with Hun shells tearing down beside them and ripping the earth in twain. An order was sent to the supports. They were to send an officer to receive instructions. He came. The representative of authority upon the spot, an Australian, explained to him quietly where he wished him to take his men. It meant plunging into the thick of the Somme battle. The new-comer said quietly, "Yes, sir," and climbed up and out into the light.

It was not an Australian who spoke. That "Yes, sir," came unmistakably from the other side of the Pacific. It was the first of the Canadians upon the Somme battlefield. The Canadians dropped into the trench. They brought with them keen, fresh faces and bodies and an all-important supply of bombs. So it was that the first Canadians arrived.

Terrible Pounding

Twenty-four hours after the Canadians came a vicious bombardment descended on the flank they were holding. They were buried together by the heavy shell bursts. They dug each other out. When the garrison became so thin that whole lengths of trench were without a single unwounded occupant, they helped each other's wounded down to the next length and built another barricade, and held that. Finally, when hour after hour passed and the incessant shelling never ceased, the garrison was withdrawn a little farther, and then five of them went back to the barricade which the enemy's artillery had discovered. They sat down in the trench behind it. A German battery was trying for it—putting its four big high-explosive shells regularly round it salvo after salvo as punctual as clockwork. It was only a matter of time before the thing must go. So the five sat there—Tasmanians and Canadians—and discussed the rival methods of wheat growing in their respective Dominions in order to keep their thoughts away from that inevitable shell.

36 Hours in the Trenches

It came at last—slashed one man across the face, killed two and hit two—smashed the barricade into a scrapheap. They withdrew a little farther to where they could hold during the night, but before the grey morning, the moment the bombardment had ceased, they crept back again lest the Germans should get there first. With the light came a reinforcement of new Canadians—grand fellows in great spirit. And the last Australian was during that morning withdrawn. It was the most welcome sight in all the world to see those troops come in. Retiring Anzacs spoke of those Canadian bombers in a way it would have done Canadians' hearts good to hear. Australians and Canadians fought for thirty-six hours in those trenches inextricably mixed, working under each other's officers. Their wounded helped each other from the front. Their dead lie beside the tumbled trenches.

How do Privates Fare?

Lt. Fordham, a prisoner of war, writing to his parents at Niagara Falls, says: "Will you send me some plain eatables, as officers must find their own food."

The St. Pancras Tribunal refused exemption to a 'cello student who pleaded that military service would spoil his hands for his professional work.

Glass of Water Before You Eat Any Breakfast

WASH POISON FROM SYSTEM EACH MORNING AND FEEL FRESH AS A DAISY.

Every day you clean the house you live in to get rid of the dust and dirt which collected through the previous day. Your body, the house your soul lives in, also becomes filled up each twenty-four hours with all manner of filth and poison. If only every man and woman could realize the wonders of drinking phosphated hot water, what a gratifying change would take place.

Instead of the thousands of sickly, anaemic-looking men, women and girls with pasty or muddy complexions; instead of the multitudes of "nerve wrecks," "rundowns," "brain fags" and pessimists we should see a virile, optimistic throng of rosy-cheeked people everywhere.

Everyone, whether sick or well, should drink each morning before breakfast a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver, kidneys and ten yards of bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour fermentations and poisons, thus cleansing, sweetening and freshening the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

Those subject to sick headache, biliousness, nasty breath, rheumatism, colds; and particularly those who have a pallid, sallow complexion and who are constipated very often, are urged to obtain a quarter pound of limestone phosphate at the drug store, which will cost but a trifle, but is sufficient to demonstrate the quick and remarkable change in both health and appearance awaiting those who practise internal sanitation. We must remember that inside cleanliness is more important than outside, because the skin does not absorb impurities to contaminate the blood, while the pores in the thirty feet of bowels do.

"Tanks" Are Mottled

The British "tank," or caterpillar armored cars, are printed in a most remarkable manner with great blotches and stripes of colors so as to blend in with the landscape at a distance. According to Malcolm Ross, special press correspondent with the New Zealand forces, no less a master than Lieutenant-Colonel Solomon J. Solomon, the famous Royal Academician, conceived these futuristic effects and directed their execution.

Amputation Seldom

Dr. Alexis Carrel, formerly of the New York Rockefeller Institute, expressed the opinion that amputation of wounded limbs is no longer necessary where all life has ceased to exist in the mangled member. New methods of sterilising wounds by canalisation with a five per cent. solution of hypochloride of soda have proved the truth of this statement, he said.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

BY JOHN W. S. McCULLOUGH, M.D., D.P.H., CHIEF OFFICER OF THE PROVINCIAL BOARD OF HEALTH.

THE BABY'S CLOTHING—(Continued.)

Laundry Rules.

THE FLANNELS, knitted bands, undershirts, etc., should be washed without a washboard by soft squeezing with the hands, in warm water. Any good soap without too much alkali should be used. They should then be rinsed in several waters of the same temperature. A sudden change from hot to cold water hardens the fibre of the wool and thickens up the garment. Cotton garments may be washed in soap and hot water.

Care of Diapers.

A large enamel or galvanized iron pail should be provided to soak the wet diapers when taken off and another for soiled diapers. Both should be covered to keep off the flies. The wet diapers should stand in water till they can be washed. The soiled diapers should be cleaned separately. The rinsings of both should be disposed of in the water-closet. Diapers should be scrubbed with good soap and hot water until clean. They should then be rinsed in two or three waters until the water shows clear. Sore and raw buttocks may result from the use of improper soap or imperfect washing or rinsing. If the water is hard, soften it by using sufficient pure borax. Clothes dried out of doors are always white and smell sweeter than those dried inside.

BABY SICKNESS.

The fussy baby who may just be beginning to get sick and the sick baby, no matter from what ailment, should be kept strictly in bed. Do not rock or nurse him. Keep visitors away from him. How are you to know that he may not be at the beginning of an attack of scarlet fever, measles, or diphtheria?

Get a competent doctor and in the meantime secure good ventilation by having the window open, with, if possible, a grate fire in the room. The temperature should be at 65 Deg. F. Try it with a thermometer.

Write down a record of what is happening so that you may be able to tell the doctor when he comes. Take the baby's temperature if you have a thermometer and know how to use it. Mark down the number and character of the movements and the seat of pain if there appears to be any. Think of what food the baby has had, the quantity of urine, and save a specimen in a clean enamel dish. Note if there is cough, rapid breathing, or vomiting, restlessness, and crying. Mark the color and general appearance and hours of sleep. The written record makes it easier for the physician to come to a satisfactory conclusion regarding the trouble.

Getting Well.

When the baby begins to get well, do not stuff him with too much food. A child will take food when he needs it. Some diseases such as acute rheumatism, tonsillitis, and diphtheria require prolonged rest if full recovery is to be expected.

Taking the Temperature.

A baby's normal temperature runs from 98 to 99½ Deg. F. If above 101 Deg. F. get a doctor at once. Take the temperature in the following manner. Anoint the bulb end with vaseline and insert into the rectum for about one inch. If carefully done there is no pain. Leave it there for half a minute and mark down the record. Don't be alarmed if the temperature is 101 or 102 Deg. F. or over. Many temporary ailments of children show moderately high temperatures, and relief is often obtained by simple measures.

Croup.

Simple croup is a spasmodic condition of the larynx (windpipe) with a rasping cough and difficulty in breathing—it often alarms the mother but is not dangerous. In the absence of a doctor it is a good plan to induce vomiting, which may be done by the administration of a teaspoonful of syrup of ipecac. An infant of six months old should be given five drops every fifteen minutes till relief is obtained. Inhalation of steam is also useful. Make a tent over the bed and produce steam by boiling water over an alcohol stove. A teaspoonful of tincture of benzoin (Friar's balsam) to a point of water is more useful. Hot compresses or a mustard plaster over the upper part of the chest is a good measure. Five drops of syrup of ipecac hourly in the evening will help to prevent recurring attacks.

Have the doctor assure himself that the baby has no adenoids or large tonsils, as these are a common cause of Croup.

FARMERS WILL NOT HAVE FREE MARKET

Quick-Change Legislators Tied the Vote and Mayor Duffus Decided for Tolls.

CITIZENS NOT IN FAVOR

It's all over. Peterborough will not have a free market this year. The city council last night in special session witnessed the finishing touch put to the much-debated question by Mayor Duffus, who voted against the free market when the council were a tie, 5-5 on the question.

The chairman of the property committee presented the report again recommending the acceptance of Walter Fisher's tender of $720 for the market tolls for 1917-18 and when he moved the adoption Ald. Taylor seconded it.

Ald. Stratton thought that a deputation consisting of Messrs. T. C. Elliot, M. J. Maher, A. Caldwell, H. Cressman, Jos. Crowe, R. G. Kingan and J. E. W. Fitzgerald should be heard

T. C. Elliot, in a short address, told why the business men favored a free market. It was his experience that the tolls were a nuisance to the farmers, and the more obstruction to business the more the consumer will have to pay.

M. J. Maher was surprised at the market in the city of Hamilton. It was free and had increased ever since the tolls were abolished.

Ald. Stratton was in favor of giving the free market a trial because the merchants wanted it. The rate of taxation would not be raised if it was tried and all the city would be out was $720.

Ald. Saunders asked Ald. Stratton what was meant by a free market and was informed that it meant free for all kinds of farmers' produce so far as tolls were concerned. There would be charges for weighing the produce. The fees for hucksters, auctioneers, etc., would still be in force.

The chairman of the property committee had canvassed a great many people since the last meeting and not one was in favor of a free market.

Ald. Langford was opposed to the free market. It meant a loss to the city of about $1,500 and this was no time to try a free market, when money was needed so badly for other purposes.

Ald. Duncan was satisfied that 90 per cent. of the people were against a free market.

Ald. Worth asked what the tolls were and was informed that at present a double rig paid 10c, a single rig 5c, and 2c for baskets. The alderman then remarked that they would be insulting the farmers when the cost was only 5 or 7 cents.

The Mayor's Views

Mayor Duffus, seeing that the vote on the question was liable to be a tie, stated his opinion very clearly. He had heard the men in favor of a free market and those against. He was satisfied that the tolls were not stopping the farmers from attending the market. The present small market was due to sales being made away from the market as a matter of expedience, and then the dairies, cheese factories and conveniences at outside station had all hurt the local market. A small fee should be charged in order that the market could be regulated. The matter had been left too late in the year and he advised the advocates of a free market to start their agitation early in the year.

Ald. Stratton then moved in amendment, seconded by Ald. Dobbin, that the clause referring to the sale of the market tolls be struck out and a free market tried for a year.

The amendment was put first and was lost on the following division:

For the amendment—Ald. Dobbin, Stratton, McIntyre, Weir, Smith.

Against—Ald. Saunders, Taylor, Duncan, Worth, Langford, the Mayor.

Mayor Duffus confirmed the adoption of the committee's report and the council adjourned.

MR. ELLIOT IS A GOOD LOSER

APPRECIATES COURTESY OF MAYOR AND ALDERMEN TO DEPUTATION.

Mr. T. C. Elliot, who was so active on behalf of the merchants in the move for a free market, is a good loser. He is not disgruntled over the vote of last night, nor does he vow electoral vengeance upon the Mayor and the five aldermen who defeated his plans.

When seen this morning Mr. Elliot expressed himself as being well pleased with the courteous reception accorded the various deputations on the occasions of their visits to the Council, and particularly the genial, gentlemanly courtesy which was at all times shown them by the Mayor and Ald. Saunders, the chairman of the property committee.

He says that it is almost worth while starting a little controversy to have the pleasure of meeting with these gentlemen.

"Indeed we hope to have again the pleasure of deputising the City Council on the same measure next year," said Mr. Elliot.

TAX ON PROFITS OF MINING COMPANIES.

TORONTO, March 29.—The mining tax bill introduced by the Government in the Legislature last night provides for a five per cent. tax on profits above ten thousand dollars and under five million; six per cent. on profits above five million; seven per cent. above ten million.

On nickel and copper the tax is effective from Jan. 1, 1915.

WORKERS BUSY IN THIS CITY

LABOR GAZETTE'S REPORT ON INDUSTRIAL CONDITIONS.

In its statement of industrial conditions in the various cities of the Dominion, the Labor Gazette for March says:

At Peterborough the foundries and machine shops were exceptionally busy. The electric works were working overtime and there was a demand for machinists and toolmakers. Flour and cereal mills were also working overtime, and heat packers were active. The Auburn woolen mills were busy, and carpet weavers were well employed. A tent and awning factory was established in the city during the month. Paper box factories had a busy month, and woodworkers were busy on munition boxes.

GOVERNING COMMITTEE FOR GREATER PRODUCTION MOVE

Walter Stocker Named For Office of President.

On Wednesday afternoon a meeting of the special committee named at the meeting in the council chamber the night previous, and which committee was appointed as a nominating board to further select a general, or governing committee, for the Greater Production Movement in this city, was held. It was decided to prepare a list of names, comprising not more than twenty, and submit thir, with the names of officers for the season, to those in attendance at the meeting to be held in the Opera House on Tuesday nigh, April 3.

A general discussion was had in reference to the whole scheme, and suggestions were brought forward. There were set aside pending the acceptance of the slate, as indicated above. It was decided, however, that a fee of 50c per member would be charged, to cover incidental expenses. The name by which the local movement will be known was not decided but will await further action. In the meantime suggestions for a name are invited.

Following is the slate as completed, subject to revision and approval. It is possible that names be withdrawn, and if so others will be substituted, it being understood that the whole number may not exceed twenty. Further on sub-committees will be named, each to take charge of the details, and of this further announcement will be made.

President — Walter Stocker.

Vice-Pres. — Rev. Dean W. J. McColl.

Sec.-Treas. — F. H. Dobbin

General, or Executive Committee — F. E. Ellis (farm and dairy), R. S. Parsons, W. Henry, Jos. Wearing, R. M. Glover, W. R. Breyfogle, Jos Crowe, W. J. Kennedy, William Lytle, Roland Denne, Harry Gainey, Joseph Begley, W. A. Howard, Walter English, Young, J. E. Smith.

A suggestion was put forward that the Utilities Commission be asked to afford the use of water, free, for purposes of the production. That is that those who are using lots and can reach a water supply be allowed to use it for purposes of irrigation.

WHAT ABOUT YOUR BACK YARD

The soil is probably hard and unyielding as well as lacking in plant food. If you want to have a garden or even a lawn you'll have to get to work early next spring, or sooner, if the ground isn't frozen. Spade thoroughly. Work over the upper three inches with hoe and rake. Break all clods fine, take out stones and rubbish, and add a dressing of manure. Work it into the soil well until it is like part of the soil. Arrange to add your fertilizer early and work it well into the soil. First however, get the soil in good physical shape by the above method of preparation.

Says Dr. Cassell's Tablets Cured His Dyspepsia Completely.

Sergeant Duncan MacNeil, of the Canadian Expeditionary Force, writing from Europe (his home address is 116 Pleasant St., Halifax, N.S.) says: "For six years I suffered from frequent attacks of dyspepsia, often being in bed for days at a time. When the war broke out I joined the Expeditionary Force and came to England. I had not been long there, however, when my old trouble returned and I had to go to hospital. While in hospital a friend told me of Dr. Cassell's Tablets, and I decided to try them. The first box brought such pronounced relief that I continued the treatment. To make a long story short, a complete cure was effected."

A free sample of Dr. Cassell's Tablets will be mailed you on receipt of 5 cents for mailing and packing. Address: Harold F. Ritchie & Co., Ltd., 10, McCaul St., Toronto.

A tribute to the memory of the late Miss J. D. Ross formerly of the Turnbull Co., Peterborough, who came to Canada from Glasgow, Scotland, and who passed away at the St. John's Hospital, Toronto, on Saturday, Feb. 10, 1917, and was laid to rest in the Macnab family plot at St. John's Cemetery, Claremont:

She was a grl of inestimable character and by her kind and loving disposition, she made a great many friends during her short stay in Peterborough, and her happy, cheerful manner will be greatly missed by those who were closely associated with her.

The following lines were her favorite motto:

The more we love the better we are.
And the greater our friendships are,
The dearer we are to God.

JAMES E. ROBERTS

James E. Robert, of Anstruther, died at the Nicholls Hospital last night after a short illness from pneumonia. He was 39 years of age and had lived with his sister, Mrs. Harry Everett, Braidwood Ave., since coming to the city in December. He was an employe of the Henry Hope Co.

SNOWFALL FOR WINTER 58 IN.

The heavy fall of snow last night brings the total for this winter up to 58 inches, and while late, is not unusual. Every year for many years we have had falls of snow in the first half of the month of April and on May 4, 1907, we had a full six inches of snow, which, beginning to fall the previous night, did not cease until 10 a.m. of that date. The snow plows had to go their rounds. Again, on May 28, 1907, snow fell to the depth of one-half inch. This was a very backward spring and the maples were not in full leaf until June 7. On May 20, 1905, there were also flurries of snow.—W. P.

Harstone left Canada with the 77th Bn. Ottawa, under Col. Street. After getting to England his company was drafted into the 19th Battalion and since October last has seen continuous service in the trenches. In his last letter, written about a month ago, Lieut. Visibility in Warfare Is the Latest Problem Facing the Scientists

If a regiment of soldiers were to march through the streets of one of our cities in a uniform of checker-board pattern, arranged in squares of bright red, green, and yellow, it would create, to say the least, a popular sensation.

Yet it is by no means certain that this style of costume, or something like it, may not be adopted by fighting men in some future war—not, be it understood, that they may strike the eye, but, on the contrary, that they may not be seen at all.

One of the oddest of the new departures of the present war is the utilization of optical illusions for cheating the ever-watchful eyes of the enemy, and in this line the most curious expedient is that of painting things out of sight. This, for example, an effort is made to render the big guns invisible by scattering daubs of the primary colors over the weapons and their carriages. The war departments have been making experiments of the same kind, the great guns and their concrete emplacements as well being painted red, yellow, green, and blue. It is found that by this means they are rendered much less distinct as targets. The guns and gun carriages of the field artillery have likewise been experimentally painted in stripes of green, yellow, and red; and, thus chromatically adorned, they are found to be actually invisible at a distance of only 1,000 yards.

The experiment in question, in the European War, has had its most important usefulness in making guns less visible to enemy aviators flying overhead — an all-important aim in up-to-date artillery work being to prevent the foe from ascertaining the location of batteries. A battery once located may be destroyed by concentrated gunfire. The daubs of color confuse the eye of the observer in the aeroplane.

Such a method, however, is very crude. It represents only a first attempt in the development of a new idea which is destined later on to be applied in a scientific way, in accordance with certain well-known principles of optics. The daubs of paint confuse the eye, but if the colors were properly employed they would make the guns actually invisible.

Daylight, of course, is made up of all the colors of the rainbow mixed together. In other words, the colors properly mingled make no color. It follows that a gun and its carriage correctly painted would have no visibility at all at any considerable distance. Neither, for that matter, would an airplane flying overhead. We may have before long invisible flying machines.

Warplanes and military balloons nowadays are painted light gray, to harmonize with the sky and render them less visible. But a gray object in the sky can be seen; if of no color it cannot be seen, because daylight is of no color.

The only problem is so to arrange the colors that, optically, they shall mingle. This cannot be properly accomplished by a mere scattering of daubs of paint. The thing has to be done on scientific principles. Whether it would be better to adopt for the purpose a checkerboard pattern or a series of horizontal, vertical, or wavy parallel narrow stripes remains to be determined by experiment.

Probably any of these arrangements would serve the purpose. The result would be a chromatic scheme corresponding, in effect to a rainbow. The colors of a rainbow, mixed together make no color. So, in like manner, the colors applied with paint in the manner described would so mingle to the eye of an observer at a moderate distance that the object (gun, airplane or what not) would be invisible.

One naturally asks: How might this idea be utilized to lend invisibility to ships? The sea is blue. The sea is green. The sea is of varying tints, according to the color of the sky, which it reflects with its own modifications. But, generally speaking, the color of the sea is a mixture of violet and green; and it is urged by one theorist on the subject that ships could be made at least relatively invisible by painting them with a checkerboard or other pattern of these two colors.

Warships nowadays, to render them as little conspicuous as possible, are painted gray; so, likewise, are guns and military automobiles. The German soldier is uniformed in "mist-gray." But gray means obscurity, not invisibility. To obtain the latter the armies and navies of the future may have to resort to the most brilliant color patterns for the concealment of the fighting man and the fighting machine from hostile view.

LINDSAY MAY HAVE NEW RINK

CURLERS HAVE PROPOSITION UNDER CONSIDERATION.

Lindsay curlers are discussing the advisability of placing a new roof on the rink, or if feasible the erection of a new structure. Considerable discussion took place at a recent meeting, after which it was moved and seconded that a Ways and Means Committee be appointed by the management committee, to secure facts and figures as to the cost of a new rink.

VAGARIES OF BOMBS

Strange Escapes From "Death Messengers" on Battlefield

Some strange escapes from death in the great Somme fighting were described to a London paper representative by a sergeant in a Yorkshire regiment. "Nothing a man does or does not do," he said, "seems to affect his chances. I've seen careful men get winged before the dare-devils, and I've seen the careless man get hit when the cautious man escaped. One man in my platoon first got hit in the mouth. The bullet broke one of his teeth, and, glancing off, just barely grazed his lip. Ten minutes later a bullet scarred across his identity disc, cutting his tunic across his chest; and later, in Courcelette, a bomb exploded in his pocket and, bursting outwards, never touched the man.

"Another man had three bombs in his pocket explode and passed through the experience unscathed; while a corporal had a bullet through his steel helmet. It went in at the front, travelled round his head, tearing the inside padding all round, and went out at the back, smashing up the helmet. And his head showed no trace of the bullet! I saw another bomb burst between a sergeant's feet. Three men were standing together. It blew the sergeant into the air and smashed up his feet, but the other two men were not scratched."

HEROIC CANADIAN

Stretcher-bearer's Devotion to Duty Was Superb

A Canadian official report says: No more beautiful act of heroic self-sacrifice can be mentioned than that of Private Camille Shoule, of a Nova Scotia battalion, during the great advance on Courcelette. He was a stretcher bearer, and while binding the wounded after the capture of the positions was himself severely wounded in the shoulder. His wounds were dressed, but he refused to be evacuated and continued his work for the rest of the day and during the night. In the morning he was again wounded, this time through the leg, but he still refused to leave. Finally, about noon, while he was dressing the wounds of another man, this gallant, gentle soldier was shot through the heart and killed. His general has said of him: Greater devotion to duty I have never seen."

For selling a gold "wound" stripe to an unauthorized person a Chelsea outfitter was fined $15.

ZEPPELINS STRIKE BLINDLY BY NIGHT

Air Pirates Guided by Sound, Not Sight—Destroy Homes of the Poor Usually

A correspondent of the Springfield Republican visited an important Midland city of several hundred thousand population the day after a notable air raid. This city should have been a shining mark. It has many square miles of munitions works, and the facilities for driving off invaders were slight compared with those of London. The city was warned of the approach of a Zeppelin, and all lights were turned out, while the citizens in obedience to orders stayed indoors, refraining from laughter or any other loud noise. For some time, perhaps half an hour, the invader hovered over the hushed and shrouded city, utterly at a loss where to strike. Then a distant railway train evidently gave the commander of the airship his first hint of his whereabouts, and the bombs began to drop, until the whole cargo had been disposed of. Then the ship flew swiftly away.

Poor People Victims

As a result of this spectacular raid the correspondent found that between twenty and thirty people had been killed by the bombs and twenty houses wholly destroyed. Despite the vast extent of the area occupied by munitions works, only one bomb dropped within it, destroying a pile of railroad ties. Nearly all the bombs fell in the thickly-populated districts upon the homes of the very poor, and it has been noted that this is the case with the great majority of the bombs dropped in England since the beginning of the war.

Must Follow Rivers

It is supposed that this is due to the fact that the Zeppelins necessarily follow the course of railways or rivers in their flight, and it seems to be the rule in most cities that the railways pass through the most congested districts. The houses destroyed, for the most part, have been small and poor, and in view of this fact it is remarkable that the incendiary bombs have been able in not a single instance to start a conflagration of any importance.

SENT HER SIX SONS

Ottawa French-Canadian Woman Did Her Bit Nobly

One of the most inspiring examples of a mother's patriotism that surely can be found anywhere is that of Mrs Marie Lafrance, of 562 Wellington street, Ottawa. She had six grown up sons, every one of them enlisted. One returned to Ottawa because flatfoot failed to get him by in the final medical examination. One son fought in France 27 months before he was wounded; another, after fighting a year, went into hospital in England with prostration from the hardships of the trenches, which brought on rheumatism. Another son arrived in England about that time with a battery, another then joined a battery and the only other son was reported as missing from his battalion since the attack on Courcelette. The sons of Mrs. Lafrance are: Pte. Joseph Lafrance, enlisted Aug. 22nd, 1914; Pte. Alfred Lafrance, enlisted July 24th, 1916, aged 29 years; Pte. N. Lafrance, enlisted July 28th, 1915; Gunner Max Lafrance, enlisted March 8th, 1916, Gunner Oliver Lafrance, enlisted May, 1916; ex-Sergt. Henry Lafrance, rejected on final medical examination, enlisted Aug. 2nd, 1915.

The sad news that Noe, her favorite son, had been missing came from the Militia Department and the little woman was beside herself with grief. Noe was 28 years old. He was with the famous French-Canadian battalion that took the village of Courcelette and was found to be missing from the ranks when the roll-call was made after the Germans had been decisively pushed back. His brother, Fred, was in the same charge and writing from Lansdowne Road Hospital, Cardiff, Wales, where he was sent to recover from trench sickness, he said, "When we jumped the parapet Noe had to go with his own section, and I never saw him after. When we came back I looked around to see if I could find Noe, but I could not see him. Then I asked the boys if they had seen him and they said, 'No,' so I don't know if he is wounded."

Hair Tonic Needed.

Lodger—I wish you would put another mattress on my bed. Landlady—Why, that is a genuine hair mattress you have? Lodger—Well, perhaps it was once, but it's baldheaded now.

Some Moving.

The dower act, before the Alberta Legislature, will give the wife a life interest in the homestead, the word homestead being used in the widest sense and not in the restricted application of the word as in relation to land settlement. The legislation is an extension of the privileges conferred by the married woman's protection act of 1916 which enabled a woman, by filing a caveat to prevent the sale of the home without her consent. Amendments are also being introduced in the town and village and school districts giving a wife and the grown-up children the privilege of voting. This is going a step further than the universal suffrage legislation and will remove the property bar to wives enjoying the franchise.

The W.C.T.U. will hold their regular monthly meeting in the Y. W. C. A. tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock

Mr. J. L. Squire of Norwood has received a cablegram from his daughter, Nursing Sister Lieut. Gertrude Squire, who has been in Petrograd, Russia, for the past few months, bearing the assuring message, "All well."

The members of Trinity Church choir were entertained last night at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. A. MacNab, 528 Gilmour street. The occasion was taken to hold the weekly rehearsal, after which a social evening was spent in music, games, etc. During the evening, Miss Taylor who has filled the position of soloist at Trinity Church for the past year with much acceptance, was presented by the choir with a supply of table linen. Miss Taylor will conclude her engagement with the church on Easter Sunday, and leaves shortly afterwards for her new home in the West.

Mr. and Mrs. L. Foster of Quebec are spending a few days in the city.

Mr. and Mrs. Neil S. McEachren, Owen Sound, announce the engagement of their only daughter, Annie Jean, to Mr. James Joseph Wilson, B.A., of the Belleville High School staff, son of Mr and Mrs. James Wilson, Guelph. The marriage will take place early in April.

PTE. JAMES BEATTY PAYS VISIT TO THE ARMORIES

Served in France for Best Part of Two Years.

Lt.-Col. Ackerman and Major O'Flynn were delighted to have a visit this morning from Pte. Jas. Beatty of Cobourg, who is home on furlough until May 1st. Pte. Beatty has served on the transport service ever since he went to France twenty four months ago, and he made himself popular with is superior officials, as well as useful. In the words of Col. Ackerman, "everyone knew and liked James." He left France on Dec. 6th, and is enjoying his holiday immensely. His stories of the Germans are very interesting, and he confirms the reports that the Germans are working the British prisoners in mine shafts which are in sight of the British trenches.

When asked when the war would be over, Pte. Beatty was very optimistic and was sure that October would see the finish. "We could close it up now if we went right at it," he said.

The program arranged for the smoker at the Armories tomorrow night is:

1. Sergt. Giorno vs. Bandsman Dallin (3 rounds of 3 minutes).

TAUGHT SIXTY YEARS IN RURAL SCHOOL

Miss Emily House Also Managed Her Own Farm.

The following is a sketch of a [illegible] old-time Ontario school teacher. On a homestead on Dundas [illegible] Halton County, Ontario, [illegible] Emily House, who looks back over an unusual life of splendid usefulness. Born in England in 1837, she shows no indication that she has passed the four score mark. Eyes bright, memory and mind alert and keen, step smart and elastic, she appears more like a woman of between fifty and sixty than one of eighty years. In 1848, Miss House, then a tiny girl of eleven years, came with the family and parents to Canada and located on the farm which she still owns and lives on.

In July, 1855, she faced her first school. In a small frame building, Section No. 16, on the west bank of the Sixteen-Mile Creek, over forty pupils, some of them grown men and women, awaited her coming. In 1856 she taught near Bronte. Her boarding place was the home of James White (The Woodlands), who owned the most famous bunch of thoroughbred race horses (sixty in number) on the continent. Omagh school claimed her in 1858. One bright boy in this school was Joe Featherston, who became one of Canada's cattle kings. This school is also proud of the fact that it was the home school of Crawford Norris, Premier of Manitoba.

Many Years in West

For a number of years Miss House taught at Niagara, then at [illegible] Ray's School, Coyne's School, Hornby, one in Nelson Township, Snider's Corners, Lisgar, 1874 until 1888 in No. 10 Union School, Trafalgar, then one year in Manitoba, one in North Dakota, seven in Oregon, seventeen in California, thus in 1915 completing sixty years of continuous teaching.

During many of these years, while teaching in Ontario, Miss House also worked her hundred acre farm. Small and slight of figure, gentle and refined of nature, nothing of the militant suffragette about her, she has done all kinds of farm work. She mowed with the scythe, bound after the cradle, hauled lumber on Saturdays, and fenced the farm with picket fence with her own hands. One summer holiday she dug a well over twenty feet deep and stoned it herself.

Pioneered Modern Ideas

She often had over sixty pupils, sometimes men 25 and 30 years of age. She taught bookkeeping before High Schools were started. Every Friday afternoon a little concert was held. Sometimes a spelling match was held, but whatever form the entertainment took, all remember with delight the Bible talk by the teacher. Before ever an Arbor Day was appointed she would with the pupils hie away to the woods, dig trees, and plant them in the school yard. Dozens of school yards are to-day bowers of beauty owing to her labors. Miss House was educated at home, never attended school a day in her life, and taught school for forty years before she ever attended a teachers' convention.

Some married men join the army because they are tired of fighting.

CANADA'S SCIENTISTS NEEDED TO WIN WAR

Mobilize the Inventive Brains is Urged by Toronto Professor.

Prof. John C. McLennan, Professor of Physics of the University of Toronto in an address to the Toronto Empire Club said: "Canada ought to requisition the aid of every scientific man who has anything to offer toward the conduct of the war. One thing which strikes the scientific man on coming into Canada is the exceedingly small extent to which the scientists of Canada are making contributions to their country at this time of war. Most of the scientific men in this country are expending their efforts in the teaching of the young men.

"The same condition of affairs existed in England till the second year of the war. The universities were all open and things were going along with the same complacency. Now, University professors are being utilized for war inventions. National matters are handled by special boards, such as the Navy Board. Boards of scientists were formed all over the country to help in the conduct of the war."

Use All Knowledge

The speaker acted on one of these boards and had a chance to observe the work which they did. The work that they did for the Empire thrilled him. He saw then that Canada did not realize that, to win this war, she needs the application of all the scientific knowledge held in the country.

The work done by the English boards of scientists is best known by some instances of the things they did in answer to the call. Our lines were being bombarded by a 42 cm. gun which was stationed some miles behind the enemy lines, and which was so cleverly hidden that our aviators were unable to locate it. An ordinary scientist, who had never done anything but routine scientific work in his life before, evolved a plan for the establishment of three observation stations, where the sounds of the gun could be traced upon a sheet by the vibrations. Thus, the exact location of the gun was found by the direction from which the sound came and the gun was silenced. Several other specific instances were problems occurring in the prosecution of the war had been solved by scientists, who, heretofore had given all their attention to routine work. One of the best inventions was made by a young Canadian, Mr. McLeod, son of a Toronto minister.

Stopping the Submarines

Prof. McLennan stated that the problem occupying the minds of the scientists was to find a way to detect and destroy submarines. They had made an instrument by which a submarine might be detected at a distance of 4½ miles in clear weather and 1¾ miles in stormy weather. He also stated that the North Sea and the English Channel were being charted so that it was now possible to ascertain just how many subs were in that area at any time. The Zeppelin menace had also been destroyed by recent inventions. The solution of the problems offered by Prof. McLennan was the organization of the scientists of the country by the Government into a board which would follow the example of the English boards by helping in the conduct of the war.

LEND THE GOOD THINGS

So Many Little Benefits From Passing on the Best

A woman visiting in a town told a druggist that he had a fine salesman in embryo in his one clerk. Why not put that opinion in circulation. It would give courage and confidence to the boy, who lived in constant terror of mistakes, a bad working condition. And it would make the employer more tolerant of the Rookie's blunders. Don't be afraid to repeat compliments. Be afraid of concealing them. They may be the stimulus a life needs. They may be the turning point of a life.

Lend your books, even though some of them are not returned. That faded dress upstairs? You can't dye it since just now dyes are nearly worthless; you have outgrown it. Give it to that smaller woman you know, the idea of whose purse generally crowd [illegible] other because there is nothing between; but who likes pretty things and has a rare knack with the needle. She will freshen it up and wearing it will freshen her.

Lend your own presence, now and then, if it will help, or cheer, or strengthen someone. Maybe your own home is a pleasanter spot. Perhaps you would enjoy a book or an hour alone. You may have formed the habit of staying at home and prefer it at all times to any other place. No doubt. But lend yourself. Put good things into circulation. It is one of humanity's great duties.

Grape Fruit Pie

First bake a shell as for lemon pie; then make a filling as follows—Mix 1 tablespoonful cornstarch in a little cold water, and over this pour 1 cup boiling water. To this add the juice of 2 grape fruit, the grated rind and juice of 1 orange, beaten yolks of 2 eggs and the white of one, sugar to taste, and a small piece of butter. Put all in the double boiler and cook until thick, stirring all the time. When done put in the shell. Then beat up the white of the second egg with ½ cup of sugar, until thick, and spread with a knife over the pie. Put in the oven and let brown lightly.

CANADIAN DISCIPLINE

"Thorough" Became Real Motto of Kitchener's Own.

Perhaps the strictest military discipline ever seen in Canada was that introduced in the 244th (Kitchener's Own) Battalion organized by officers of the Victoria Rifles, a Montreal militia regiment. Canada has never been noted for the niceties of military discipline, the free Colonial spirit bending to nothing but the essentials of military law and order, but a new standard was set by the organization which from the first sought to do credit to the name and memory of the late Earl Kitchener of Khartoum. When this body first went into quarters in Montreal citizens began to notice that officers of the 244th were saluted by their men even in such places as departmental store buildings. Coming up the stairs from the basement to the street floor of such buildings privates were seen to come to attention and salute their superiors, who smilingly returned the salute. Officers of other units were frankly amazed at such conduct, recognizing it as entirely unnecessary for rankers to "bother" with salutes unless on the street. At this the staff of the 244th only smiled; it was part of their system. "Thorough" was the motto of Kitchener's Own Battalion and if the men took it too literally no harm was done.

"We do not ask the men to do such things, we don't even suggest it, but we are pleased, because no regiment can be too smart and this is evidence that the 244th is going to be as different as its name," said an officer in explanation of the punctiliousness of his company in regard to the details of saluting. He also pointed out that as the 244th was taking men of all classes from all parts of Canada there was no pride in locality or in old regimental history to create that intangible something "esprit de corps" without which a battalion was a mob of 1,100 persons. Thoroughness and efficiency and pride in these things would have to make up for the drawbacks and make the battalion fit to bear into battle Lord Kitchener's colors. The regiment had assurance, from Sir Sam Hughes to Lieut.-Col. McRobie, that it would not be broken up in England to reinforce other Montreal or other units and it had to give the authorities a chance to make good their promises.

MANY KINDS OF MOPS

Dusters Too Are Becoming Specialized to Save Labor

The mop family has grown like the nouveau riche; they are intruding their personalities into the best house cleaning society. Dry mops, wet mops, oil mops, wall mops, floor mops, ceiling mops—mops, little, big and between, will save reaching and stretching and help us to get at those ungetable places in the corners, the moldings, over the doors, ad libitum. Second cousins to them are the duster family, descendants of cast-off underwear, but to-day developed into dignified dustless cloths of every size, shape and combination. The dustless idea is the new hygienic note in house cleaning, and we have dustless dusters attached to handles, like the feather dusters of old. They are also woven into brush forms, or are mounted on handles of varying length to make cleaning of pictures and ornaments easier.

PRISONERS OF WAR; STRIKING CONTRAST

Stern Facts Presented in Two Letters Tell Their Own Story.

From the "Ladies' Field": The Quorn hunt were at the now much discussed Donington Park, and they held something of a lawn meet for the benefit of the German prisoners who are interned in the beautiful old house. Of course, there was a big crowd of people in motors and on foot, who had taken the opportunity of getting into the park to have a look at the Germans. Captain Forester, who is now hunting the hounds himself on Tuesdays and Saturdays, after he had been into the hall, mounted and brought the hounds close up to the wire entanglements, in order that the German officers might have a better view of the pack. A little more law than usual was allowed; when the Master raised his cap to the officers, they bowed in return, and a very curious little ceremony was over, and the ordinary business of hunting began.

From a British officer prisoner in Germany: "Our beds are iron cots with dirty straw paillasses, arranged in two tiers round the room. I myself occupy an upper berth, and find it a little inconvenient to climb into since I have only one serviceable arm. Only a privileged few amongst us, such as the wounded, have a blanket and that only by the courtesy of certain English civilians, who share our captivity and have been told off to act as scouts for us (in the 'Varsity sense of that expression). Amongst these is a well-known M.F.H. These unfortunates have not only been employed for weeks in erecting sheds, barbed wire fences, and so forth, but have been set to more menial and degrading tasks, such as cleaning out latrines. Small wonder that, like many of our wounded, who have been so grossly ill-treated, they are consumed with a deadly intensity of hatred, which will go down into the grave with them."

To Wash Face Veils

Place the chiffon, or any other kind of veil in alcohol for a short time, then souse it up and down till the dirt is all out. Avoid wringing, as it will either tear or make the veil thin and stretchy. Pat the fluid out or squeeze between a towel and shake till dry. The veil will look like a new one.

Tomato Salad

The high grade canned tomatoes may be used for salad. Drain, place on crisp lettuce leaf and serve with French mayonnaise or cooked salad dressing. Additions of chopped celery, parsley or onion may be used to give variety.

A procession of captured German aeroplanes through the streets of London.

Peach Cobbler

Fill a deep baking pan with canned peaches; cover with a thick top crust of rich biscuit dough. Bake in hot oven till crust is thoroughly baked. Serve with creamy sauce.

Cafe Parfait

Whip one cup of cream, add a cup of very strong coffee, a cup of powdered sugar and turn into a mould. Pack with salt and ice and let stand three hours. Unmould and serve.

IS YOUR HEALTH WORTH $5.00?

Woman Tells How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Restored Her Health.

Lima, Ohio.—"I was all broken down in health from a displacement. One of my lady friends came to see me and she advised me to commence taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and to use Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash. I began taking your remedies and took $5.00 worth and in two months was a well woman after three doctors said I never would stand up straight again. I was a midwife for seven years and I recommended the Vegetable Compound to every woman to take before birth and afterwards, and they all got along so nicely that it surely is a godsend to suffering women. If women wish to write to me I will be delighted to answer them."—Mrs. JENNIE MOYER, 342 E. North St., Lima, Ohio.

"DILUTION" OF LABOR

How Men Repair and Women Watch Shell Lathes

The Setter-up, in a British shell factory where women do the machining, is the man who keeps the lathes in order. His duties are equivalent to those of a chauffeur who undertakes running repairs. Previously the setter-up was the machinist, and in this capacity he tended the machine as well as working it. When the dilution of labor came, five out of every six setters-up were "combed out," the remaining one undertaking the setting up of the six machines, on to which girl operators were introduced. He makes $20 to $25 a week, for, in addition to his wages, he receives a bonus on the work done by the machinists under his care.

The mechanic is the specialist who, when the machine is so out of repair that it cannot be used, takes it down, puts it in order, builds it up, and hands it back again to the care of the setter-up.

"Astonishing how my Strength and Fitness

came back," says Mr. Inman, a Winnipeg business man, cured by Dr. Cassell's Tablets.

"It was astonishing how my strength and fitness came back," says Mr. G. C. INMAN, of 330, HARCOURT STREET, STURGEON CREEK, WINNIPEG, for many years a well-known man in the business life of Canada. Mr. Inman continues: "It is about three years now since I first used Dr. Cassell's Tablets. I was terribly run-down and weak. Sometimes I felt I should have to leave off altogether, my work was such an effort to me. I ate little, I had no appetite, and I suffered if I forced myself to eat.

"My nerves of course were in a bad way, and my sleep very disturbed. Everything, in fact, pointed to a nervous breakdown. It was then a friend told me about Dr. Cassell's Tablets, and I got some to try. The first result was that I could sleep at nights, and then my health rapidly improved. It was really astonishing how my strength and fitness came back.

"I may add that some time ago my mother was very ill with pernicious anaemia. I urged her to take Dr. Cassell's Tablets, but she would not, so I crushed them down and gave them in food without her knowing. She was confined to bed before she had the Tablets, and now is about again well and bright."

Mr. G. C. Inman.

Mr. Inman is now in England, having had to return there some little time ago to take control of the well-known firm of A. W. Inman and Son, Printers and Publishers, Leeds. Letters will reach him there.

Insurance and Financial Review of March 1917, has the Following to Say of

Scott & Walmsley Limited

The underwriting firm of Scott and Walmsley, which is so well and favorably known throughout Canada for its sound business principles, and which has under its management The Queen City Fire Insurance Company, The Hand-in-Hand Fire Insurance Company, The Millers and Manufacturers Insurance Company, and the Fire Insurance Exchange Corporation, has had one of the best years in its experience.

During a particularly trying year, when many fire companies were well satisfied if they succeeded in breaking even, it had the happy experience of making a profit in the four companies under their management of $84,000.00, and this after paying liberal dividends to shareholders and to policyholders in the mutual and stock companies.

Fire underwriting is always something of a gamble, but when one sees, year after year, a substantial profit made by the same underwriters, there is something more than an element of luck entering into it, and credit must be given to the men in charge, not only for sound business methods, but also for careful underwriting. Had the same care and attention been given to detail, in many of our Canadian fire insurance companies which have gone out of business, there would have been a different story to tell.

The shareholders of the companies under the management of Joseph Walmsley, Col. John D. Chipman and F. E. Dingle, of Scott and Walmsley, Ltd., general agents of the four companies, are to be congratulated on having three such able men to look after their affairs.

A Romantic Reunion.

John A. Campbell, a wealthy manufacturer, of Vancouver, B.C., staying with his family at the St. Mark hotel, San Francisco, noticed the name of Charles Campbell, of New York, on the hotel register and inquired about him.

"He is that elderly man seated over there," said the clerk.

John A. Campbell looked him over and approached him.

"Where were you born, stranger?" the Vancouver man asked.

"In Ontario."

"What became of your father and mother?"

"They were lost at sea when I was a small lad."

"Well, then you're my brother Charley, all right."

And the two aged men embraced, not having seen each other for more than fifty years. Before they were 20 they drifted away from the old homestead in Ontario, lost trace of each other, and while John A. was making a fortune and raising a family in Vancouver Charles was doing likewise in New York.

Both were on pleasure tours with their families when they met, and now the families are enjoying a [illegible]

The Difference.

Once it was such a simple thing
To whisper to Irene,
"Oh, let me, dearest, be your king,
And you shall be my queen!"
He only had to go and cut
A clearing in the woods
And build a snug and homelike hut
To house his wife and goods.

The hardest thing was to secure
The pretty girl's consent.
He did not need, if that were sure,
To fret about the rent
Or wonder how he'd feed his bride
Or pay his water tax
So long as he had at his side
His rifle and his ax.

Now he must well consider first
A lot of details small,
Or worst will quickly come to worst
And evil will befall.
Now he must search the town with care
To find an airy flat,
And all the cash he has to spare
Must go to furnish that.

And not a moment can he lose
The sight of things to buy—
Of wife's garments, hats and shoes,
The weekly food supply.
Oh, it is quite a different view,
And don't you, little lad,
Look back at times with envy to
The snap your father had?

A man always gives a pretty woman the kind of advice she is looking for, and gives it free of all charges.

Where He Loses Out.

The man who gets the raw and short
And worst end of a deal
Can take his troubles into court.
The boy has no appeal.
He catches Cain should he rebel
Against paternal law,
Although the order seems to spell
Injustice pure and raw.

Suppose it to the boy should seem
Unjust and he should say,
"I'll take it to the court supreme Without undue delay."
The haughty parent on the spot
Would rise and go to press,
And what he wouldn't do would not
Be much, as you may guess.

Or adding slowly words like these,
Did he but only dare:
"Oh, take it to my lawyer, please!
The case is in his care."
The chances for that lad to see
A brilliant starlike glow,
Oh, very fine indeed would be,
If you should care to know!

That's where the youngster stands to lose.
Unheeded is his cry.
The courts for him do not enthuse
Nor to his rescue fly.
Unheeding, the police will stride
Along or maybe stand
And watch his father tan his hide
And never lift a hand.

Flooded River Brings Precious Gift to Reunite Husband and Wife

By MARGARET CAMERON.

John Bascombe stood upon the bank of the whirling river, looking on the wreck of his home. His wife, Mary, stood at his side, but even in this extremity of affliction her hand did not seek his, and there was no sign that their common disaster had united them.

Things had not gone well with them during the three years that had elapsed since their marriage. He had been a clerk in St. Louis, and Mary was a school teacher. It was a boy and girl flirtation, followed by a boy and girl marriage, then, spurred by necessity and aided by the inheritance of a few hundred dollars, John had purchased a few acres in the flat lowlands of the western part of the state. There they had struggled almost from the beginning. It was the desperate struggle of the soil-hungry, seeking to maintain their hold upon the precious earth.

Gradually, under the influence of the hard and remitting toil, they had drifted apart. If Mary had had a child it might have brought them together. But because this was not destined to be they had grown to be almost strangers. Mary found the hard struggle intolerable and longed for books, people, intellectual life, such as she had been accustomed to; and John, busy from dawn to dark in his battle with nature, hardly had any other life at all.

When they ceased to hope for a child it seemed as though they must drift apart for ever. In fact they had spoken of a separation, at first tentatively, then hopefully, then eagerly, as something to be anticipated.

"You can have everything except the house and the land," John said to her. "I want to be free, as you do. I'll send you—"

"I don't want your money, John," she flashed out at him. "There isn't anything of yours I want—now. There was only one thing—love—and I don't want that any more."

Stood Side by Side Upon a Little Knoll.

They were to have separated that very day, John remaining there, Mary returning to St. Louis, to take up her work in the public schools again.

And then, a week before, the river began to rise. And soon came stories of the floods up the country that were carrying all before them, bursting through levees, overwhelming towns, sweeping away houses and churches as though they were but driftwood floating upon the stream, and drowning thousands.

And hourly the river rose, and Mary, forgetting for the time her own plans, stayed at John's side and fought the floods with him. It was little she could do; but all along the banks men were building up the levees, hoping to dam back that roaring tide before it burst through into the fertile fields that they had won from the scrub-covered bottoms of the old water-channels. And Mary, with a corps of devoted women, ministered to the savage, wearied, toiling men.

Then the worst happened; the river burst its banks, and, when the crest of the flood had passed, the little settlement was as matchboxes. Not a house was left standing. Only logs, shingles, and foundations remained. And down the stream poured the debris from a half dozen states on its wild career toward the Gulf of Mexico.

They stood side by side upon a little knoll and looked at the dull yellow ponds that covered their land. The land was there still but all the fruits of their works had been carried away. They looked into the turbid river, and then into each other's eyes.

"What are you going to do, John?" asked Mary.

"I'm going to move west," he answered. "And you?"

"I shall go back to St. Louis," she answered. "There is no use in my staying here now."

"No," he agreed.

Mary was to leave on the following morning. They were sheltered in the railroad depot nearby which accomodated the homeless sufferers and stood just beyond the highest reach of the flood. On the next morning John set off at dawn. He could not resist the temptation to look once again at the ruin of his home, but he had not the heart to awaken Mary. When he left the squalid, sordid enclosure it was with no intention of returning.

And Mary knew that. She had not slept that night. She had thought, all through the long, sleepless hours of that other ruin, their common life. Had she not also been to blame for that? She recalled times when she might have been more to John, endearments which she had repelled; times when she had let pride master her inclinations toward reconciliation. And John had not changed, only he had let material things creep up between their love like noisome weeds, and strangle it. Yet she could not bring herself to call him back. She watched his tall, bent figure pass out of the enclosure, and out of her life, as she thought.

Half an hour later he was back, his face aflame. She looked at him in amazement. He might have been another man—no, the old one, her boyish sweetheart who had so long been only a memory to her.

"Mary!" he called. "Come! No, put on your cloak and bring your grip. I will carry it for you. Come. I'll show you!"

She accompanied him outside the squalid buildings to where the receding floods had left a swampy stretch of earth. Here their farm had been, their house and growing crops, and now—

She started in amazement. A new house stood almost upon the spot of the old one. It might have been their house—the house they had planned in the first dreams of their married life. Firm and foursquare it stood, with its eight rooms, its neatly shuttered windows, its front door with the gleaming knocker. Mary turned to John.

"It's magic, John. What does it mean?" she asked.

John pointed to the receding river. "It is the river's gift to us," he answered.

Torn from its foundations, hundreds of miles away, in heaven only knew what county or state, even, it had been deposited there by the flood. It needed but two teams of oxen to place it upon the foundations of the old home. And it was theirs! For it could never be taken away; probably those who had once owned it had died in the cataclysm. It was theirs, this home. They crept up toward it, wading like children through the swampy places. And, looking in, Mary gasped with wonder. For it was furnished, neatly, cheaply, but tastefully. There was a parlor, with a table and chairs, a living room; even the curtains swayed upon their rods. The river had borne it upon its breast as gently as a child.

"I wonder if the upper floor is furnished, Mary," John suggested.

Suddenly she caught his hand in hers and motioned to him to remain silent. "Hush, John!" she whispered, listening intently. "Did you hear anything?" she added presently.

John had heard nothing except the sullen lapping of the waves upon the river banks. But Mary's eyes were alight with a strange fire and her cheeks flushed and the hand that he held in his was trembling.

"What is it, Mary?" he asked stupidly.

Suddenly she dashed wildly up the steps of the stranded house, while John looked after her, wondering at the feverish eagerness which had succeeded her customary apathy. She disappeared inside and almost immediately afterward she reappeared. Her hair was tumbling all over her face, upon her lips there played a smile of tenderness that he had often imagined there but had never seen. In her arms she carried a bundle.

She came toward him, and, as she unwrapped it, the feeble cry of a child smote upon his ears.

"Look, John!" she whispered.

An infant of six months was lying in her arms. And even as John looked he saw the little arms go upward, seeking Mary's neck, and, having found it, they clasped themselves contentedly around it.

"What do you think, John!" said Mary, with a little laugh. "He hasn't even finished his bottle—although the milk is souring. You didn't hear him," she added, "but I did."

She stood there so proud, so happy in this vicarious motherhood that John's arm stole timidly around her waist and he drew her toward him.

"Mary, dear," he whispered, "I have often thought that if we had a child—like this—it would have drawn us together. We would not have drifted apart as we have done."

"So have I," she answered passionately. "I felt that you resented it, John, my—my childlessness, and so—and so—"

"You hadn't grown tired of me?"

"No, John, indeed no. If I had thought you wanted me to stay—"

"But I did and do want you," he answered triumphantly. "Only, Mary—"

"John!"

"He stays with us."

"Of course," she answered, turning up the little face for her husband's kiss.

FOR GAINING FLESH

What to Eat, What to do and Not to do

To gain flesh take plenty of olive oil, eat eggs, butter, cereals and fatty broths, potatoes, peas, beans, corn, carrots and parsnips, figs, dates, nuts, bananas, underdone beefsteak and roast beef. Drink plenty of milk, cream and cocoa. Avoid food that will not digest easily, and be careful to masticate thoroughly what you do eat. Give up pickles, vinegar and all acids. Exercise freely in the open air, and take plenty of sleep. Don't fret or worry; this will keep one thin more than anything else. Cultivate an easy-going disposition, if you possibly can.

Sally Lunn

Sift a pint of flour, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder and half a teaspoonful of salt and add half a cupful of melted butter and two beaten egg yolks. Mix thoroughly. Then add two egg whites beaten stiff. Drop the batter in muffin tins and bake. It is a stiff batter and when the egg whites are folded in they do not mix completely with the other ingredients and so the tops of the muffins are somewhat irregular.

Egg Timbales

Beat four eggs thoroughly, add two cups of milk, a teaspoon of salt, a tablespoon of minced parsley, the juice of one small onion. Put in small dishes in a pan of hot water and cook until set like baked custard. Serve with white sauce.

Pineapple and Cherry Salad

Mix a cup each of chopped cherries and pineapple with a mayonnaise. Add a quarter of a cup of chopped nuts and serve on crisp lettuce.

Mr. Candle Disobeys His Wife

No, Mr. Candle, I won't shut up and get into bed.

What's that you say? I've been talking for three hours, and you don't care if I don't get into bed! No, of course you don't care. Your poor wife can stay out of bed all night and you wouldn't help her. I'm not going to stay out to please you. I'm going to get in bed, whether you like it or not.

Eh? Of course my fet are cold, and it's your fault. If you had done what I told you, I wouldn't have been out in the cold at this time.

You can't see what difference it made what store you get the things at! Now, Mr. Candle, are you doing the housekeeping or am I?

What d'you want? You're keeping the house and I'm the housekeeper.

No, you didn't get what I told you. I said oranges at 1 cents a dozen.

Eh, what you mumbling. Yes, I know they are the same kind, and you paid 25 cents a dozen.

No, I didn't say the salmon wasn't good you brought; I said it was too dear.

What'd you say, Mr. Candle? It was only 20 cents a pound! Well, if you had gone where I told you it would have only been 12 cents a pound.

Well, I know you brought the shortening, but you paid 2 cents a pound more for it, and 45 cents for butter, instead of 43c, as I told you.

They didn't have it at 43c!

No, but if you had gone where I told you, they would have had it.

What? You forget the address! Huh! you'd forget me if I let you.

What's that? No such luck!

You brute!

Yes, of course you'll do what I want now you've upset me and made me cry.

What's that? You've got a pencil. What for.

Oh, to write the address down. Well, it's A. W. Paskins, Cash Grocers, Cor. Hunter and Aylmer, and their 'phone is 317.

THE HOUSEKEEPERS' GUIDE

Watch the advertisements on this page,
They will appear every Friday.

TO DETECT ADULTERANTS

Is any of the food placed on your table adulterated? You think not, but are you reasonably sure? Modern chemistry has provided manufacturers with abundant means of tampering with otherwise pure foods in such a manner as to defy the keenest scrutiny on the part of the uninitiated, so that many a housewife may be greatly pleased with the beautiful green color of the peas she is preparing, not knowing that this color may be produced by the use of a copper solution, or the butter may appear most palatable, while actually "renovated" or "made over." Science is perfectly impartial, and is as useful to the manufacturer who wants to deceive the public, as to the man who would provide only the best for human consumption.

But the wiles and practices of the unscrupulous manufacturer are constantly being met by the skill of the food expert whose business it is to detect the adulteration. Canada's pure food laws are based on solid ground, and it is possible to prove adulteration in practically every case, where the tests are applied. Of course, many of these tests are of a highly complex nature and cannot be described intelligibly to the average person who has not made himself familiar with chemical terms. But there are a few simple tests to determine some of the adulterations which can not only be readily understood, but can also be made in the kitchen by anyone of average intelligence.

Test for "Renovated" Butter

How do you know that the butter you are using is not "renovated"? Possibly the price you pay guards against that. If you are not sure, try this test: Place a small piece of the butter in a tablespoon and heat slowly over a gas jet or lamp flame. When dissolved, bring to a quick boil. Stir well with a match, being sure to mix thoroughly. Watch the result carefully. If the butter is pure, it will boil with comparatively little spluttering and will form a decided foam on the surface. If on the other hand, the butter is made-over, or contains oleomargarine, it will splutter while boiling in much the same way that water and grease boil, while there will be comparatively no foam on top.

How to Tell Watered Milk

Dr. Hastings' department claims to have practically put a stop to the practice of farmers paying a visit to the pump before sending the milk to the city for sale. There was a time, however, when it was generally understood that many a fortune was made out of the well on the farm. Even now some of the milk delivered has a decidedly blue tint. Has it been watered? How can this be determined?

Nearly all natural water, says the scientist, contains a trace of nitric acid, as nitrates. This fact has been taken advantage of to test for water in the milk. In making the test, a serum is prepared by adding two parts of 25 per cent. acetic acid to 100 parts of milk, and heating to 160 degrees. The milk coagulates or curds and the liquid is drawn off, leaving the curd. A few drops of the serum is placed in a saucer and one or two drops of strong sulphuric acid containing a very small amount of diphenylanim is added. The presence of the nitrates in the water is indicated by the producing of a deep blue color in the mixture.

Test for Fresh Eggs

How about the eggs? When reports are current of millions upon millions of eggs being placed in cold storage, who is to know whether the one he has placed before him at breakfast is fresh, or has reposed for months in an Arctic temperature? "The proof of the pudding is in the eating," say the wise ones. Break it open and see. A good plan, but there is a test which can be applied long before the egg reaches the breakfast table. Prepare a solution of one part salt and ten parts water, heated to 70 degrees F. Place the egg in this solution. If it is fresh, it will just sink below the surface. If it has been "stored" it will rise slightly above the surface.

Coppered Peas

If the peas you purchase are of a suspiciously bright green color, try the following test: Draw off some of the solution and add a few drops of hydrochloric acid. Mix thoroughly, then place the blade of a steel knife into the mixture. If copper salts are present, copper, recognized by its red color, will be deposited.

Simple Test for Glucose

Glucose is often used as a substitute for sugar in the preparation of preserves or confectionery. This also may be detected in a simple manner. Put a small quantity of the jelly or preserve to be tested in a glass of water, heating to hasten solution. Then add a quantity of strong alcohol. If the preserve is adulterated with glucose, a white deposit (dextrin) will form at the bottom. If the presrve is pure, there will be no deposit. Another method is to reat the solution with iodin. If glucose is present there will be a red or voilet color produced.

Adulterants in Coffee

Coffee is sometimes so crudely mixed with foreign substances as to be easily detected by careful ocular examination. But this is not always possible when the adulteration is skilfully done. The following test is a fairly dependable one: Place the coffee in water and mix well. Pure coffee contains a considerable amount of oil. If there are adulterants in the product the coffee will tned to float; while the adulterants, being heavier than the water, will sink at once. If there is a very large deposit at the bottom of the vessel, the coffee is probably adulterated, while the purer the coffee the larger will be the number of particles which will float at the top.

Food Colored

The general question of food coloring is one which has been much discussed in the past. It has been held by those who favored so-called "harmless" coloring that the digestion is benefitted and encouraged by means of the optic nerve, as the odor assists it by means of the olfactory nerve. There is a decided objection raised by the authorities, however, to any artificial coloring. Fortunately for the consumer, he is not left to guard the purity of the food he eats or drinks himself. Government inspectors are always busy, but the necessity of using only food of known purity is more and more apparent when the harmful nature of the adulterants is known.

WHEN EGGS GROW CHEAP

When eggs grow cheap, we'll surely make a cake
Some happy afternoon, for early tea,
And what a joyful thrill 'twill give to know
That we may use two eggs, or even three!
How odd 'twill seem to bring to light once more
The dear old cake-tin with its fluting deep,
And butter it—Ah, what a stirring time,
When eggs grow cheap!

When eggs grow cheap, we'll put one in the gems,
And maybe we can boil or poach a few
For breakfast every morning if we wish,
And still have some left for a pudding, too!
We shall not be so cross and cranky then,
And toss the cook-books in a tumbled heap
Because they gave no sauce to eggless things,
When eggs grow cheap!

ROAST CHUCK BEEF

Wipe the chuck or three-cornered roast beef, put into hot oven for twenty minutes, or until well seared; then put over the meat one tablespoon salt, one cup cold water; reduce the heat of oven and roast forty minutes adding water as needed. Wash, pare, boil and skin the sweet potatoes; place around the meat and roast thirty minutes, or until brown. Remove the meat and potatoes to hot platter; to the pan gravy (there must be two cups) add one tablespoon flour mixed with a little cold water; seasoning to taste and one tablespoon caramel; boil three minutes.

HEALTHY DIET FOR THE POOR

If Canada were in a state of siege for an entire year and had to live exclusively on whole corn and milk it would emerge from its experience in as good physical condition as when the siege began.—On a diet of head rice and hominy not a man would be able to dig a trench, shoulder a gun or thrust a bayonet.

A bushel of cornmeal containing all the food elements needed by the human body weights 56 pounds, which is purchased at this writing at $1.20, an average price of about 2 cents a pound.

The wholeprice price of denatured hominy is $1.65 a bushel. The retail price at 5 cents a bag is $2.80 a bushel. This is a big price to pay for a robbed and denatured product which contains none of the minerals of fats natural to the whole grain.

It would be much better for people reduced to such dire extremities that they have to spend their meager incomes on polished rice and hominy to buy the whole grain, break it up into a coffee mill and boil it until soft, tender and flavorful, in which condition it can be consumed as porridge with milk, the cheapest animal food on the market, and the most nutritious, or it can be set aside until cold and then sliced and fried.

When ground fine enough it makes perfectly wonderful corn cakes and griddle cakes, waffles or muffins, every one of which contains a full measure of robust whoops, hops, skips, jumps, red corpuscles, punch, vigor, vitality, ambition, steady nerves sound teeth, tough sinews, hardy muscles, bright eyes, rosy cheeks, red lips, glossy hair, good digestion, sound sleep, clear skin, snap, steam, stamina endurance, energy and resistance to disease.

White mice will thrive on such food. Hogs will become healthy, prime porkers on such food. A diet of polished rice and hominy will kill both mice and hogs.

Out of polished rice and hominy have been extracted all the red corpuscles.

There is nothing technical about this. The practical experience of armies and navies has said so. The experiment station of Europe and America have said so. Dietetic experiments, clinics and hospitals that are not hidebound, that are not conventianally orthodox in following out of date textbooks or that are not conservatively academic, know the truth.

The people cannot get natural brown rice, and they cannot get the old-fashioned southern water ground cornmeal with all the minerals and fats left in. Why? Because official bulletins do not urge them to demand such foods.

"ALMOST THOU PERSUADEST ME TO BECOME A CITIZEN OF PETERBORO"

Lieut.-Col. Nicholls' Acknowledgment of Congratulations by the City.

ON SENATORSHIP

"Almost thou persuadest me to become a resident of Peterborough," remarked Senator the Hon. Frederic Nicholls, in a happy adaptation of a passage of Scripture at the banquet tendered him in the Oriental Hotel last night by the citizens, who paid him honor as the controlling spirit in the city's largest industry.

The Senator's statement as to a prospective change of residence was called for by the bright picture which Mayor Duffus, the chairman of the evening, drew of Peterborough as a desirable place in which to live, a place, too, with a happy past and a rosy future. Later in the evening Judge Huycke expanded the parallel by adidng that the desire of those present was that Senator Nicholls should not almost, but altogether become as they were in a residential sense. There the simile ended. There was nothing to save or except.

The banquet will always remain as one of the most successful functions of the kind ever held in Peterborough. It was a spontaneous and hearty expression of good will on the part of the entertainers, and the kindly sentiment extended to him was heartily appreciated by the guest of the evening. The bill-of-fare was a credit to Mr. Colson, who provided it, the service was excellent, the speeches bright and timely, and the musical selections rendered by Mr. Ed. Hanrahan, accompanied by Mr. John Crane on the piano, were something out of the ordinary.

Before the banquet a reception was held in the parlors of the hotel, when the hundred and twenty who took part in the function were presented to Senator Nicholls by Mayor Duffus. The dining-room tables were decorated with flowers, and the room tastefully arrayed with a display of flags and pennants of the city.

At the Speakers' Table.

At the head table, seated on the right of Mayor Duffus was the guest of the evening and Messrs. G. A. Gillespie, M.L.A., T. F. Matthews and G. W. Morrow, while seated to his left were Capt. J. H. Burnham, M.P., E. G. Patterson, Senator Nicholls' right-hand man in Peterborough, J. J. Hartley, H. Rush, W. H. Bradburn, and G. W. Gilliam, another of the leading men in the industry that was so much in evidence last night.

Senator Nicholls' speech was a handsome and grateful appreciation of the honor which had been tendered him, and his hint that when the war was over greater things may be undertaken locally by the company of which he is the head was received with hearty applause by his hearers.

Capt. Burnham's address dealt eloquently with his favorite theme, the prosperity of the Empire. He is optimistic as to the outcome of the war and the good that will come to the world when peace is restored.

Mr. H. R. H. Kenner made one of those highly polished addresses for which he is famous, and lauded Canada to the skies.

Mr. Brock's Visions.

One of the brightest addresses of the evening was that made by Mr. Ivor Brock, who is a happy combination of the practical business man and the dreamer whose fancy paints bright pictures of the future. It is only the man with the imagination who is able to accomplish great things.

Mr. J. J. Hartley spoke on behalf of labor and paid a high tribute to the efficiency of the workingmen of Peterborough, who, he said, invariably work their way to the front when they go to other cities.

Mr. T. F. Matthews put in a word for the Health Association, an organization in the work of which he has always taken an active interest. He spoke of the benefits to the public generally in the saving of the tubercular from the terrors of that affliction and making them useful members of society and valuable recruits in industrial life. The necessity of caring for neglected children and instructing inexperienced young mothers in the rearing of their families was also dwelt on. The point made by Mr. Matthews was that as the head offices of so many local industries are outside the city, representations on behalf of the Health Association and kindred charities should be made to the officials, who have available a fund for such purposes.

The Guest Introduced

In introducing the guest of the evening Mayor Duffus alluded to Senator Nicholls as one of Canada's most prominent citizens, the head of Peterborough's largest industry, which in his hands is sure to prosper and continue to be popular and as the industry grows so will Peterborough keep pace with it. On behalf of the city officials and the citizens he extended a hearty welcome to the Senator. He congratulated the Government for its selection of a Senator and the member of the Red Chamber upon their acquisition of so distinguished a member. "We look upon him in a large degree as a Senator from Peterborough," said the Mayor.

The Mayor gave a brief history of Peterborough from the time of its first settlement one hundred years ago. Coming down to the period of twenty-five years ago he told how he had, as second in command of a horse and cart, helped to dig the trenches for the C.G.E. building and how, owing to indifferent driving he put the outfit over the edge of a bridge, with disastrous results. Mayor Duffus felt a pardonable pride in the fact that he has risen from the

RULING OF THE MINISTER HAS NO TERROR FOR MR. G. N. GORDON

INTERESTED IN NEXT STEP TO OUST HIM FROM SCHOOL BOARD.

MEANWHILE HE SMILES.

There was no sign of gloom on the broad features of Mr. G. N. Gordon, city solicitor and member of the Board of Education, when a reporter asked him today how he liked the ruling of the Minister of Education, which declared that he is not entitled to sit on the Board. Mr. Gordon, who was all smiles, intimated that he would await with interest the next step directed against him to oust him from his seat.

The Review's announcement of the Minister's ruling has created quite a stir, because for one thing it conflicts with the decision given by Judge Huycke, who ruled that Mr. Gordon, in his capacity as city solicitor, was not an official of the city.

His Statement

Mr. Gordon stated that he knew what Dr. Pyne's opinion was about his sitting on the Board of Education and Dr. Pyne has no authority to declare a seat vacant or to make any such decision.

There has been one judicial interpretation of the law in the matter and Mr. Gordon said if anybody wanted to question his qualifications in the courts or in any other way, that he was quite ready to meet them at any time and in the meantime he would obey the mandate of the ratepayers of the city of Peterborough and attend at the meetings and carry out the policy of reform that he believed was of vital value to this city, in spite of any opinions, views or suggestions from any quarter seeking to influence his conduct. He said he was quite willing to admit that The Review, the Minister of Education or anyone else had a right to their opinion and so had he and he proposed to exercise that right just as he saw fit.

ARMORED CARS ATTACK AND ROUT SENUSSI TRIBESMEN

Two Hundred of the Enemy Were Killed or Wounded.

Covered 400 Miles.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

NEW YORK, March 30.—The Associated Press correspondent with the British headquarters in Egypt sends a story of a notable exploit by a British armored car detachment toward the end of January. The expedition, which covered four hundred miles out and back to the Siwah Oasis in the Libyan desert, within a week encountered 800 Senussi tribesmen and dispersed them, killing or wounding 200.

Sequa Pass, considered by the Senussi the only possible road into the oasis, had been mined, but the cars safely negotiated the rough-and-tumble passes over the high hills.

CANADIANS KNOW STRENGTH OF THE ENEMY

RAIDS ON FOE TRENCHES WITH LOSSES AT MINIMUM.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

TORONTO, March 30— Stewart Lyon cables the Canadian Press that several raids have taken place recently on the German trenches in front of the Canadians, with minimum losses. We have ascertained the enemy's exact infautry strength on this part of the front.

While the Germans were shelling a village behind the Canadian lines, a shell burst in a divisional bath room where a Canadian officer was having a bath. Expecting another, he made a hurried exit, carrying some of hic lothing, and jumped on a passing cart. His superfluous apparel preently fell on to the road and when he descended to recover it another German shell made a direct hit, wiping out driver, horses and cart.

GREAT FLOCK OF MINES IN THE NORTH CHANNEL

CUNARDER ORDUNA AND 27 OTHER SHIPS ESCAPE MINE FIELD.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

NEW YORK, March 30—The fact that the Cunard liner Orduna was stopped off the Irish coast by a British torpedo boaot destroyer and hurriedly ordered into the nearest port while the north channel was swept clear of a great flock of mines suddenly discovered there, was revealed by the ship's officers as the reason the vessel was three days overdue when she reached her American destination today.

Upon arrival in the Irish port of refuge, her officers said, they found twenty-seven other ships had already escaped the mine peril by putting in there, including one American ship. Two other vessels had fallen victims to mines, they learned, and had gone down.

Mine sweepers worked two days clearing the sea of the menace, destroying more than one hundred mines. Then all ships were ordered out at once, making their way through a lane of protecting torpedo boat destroyers and patrol boats until they reached safe waters.

During the present month at least 27 ships of over 5,000 tons each are known to have been lost, including two American vessels.

"In the northern part of the line violent bombardment by the enemy broke out yesterday afternoon, but it was silenced by a tremendous counter fire. Similar outbursts of trench mortars in the Ypres salient were smothered in the same way."

NO HEAVY FIGHTING ON FRENCH FRONT.

PARIS, March 30. — The heavy fighting on the French front since the beginning of the German withdrawal has come to an end for the time being. PETERBOROUGH, FRIDAY, MARCH 30, 1917

THE PASSING OF T. A. S. HAY.

THE RECORD OF the life of the late T. A. S. Hay is a history of the city for sixty-seven years, closely as it was woven with all municipal interests, social and moral reform. Mr. Hay leaves behind him an example that stands out as a shining light to guide all those who come after him. It was impossible for him to regard himself except as a part of the community for which he did so much and for which he made so many sacrifices. In all the finer arts he took a prominent part and as a public servant his fidelity and usefulness were above criticism.

The late Mr. Hay may not have achieved wealth but his native city is the richer today because of his life.

MR. GORDON'S SETBACKS.

MR. G. N. GORDON, member of the School Board and City Solicitor, it now seems settled at last has been, as The Review and others have held from the beginning, been holding office too extensively. When he was elected two years ago the question was then raised but none of his colleagues on the Board cared to bring the matter to an issue lest the act might be regarded as spite work by the public, among whom, it must be admitted, Mr. Gordon has a host of admirers. Dr. Pyne, the Minister of Education, was asked recently to pass on the matter. A hypothetical case was laid before him. The situation in Peterborough was clearly stated, although no names were mentioned and no reference was in any way made to politics.

The Minister's reply was brief, to the point, and, best of all, prompt. He simply quoted the section of the statute which applies to this case and ruled that as Mr. Gordon was already City Solicitor, an official of the Council, he could not legally hold the other position. It is altogether likely that in this decision Dr. Pyne has the support of the Attorney-General.

Mr. Gordon is not averse to a fight. No one who knows him believes that he will resign without at least a show of resistance. Some definite action must be taken in order to oust him from his second and non-salaried office and the question arises, who is to make the move? His colleagues, it seems, are averse as ever to do anything that is likely to be misinterpreted whatever may be the relations between Mr. Gordon and other members of the Board.

Some sage has said that the happiest woman, like the happiest nation, has neither history or ambition. The maxim applies with equal force to mankind in general. Mr. Gordon may have no startling history—certainly none that can be cited to his discredit—but he is not devoid of ambition and ambition in his case has brought about his undoing. Not satisfied with his dual office, he had his eyes set on bigger honors yet and his rivals in the field lay for him in ambush.

The Review has been accused of attacking Mr. Gordon in regard to this matter. This paper had a perfect right to voice the objection that was offered the principle of dual office holding and it now seems that, with a considerable portion of the public, The Review was right. Our timorous contemporary that trembles at even the shadow of a local man while it bravely yells defiance at some public characters at Ottawa or at some other equally safe distance, has accused us of assailing Mr. Gordon because of his prospects for the Federal nomination. It does not, however, concern The Review as to whom the Liberals may decide to select as a victim.

The public were entitled to know whether or not Mr. Gordon was a legal member of the great spending and really the most important Board in the city. That information has come to them from a disinterested source and the decision is one any appeal from which is likely to prove so much time and energy wasted.

THE MARCH OF DEMOCRACY.

OVER IN ENGLAND the war is already bearing fruit in the Imperial Parliament and the common people are being recognized and rewarded for their devotion to the cause through the darkest period of the Empire's history. The controlling spirit in the program of progress may be Lloyd George, but it is apparent that he has the hearty support of his colleagues. It was ex-Premier Asquith who sponsored the radical reforms that have been introduced into Parliament with every prospect of final adoption. The right of the franchise is to be extended among the people.

There has been a marked change in the views of public men since the war broke out. Women, it is evident, are to get the franchise, on the same terms, too, as men, for nothing short of this condition would satisfy the suffragists. Six months' residence or the occupation of business premises in a constituency is to be the only qualification for voting. Parliamentary seats are to be redistributed so as to secure a more equitable representation. All elections are to be held on the same day and this means one vote for one man and an end to the [illegible] of excitement as soon as possible.

Another radical measure is that which provides for proportionate representation in large urban centres. When this system prevails it will no longer be possible to deprive of a voice in public affairs a large percentage of the residents of a city by the return of members who belong to one political party. This change has been proposed in Canada but has met with little favor owing to the fact that elected members are disposed to accept as perfect any system that has placed them in places of trust.

It is evident that it is not the intention of the Government at London to consume years of valuable time, such as have been spent on the Home Rule debate, but a motion has already been made to give these recommendations immediate effect. The House of Lords can, and probably will, veto some or all of the proposed reforms, but all they can really do is to delay their final adoption. The measures will automatically become law without the approval of the Lords if adopted at three sessions of Parliament.

It is plain that domestic affairs are not to be entirely neglected, even if the Empire is at war. That excuse for procrastination and inactivity so often pleaded in Canada finds no favor among the statesmen of England. The Empire, we all devoutly believe, is to remain when the last shot has been fired. Then why should all effort, all progress be abandoned, even in the face of the supreme duty?

For example, if the British Parliament can, under present conditions, take up such far-reaching propositions as the above, war or no war, our own Administration at Ottawa should not hesitate in the matter of completing the Trent Canal with all reasonable expedition. Neither should the war be pleaded as an excuse by the city for doing nothing in the matter of a high level bridge or any other improvement for which there is a crying demand.

GERMANY AND RUSSIA.

GERMANY is reported as again making Russia an offer of separate terms of peace. The story is not improbable as in his present straits the Kaiser is likely to do anything to mend his fortunes. He attempted to bribe Poland with an offer of freedom and autonomy and it is likely that he may offer Constantinople to the new republic on condition that the emancipated Slavs lay down their arms.

It is unthinkable, however, that the new Russian Government would consent to an agreement that would perpetuate the militarism of Germany. The effectual crushing of the latter power is of as much or more moment to the Russians as it is to any country in the world. If the Republic broke faith with her Allies now she would not only forfeit their active co-operation for all time, but would also lose that moral support which is essential to make the new form of government stable. Russia, by accepting separate terms of peace, would fall in the estimation of every civilized power on earth. The people would find, too, the same old quarrel with the Teutons on their hands unless the object for which the Allies are fighting is attained.

The revolution in Russia has introduced a new element into the conflict. It really means the end of autocracy. England and France are already discussing the bearing it will have upon arrangements for peace and that one of the conditions exacted from the vanquished must be that nothing like an autocratic form of Government shall be suffered to remain.

China now, a Republic, has entered the war; the United States is almost certain to come in and Russia has become a democracy. The struggle will end up in a conflict between democracy and autocracy and the world is likely to be placed upon a permanent democratic basis. When this has been achieved permanent peace can be assured by a federation of democracies all of which have been purged of the spirit of militarism.

LOCAL HISTORY OF PENNY BANKS

In the year 1899 Dr. Burnham introduced the matter of the establishment of savings banks in connection with the Public Schools and moved that the matter be referred to a special committee composed of the following: Messrs. W. H. Hill, W. B Bamford, J. J. McBain, W. G Ferguson and Dr Burnham.

The committee reported as follows in June, 1899: A special committee appointed at the last meeting of the board to consider the advisability of establishing a system of savings banks in connection with the Public Schools, beg leave to report. That the committee have carefully investigated the matter, including the evidence furnished by reports of the success of the system in other places where it has been adopted and in many in which it has been enforced for a number of years. This success is represented by the formation of habits of thrift and saving at the impressionable period of child life and influence in a most beneficial way the citizenship of the province. Instances are frequent in which the savings of a child and children have come to the rescue of the family when the bread winner has been prostrated by illness or out of work.

Under the system properly administered, there is no rivalry between children of the school because one has no means of knowing the amount to the credit of another unless voluntarily disclosed. The importunities by children of parents for money for deposit is within the control of the parents themselves. The intention of the system is to provide a safe depositing for the earnings of children and for the trifling sums often given by parents to spend on childish luxuries. The encroachment on school time is very limited, being only ten or fifteen minutes per week and the cost of operating the system is merely nominal, stationery being the chief item. Your committee would therefore recommend that the system of savings banks be introduced into the Public Schools in September 1 next, and that this committee, together with the finance committee, be empowered to make the necessary arrangements for giving these recommendations effect.

(Sgd.) Dr. Geo. Burnham,
Chairman

The report was adopted.

The committee reported as follows in September, 1899:— "Your committee having further considered the details in connection with the introduction of savings banks in the Public Schools beg to report that the committee met and decided that all monies should be paid by the scholars to the teachers—the teacher to forward the same to the headmaster of each school, and by them to the inspector. The inspector to deposit with the secretary-treasurer, who will deposit the money to the credit of the board, such money to be withdrawn on the signature of the inspector, or chairman of the finance committee and the secretary-treasurer of the board.

When a pupil has to his credit the sum of one dollar he shall have an individual account opened in the savings bank with interest at 3 1-2 per cent. per annum, payable half-yearly.

And your committee recommend that the savings bank regulations be as follows:

Deposits will be received every Monday only, at the morning session, by the teacher of each room.

The amount will be delivered to the principal, and by him to the inspector, to be handed to the secretary-treasurer, who will deposit in one of the banks, in the name of each depositor.

One cent or upwards will be received by the teacher. When a pupil has a deposit of two dollars or more a bank book will be given, free of charge, from the bank.

Deposits of one dollar or more will bear interest at 3 1 2 per cent per annum.

The bank books of the pupils are kept by the principal or teacher as long as they attend school. If they leave the school or at vacation the book will be given to them. To withdraw their money they will require the presence of their father or mother and the signature of the principal or teacher. During the summer vacation of the school, deposits may be made or money withdrawn on Mondays from the bank direct, the manager acting during that time for the teacher; but if the applicant is unknown to the manager he must be identified before receiving the money."

Owing to the fact that your committee was unable to introduce the system into the schools at the reopening for the fall term we intend to do so as soon as the necessary arrangements can be made.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

Geo. Burnham,
Chairman.

Moved by Dr. Burnham and seconded by Mr. McBain, that the report be adopted.

Moved in amendment by Mr. Hartley, seconded by Mr. Wrighton, that the report be allowed to stand in abeyance until Jan. 1 next.

The amendment caried on division.

No further action was taken in this connection.

"Absolutely," replied Steady.

"The truth of the matter is, it's the first bill I've ever owed—idea being to find out the system of an up to date collection agency for the benefit of my son, who is about to start a collection bureau on his own account. EDITOR'S MAIL

Editor Review: There is so much talk, and rightly so, about saving papers, rubbers, rags, etc. Could you or any of your lady readers inform me if there is any place I could sell tin cans, such as coffee, cocoa, and syrup. I have saved them all winter and they are as good as new, and it seems too bad to throw them in the garbage.

Being a stranger in this city I would be most grateful to you for any information.

MARY ANN.

It is only a short time since the Government issued an appeal to the public to save there old tin cans in the interests of the tin industry and the public generally. There should be no difficulty in finding sale for such articles.

TURNING THE OTHER CHEEK

Editor Review: Newspapers, like children and adults, should never let their angry passions rise and when smitten on one cheek should turn the other to the smiter. That, I believe, is the Scriptural injunction.

PEACEMAKER.

If a man smite thee on one cheek turn to him the other also. The newspaper, like the individual, has only two sides to the countenance. When one of these is struck and the other has been submitted to the same punishment, the letter of the Divine precept has been fulfilled. If any attempt is made to continue the punishment something in the way of reprisal is surely permissible. —Ed. Review.

If you are suffering from dyspepsia, indigestion or sour stomach you should try a mixture of Salon Pepsin and Iridin.

This is said to be the formula of Dr. Banta's famous prescription which gave him a world-wide reputation.

These powders are sold in Peterborough at Lynch's Drug Store, 168 Hunter Street.

OUR OWN YELLOW PERIL

YOUNG CANADIANS CROSS LINE TO ESCAPE ARMY SERVICE.

Reports Regarding Figures Have Been Secured From Various Border Points, and They All Go to Show That Our Undesirable Citizens Are Leaving to Find a More Congenial Country.

ARE young Canadians, eligible for military enlistment or for other employment under the requirements of the National Service program making tracks for the United States? Emigration figures from such border points as Niagara Falls, Windsor, Sarnia, and the Soo would make it look that way.

The Windsor correspondent of The Toronto Telegram says: "Attracted by high wages, especially in Detroit automobile factories, and actuated in part by desire for relief from persistent recruiting appeals, great numbers of Canadians have crossed here to take up residence on the other side of the boundary. Figures compiled by the United States Immigration Department for 1916 show that at least 3,000 more Canadian residents were admitted to the United States to take up their residence there during the preceding year. The total number who came [illegible] residences through the Detroit port is 17,631 to December 31st last, the figures being far ahead of any year in the history of the department, it is reported.

"Officials on both sides of the river have noted the exodus from Canada, and attribute a large part of it to fear of conscription. In fact, immigration men on the Detroit side find amusement in chaffing men of military age who apply for admission to the States.

"'What are you coming over here for?' 'Are you afraid of conscription in Canada?' are stock questions asked of new-comers. Usually an evasive answer is given. Canadian 'skedaddlers' are made the butt of ridicule, and treated with contempt by friends and associates on both sides of the line."

From Sarnia comes the following, "American immigration officials at the boundary here declare that there has been a very decided increase in the number of emigrants going into the United States from Canada, and also state that in a great number of cases this increase consists of young men of military age, who declared that they are going to American cities to secure work, and that if successful they will not return to Canada. During the past two weeks the number of entries at the Port Huron immigration office totalled 1,500, which is the largest total ever before reached in the history of that office. A large part of these people were [illegible], and the number going [illegible] has doubled. [illegible] this large sums of money which they are making by working in local munitions plants. At present no effort is being made to stop these [illegible] enemies from going out of the country, and only if they return will they be punished."

Port Huron, Mich., reports: "That Canadian young men are endeavoring to avoid military service by emigrating to the United States is plainly evident from the records of the Immigration Officer at Port Huron, Mich. For the month of December 1,041 aliens were passed through the Immigration Department at this point, and, according to the statement of an immigration official, 50 per cent. of them were young Canadians. None was asked if he was endeavoring to avoid military service, but some were frank enough to state that they wanted to go to work in the United States so that they could not be called upon if conscription went into effect in Canada. The majority of the young Canadians are heading for the west."

A Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., correspondent wires: "There has been a tremendous increase of immigration of young men from 21 to 25 years old into this country from Canada during the last three months, according to Thomas J. Ross, inspector in charge of the local immigration office. Inspector Ross said the total number coming into the United States during October, November, and December was 1,292, an increase of 575 over the same period last year. Half were Canadian-born. Mr. Ross said:

"'It is a fact that there has been a noticeable increase in immigration of young men from Canada to this country, especially in the last three months. They give various reasons, including lack of work, for leaving. Others say they are afraid of conscription. Some are American-born, who have lived in Canada most of their lives and fear they will be considered eligible in case of conscription. This immigration has come in spells, one of which we are having now. Yesterday thirty young men came into this country bound for large cities further south.'"

Prince Rupert Drydock.

The drydock at Prince Rupert, on the Canadian Pacific coast, part of the equipment of the Grand Trunk Pacific system, and completed under the supervision of American engineers at a cost of $2,500,000, has been in use since the first of October, and is being successfully used by the big transports of the Pacific Steam Navigation Company and other Pacific lines.

Snow Toys.

Toy molds to enable children to make building blocks from snow have been invented by a German.

Overheated Air.

A rise of temperature in the surrounding air diminishes the amount of oxygen consumed and the amount of dioxide discharged. A fall of temperature has the opposite effect. In addition, the overheated air forms a hot jacket around the body which prevents the radiation of heat necessary to keep the body in a healthy condition. With a sedentary occupation a temperature of from 64 to 70 should be maintained for comfort and health.

ABOUT SAUSAGE

A Discourse on This Appetizer of Cold Weather Menus.

IS A FLAVORER OF SOUPS.

How to Pick Your Meats and Season Them So You May Have the Real Homemade Article—A Diet For Adults Only.

In our many discussions of meat and meat prices we hear little mention of the large group of meats, either fresh or smoked, which come under the head of sausage. Yet the consumption of these products runs up into the millions of pounds annually and is affected quite directly by the prices of other meats.

All sausage stuffed into casings when examined is found to be a chopped mixture of beef or pork, or both, salted or pickled under various processes, combined with spices and later smoked, with the exception of the so called "fresh sausage," which is unsmoked. Many housekeepers have a reasonable fear of sausage meat, and it is true that formerly and even now in the lower grades a great deal of adulteration is practiced by adding flour, rice, cornmeal or inferior trimmings to increase bulk. But sausage made by a reputable firm or bought of a reliable dealer offers in condensed form a flavorful and quite nutritious food for occasional use.

The common varieties when analyzed are found to contain about 14 to 18 per cent of protein (meat) and 20 per cent or more of fat. In using them, therefore, we should combine them in a meal with a quantity of starch, bread, potatoes, beans, rice, etc. Although most sausage is cured or smoked and some kinds eaten without further cooking, it is best to err on the side of safety and long cooking, as trichinae most frequently infect pork and pork products.

Sausage is a meat which should be strictly confined to adult use. No kind should ever be given to children, and, while the poorer classes have "sausage babies" frequently, the babies just as frequently never grow up. The casing, which is really a cleansed intestine, into which the meat is stuffed, should never be eaten, as it is too indigestible.

The fresh sausage meat or the same preparation sold in links, if fresh and of high quality, makes a good luncheon or supper dish. Sausages and fried cakes, no matter how apparently alluring on the bill of fare, are a dietetic sin of which no breakfaster should be guilty. The wise housewife can pick out her own piece of pork and other meat and have it chopped before her very eyes and season it herself with sage, thyme and freshly ground pepper. Several firms have made national reputations by supplying consumers with an absolutely pure, tasty sausage product, which shows that more consumers would use it if they were unceasingly convinced of its innocence.

One of the best methods of using sausage is as a flavorer. It thus economically gives a desirable meat flavor, but little actual bulk need be consumed. No one who has ever eaten bean soup with frankfurters, boiled hominy and fried beef sausage or a lentil puree with wienerwurst will deny the appetizing flavor or wisdom of the dish. The housewife who is seeking meat at an economical price can learn to use sausage to give the meat flavor without the meat cost.

ALMOST THOU PERSUADEST ME TO BECOME A CITIZEN

capacity of a quarter of a century ago to a position which imposed upon him the pleasant duty of introducing the head of that company to a Peterborough audience. The C.G.E. will combtinue to advertise the city all over the world. The people of Peterborough have learned to esteem Mr. E. G. Patterson, the resident head of the company, and have always found him ready to help in all good works. Electricity is still largely undeveloped but Senator Nicholls and his associates are just the men to bring out everything that is in it.

Senator Nicholl's Address

"The cordiality of your reception is almost overwhelming," said Senator Nicholls after the storm of applause which greeted his rising had subsided. "I thank you heartily and the occasion will always live in my memory. After listening to you, Mr. Chairman, dwell on the advantages of Peterborough as a place of residence let me say to you that almost thou persuaded me to become a citizen.

"I have always taken a great interest in this city and every time I possibly could I have given Peterborough the preference. This is almost the anniversary of the silver wedding of the C.G.E. and Peterborough, for it will be just twenty-five years next September since the company decided to locate here. We have lived together a quarter of a century in peace and quietness and both sides may reasonably be proud of the record."

The Senator alludued to the growth of the local plant. It was not large when first opened but when he walked through the buildings yesterday afternoon he was amazed at their extent and even then the superintendent asked for further extensions. After the war it is hard to say what may be done in the way of enlarging the works. In the meantime, it is hard to utilize all the outfit owing to the congested labor market. He was proud of the welcome that had been given him and both in business and in the Senate would strive to justify the good opinion of the citizens of Peterborough.

"I am proud of being a British subject," continued the Senator, with a reference to Capt. Burnham's address, "but I am prouder still of being a Canadian. We have a greater territory to control and develop than the Republic to the South of us, more than one-third of the territory of the entire British Empire. We have kept in step withe the powerful nation across the border, in forms of Government, federal or municipal, in railways, canals and all utilities, and have done more than any other nation of small population in the world has done.

"If three months before the war a speaker at a gathering like this had said that it was possible to raise, equip and maintain an army of 400,000 men in a comparatively short time the statement would have been regarded as foolish. This has been done and we will go still further unless I mistake the manhood of Canada.

"Before the war Canada borrowed between three and four million dollars a year from England. Now she has become a lender instead of a borrower and is able to raise three hundred and fifty millions for Imperia purposes. In time the centre of the Empire will be right here in Canada.

"In Quebec they have territorial division for representation in the Senate. In Ontario the Senators are supposed to represent the entire province but I shall be proud to be known by courtesy as the Senator from Peterborough. I shall be proud to represent a city known all over the country for its energy and enterprise. It is a city well managed and one that always provides for the comforts of the community. After listening to the speeches here tonight I have decided that the citizens could not have exercised better sense than they have in the selection of their municipal and parliamentary representatives, and—spare by blushes—their Senatorial representative.

"I have worked hard all my life. But I cannot be given any higher reward than this cordial reception by people among whom I have worked. It is equivalent to saying, 'Well done, good and faithful servant.'"

After concluding the splendid repast prepared by Mine Host Colson, Mayor Duffus, the chairman, called on those present to rise and drink to the toast of The King, which was responded to heartily by the singing of the National Anthem.

Ald. G. H. Duncan, one of the vice-chairmen, called upon Mr. G. A. Gillespie, M.L.A., to propose the toast to the British Empire and her Allies. The West Peterborough representative felt honored in being asked to propose the most important toast of the evening. It was wonderful to think of what the British Empire stands for and what it really means to belong to her. The speaker, after referring to the great struggle in which Great Britain and her Allies were engaged in, proposed the toast and coupled with it the name of Capt. J. H. Burnham, M.P., whom he thought exceptionally well fitted to respond to it.

Capt Burnham, M.P.

Capt. J. H. Burnham, in rising to respond to the toast, which had been received with great enthusiasm, was warmly applauded He stated that the subject was so tremendous that one might be excused in feeling absolutely abashed in replying to it. He first as a member of parliament expressed to Senator Nicholls his congratulations on being appointed to the Senate and he also congratulated Canada on his selection. Reference was made to the necessity of carefully selecting men of mature experience and level heads in order that the best type of men would be available to deal with Canada's future. Canada's name was now before the whole world as a credit to the British Empire and the whole galaxy of nations. Her part in the great war had, he was proud to say, put our neighbor to the south to shame. Even the American papers were referring to the high calibre of Canada. A special article in the Chicago Tribune was referred to. The speaker was proud to be able to say that Canada and not the American people had brought a reputation for courage and strength to this continent.

Capt. Burnham taunted the U.S. with seeing Belgium slaughtered and the world in ruins before getting started. There had been too much delay in acting for the salvation of Belgium and the liberty of the world. They would not get credit for coming in when victory was about won.

No Longer Colonials

Two years ago Canada was only classed as a colony but a year ago last January the great Nationalisation Act came into force whereby British subjects were recognised as British subjects the world over. Previously Canadians in trouble in European countries could not call on a British consul by right, only as a privilege. Now Canada was taken in as part of the Empire and entitled to all the protection that the Empire afforded. King George in taking the oath of allegiance had taken the oath as King of the United Kingdom and British Dominions across the seas.

The part Canadian boys had taken in the great war was dwelt on and now the Empire was looking to Canada for her food supply following the crop failure in Argentine, Australia and at home. We must show that we have the true fibre, prepared in the future as in the past to respond to every demand made upon us, thereby assisting in holding the Hun down and holding for the world the freedom of land and sea.

"Canada."

Vice-Chairman Duncan next called on Mr. H. R. H. Kenner to propose the toast of "Canada" which he did in a cleverly prepared paper. The history of Canada was covered in three divisions, that of French rule, the second of British rule, and the third period of Confederation, in which we were now living. He referred to the natural advantages and beauties of Canada, and made a strong appeal for the day of Imperial federation. In proposing the toast "Canada" the name of His Honor Judge Huycke was coupled with it.

Judge Huycke, in responding, congratulated the Mayor and his colleagues on making Senator Nicholls the guest of the evening in honor of his recent appointment. It gave the citizens a chance to see and hear a man who should be better known here. He hoped that Senator Nicholls would remove the "almost" and become "altogether" a citizen of the city. Reference was made to this being the silver wedding of the C. G. E. and Peterborough. The speaker hoped the friendly bonds which united them would be made stronger. Every citizen was proud of the Electric Company and was glad to welcome the chief generator who helped things along.

Canada was a heritage that one might be proud of, and we were all looking forward to a greater Canada, and, after briefly referring to Canada's part in the war he was tempted to say, "Watchman, what of the night?" The confederation which is now dreamt of was something that had never been thought of before. The speaker did not wish for independence or separation. Some people talk imperially and act provincially. Canada had a hard task to face in view of the feeling in other dominions that Canada should have done more in the war than has been done, and it was related how a prominent statesman of India had shunned Canada because of wrongs done his people of India.

Judge Huycke believed that these difficulties would be overcome and a greater Canada and a world empire for the freedom of its subjects and the protection of the poor would result. "In this we will look forward that not the least factor will be our own beloved Canada with her fertile fields and beautiful villages."

"A Greater Peterborough."

Ald. A. H. Stratton, in proposing the toast "A Greater Peterborough," congratulated Senator Nicholls on his selection to be a member of the red chamber at Ottawa. Peterborough was proud that a chieftain of one of her industries had been so honored, and he hoped to see other aspirants from this district associated with him in the senate chamber at Ottawa. A short resume of the history of the C. G. E. from the time of the old Edison Company to the present was given, and not a little praise given Superintendent Patterson for the part he has played in making the C. G. E. so successful. Messrs. Magee and Dobie and others were also mentioned. The advantages of Peterborough from a manufacturing standpoint and how it got the name "Electric City" were related. Messrs. Ivor Brock, of the Brinton Carpet Co., J. J. Hartley, president of the Trades and Labor Council, and T. F. Matthews, of the Matthews-Blackwell Co., were asked to respond to the toast of "Greater Peterborough."

"Some" Vision.

Mr. Brock, in rising to respond, told of a dream he had thought of with July, 1927, as the date. There were three morning papers on this date, each costing one cent. On the front page of one which he had bought was the address of Hon. G. A. Gilelspie, Minister of Agriculture, who was explaining to the farmers the high interest they were getting on investments. The date mentioned was the tenth anniversary of the unconditional surrender of the Germans in the great war. During his walk he saw Peterborough's technical school, which had done much to make Peterborough famous as a manufacturing centre. Then there was the station of the Peterborough sub-electric radial, giving train service in three directions—one was to the Kawartha Health Sanatorium, gotten up by the physicians, with Dr. Neal as superintendent. The new city square was visible, and comment made on the fact that the city was governed by a commission. There was a union station with three railways, a particularly fine industry, "Hamilton's Horseless Harvester." One of the features was a sign "Ride a Duffus car." Inquiry showed that it was made by Mayor Duffus, who had become tired of selling other people's cars. Mr. Duffus also found out that Mr. Duffus had been re-elected Mayor for favoring the abolition of the market fees. The busy water front from the Quaker Oats to the beautiful park located on Burnham's Point, where swimming baths were installed by Ald. Edgar Worth, who had got sick of waiting for the City Council to take action. After the dreamer had passed the residence of Sir Frederic Nicholls, who was the head of a number of local industries employing 15,000 hands, he woke up. The unique address was warmly applauded.

No Strikes Here.

Mr. J. J. Hartley said it was a

FINE IMPOSED FOR CONTEMPT OF THE COURT

CLARENCE TAYLOR SPOKE TO JURYMAN IN TRIAL AT NORWOOD.

VERDICT FOR $20.

At Norwood yesterday an interesting case was tried of Charles Vandeburg vs. Fred Taylor and his son Clarence Taylor, for assault. The plaintiff claimed against the defendant $60 for damages and Clarence Taylor claimed against the plaintiff $25 by counter-claim, for assault. The issues were tried before Judge Huycke and a jury. G. N. Gordon appeared for Mr. Vandeburg and Mr. F. D. Kerr appeared for Clarence Taylor and Fred Taylor. A verdict was brought in by the jury for $20 and costs in favor of Mr. Vandeburg against Fred Taylor while the counter-claim of Clarence Taylor was dismissed.

Clarence Taylor during the course of the trial, during an intermission, spoke to one of the jurymen who was sitting near him, and for this he was fined by the judge for contempt. This is said to be the first fine that has been imposed in this county for this offence.

APPLICATION TO RAISE PHONE RATES GRANTED

The Ontario Railway Board, consisting of Messrs. D. M. McIntyre, K.C., chairman, A. B. Ingram, F. Dagger, and W. C. Coos, held a meeting of the board in the County Council Chamber this afternoon and granted Dr. A. C. Beatty's application to increase his telephone rates at Garden Hill for $10 to $12 a year.

Dr. Beatty, who was present on his own behalf, explained to the board that there were 135 telephones on the exchange, of which 124 were paid. The system had been in operation since 1895 and with the renewals from time to time represented an outlay of $4,700 without allowing for labor, depreciation or interest. There were 53 miles of pole circuit altogether. The revenue last year was $1240 and the expenses $1350. Later the revenue was increased $240 by tolls for long distance calls.

The only objector to the increased rate was a man named Campbell, who, Dr. Beatty said, was sore because of an agitation to have the station name Campbellcroft changed back to Garden Hill.

Chairman McIntyre, in giving judgment favorable to the application, told Dr. Beatty that he hoped to hear that the service would be improved. The increased rate goes into effect at the expiration of present contracts.

"Not in the least," replied the applicant.

"Does your business make it necessary for you to be without sleep at night?"

"No, sir."

"Never, sir."

"Is your business such as to render you liable to injury from carriages or runaway horses?"

HENRY HOPE CO. WILL CULTIVATE VACANT LAND

The committee of the Peterborough Garden Movement, if such is to be the name, has its work cut out for it, unless signs fail. The preparatory work has to be handled well and quickly. It will devolve on the committee, as soon as possible after Tuesday night next, to come together and do some things. For instance, from the city clerk's office have been sent out over seventy letters to owners of lots and properties seemingly available for use and cultivation. So far there has been response in only eight cases. That is hardly ten per cent. Does this lack of assent indicate an unwillingness to place the ground at disposal for use; or is it a careless apathy that puts off writing even a post card saying that the lot or lots may be used? The only way it to go and see. That will be the joyous duty of the committee.

Here is a running comment on what has been learned:

The Henry Hope Co. will cultivate the vacant lands of the factory site. Good.

J. Scruter's lot on Lansdowne St. has been rented.

H. Cruickshank offers lot 14, plan 120, on Lansdowne St. Offer fyled for use and selection.

Mr. Harry Rush offers one lot on Conger street.

A lot offered by Mrs. Skilleter on Braidwood avenue has been taken by two women, who will get after feminine directed agriculture.

A call from J. Kennett for a half-acre, fairly convenient to where he lives on Boswel avenue.

J. J. Devlin offers a lot on Sophia street and part of a lot on Wolsley street. Good. First blood for the East Ward.

John Boorman, McDonnel street, offers a lot on Woodbine avenue. Taken into stock, with thanks.

Harry Evans, being busy with digging and other work for the city, which we wish him to be, offers two lots on Charles street.

W. H. Bradburn offers two lots on Prince street. These are good places for South Ward residents.

Half an acre of the D. W. Dumble five acres up about the Chemong railway right-of-way is wanted by Mrs. Jarvis of Conger street.

In all the property has been only touched as a fringe. Better results should be had, and it is up to the committee to get very and earnestly busy.

ITALIANS HOLD FIRM

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

ROME, March 30 — Yesterday there was desultory artillery fire along the entire front, says todays War Office statement. "It was more than ordinarily lively in the Lagarina Valley and on the Carso. After violent artillery preparations an enemy detachment attempted to storm our position on Monte Fal. It was repulsed and almost annihilated by our machine gun fire. Successive assaults were likewise unsuccessful. The enemy suffered severe losses. We took some prisoners.

SUBORDINATE EVERYTHING TO WAGE WAR

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, March 30.—A Reuter despatch quotes Bethmann-Hollweg in his speech yesterday in the Reichstag as saying in discussing internal politics: Although I would like it best if we could make a reform in the franchise tomorrow, I doubt whether the moment when we are concentrating all our strength in fighting the enemy is the right one for the inaugurating of a new electoral law. We must subordinate everything to bring the war to a successful conclusion."

A BRAVE OLD WARRIOR

“FOGHORN” M'DONALD OF THE CANADIAN FIGHTING FORCES

Picturesque Character Who Enlisted at the Age of 53—He Has Lived in Every Part of the Dominion, and is Never So Happy As When Taking Part in a Big Scrap.

“FOGHORN” McDonald admits he's as “Scotch as oatmeal,” but what he does not have to admit is that he is beyond doubt the best known man in the wonderful big army Canada has sent over to fight for England, asserts a writer in The London Times. The rawest rookie in the rearmost ranks of the Dominion forces proclaims it on the fighting line and looks up to this world-wandering scion of the Clan McDonald as a shining example of what a lowly “buck” can do in trying times like these.

For “Foghorn” came over as a private himself just two short years ago. Some of his home folks told him he was a “darned old fool” to enlist at 53. But “Foghorn” had been a miner all his days. He had hit the western trail from sunbaked Batopilas in the wilds of Mexico, to the snow-shrouded valleys of the Yukon, and he knew what perseverance and pluck and courage and sacrifice could do.

He knew he would “make the grade” and so did a great crowd of his friends who gathered a day or two ago to “wet” that new third stripe and crown in the cuffs of his khaki army jacket. He was back from the front to receive this latest promotion, and he was toasted a major of his Majesty's forces.

“Foghorn” was born Neil Roderick McDonald, but there are comparatively few who know him by that distinguished name. It's just plain “Foghorn” nowadays from one end of the trenches to the other and one earful of that low, rumbling, window-shattering, rock-shivering voice explodes all possible doubt as to the derivation of the nickname.

There are plenty of Germans who know “Foghorn,” too. In the days of the deathly deadlock, when trenches crept closer and closer together, he was one of those who burrowed beneath the earth and set off great mines under the enemy. He had not been a mining engineer in vain. Often his voice would go booming across “No Man's Land” hurling picturesque invective at the Germans.

Not to know “Foghorn” McDonald is to miss one of the big human personalities of the war. It is not difficult to realize what a tower of strength he is to the soldiers at the front.

“He is the sort of an officer whose men would follow to the gates of hell itself and walk in laughing,” said Major “Eddie” Holland, a long-time friends, and a “V. C.” of the South African war.

“And speaking of hell,” he added, “there may or may not be something in the fact that 'Foghorn' belongs to the 'Black Devils.'”

That is the name the Germans have given the Eighth battalion, Canadian infantry, and the battalion has adopted as its ensignia a small black imp dancing in glee. They were delighted with the appellation, and are living up to it, according to all reports from the Somme.

It has been said of “Foghorn” that “he's not afraid of any man—and very few women.” His home is in the great west. He has lived much in the United States and almost every province in Canada can claim him as her own. His heart is as big as the world in which he has lived; and he has a way of calling a superior officer “Bill,” or “Jim” or “George,” and referring to a corporal as a “brother officer” that is quite baffling to the Englishman's ideas of discipline. Someone spoke to “Fog” about it.

“Well, sir,” he explained, “it's a man's war, by God, sir, and I respect every mother's son who's out there doing his bit. I was a full-fledged 'buck' myself once, and I know what they have to go through.”

“Foghorn” has been serving for some time as transport officer of the “Black Devils” and has been riding about the front lines on what he describes himself as “a mighty fine hoss.” Where he got the horse he will not tell you. “It wouldn't be passed by the censor,” he says.

“One night,” he said, “we were taking some loads of munitions away up in front. It was blacker than the ace of spades and if you struck a match you'd get your eye shot out. But in the midst of all this blackness and the shelling we were getting, I heard one of my men say to his partner: 'Keep your eye out for a good hoss, Bill; this ought to be a good night to get one.'”

A day or two ago a staff colonel, fresh from Canada, walked into the Savoy “Club.”

“Hellow 'Foghorn,'” he called out; “I heard you a couple of blocks down the street and came in to see you. Do you remember me?”

“Remember you?” repeated “Fog,” “why bless your brass-hatted old soul, I'd know your hide in a tan-yard.”

A “brass hat” is the army name for all staff officers, and it comes, of course, from the abundance of gold braid they wear on their caps.

Someone asked how things were going at the front.

“Going?” said “Fog”; “why the boys are getting so gay out there one of our battalions came prancing up to the front line trenches the other day with a brass band playing for all it was worth. They were right where you could get killed any minute, too, and even my old boss thought they were crazy.

“Guess I'll be getting back to the front soon myself,” he concluded with a sigh; “this quiet life of London is getting on my nerves.”

Men Who Have Control Of Destinies of France In the New War Cabinet

IT may not be altogether easy to the outsider to realize what exactly has been effected in the process of reconstitution which marked the last days of 1916 in the French Cabinet. The most essential point in the reform, in fact the crux of the whole matter, lies in an alteration of the balance of power between the French Government, represented by the War Office, and the Grand Quartier General; an alteration which even the previous creation of a war committee had failed to accomplish. It had always been understood in France, before August, 1914, that in the eventuality of a war, plenary powers would be vested in the commander-in-chief while the Government and War Office would merely act as his supports in the task of bringing the war to a rapid conclusion. This theory of a prompt ending of hostilities had always been made the basis of the French ideas of government organization in the event of war. That it should have worked as well as it did during the first period of the present conflict is probably due to the French facility for adaptation, as well as to the ability of the men in command at the front. The system, however, had great disadvantages; it created two entirely separate authorities in the country, the Government and the Grand Quartier General, which, while entirely friendly to each other, could not, from the very nature of things, cooperate to the extent which is proved to be absolutely necessary in a great war.

M. ALBERT THOMAS.

Economically and diplomatically, Paris was the centre of direction, while military affairs were entirely in the hands of the Grand Quartier General. The War Office in Paris was no longer the point of contact of Government and the military chiefs, and the result was a division in the viewpoint which daily proved more unsatisfactory.

The task, therefore, which lay before M. Briand, at the close of the secret committees of the Chamber and the Senate, was the redistribution of power between Cabinet, War Office, and the commander-in-chief. The starting point of the reform was the appointment of General Lyautey as Minister of War. This meant that the direction of the war reverted to the seat of the Government, while at the same time remaining in the hands of an eminently successful soldier. The War Committee, formed of five members of the Cabinet, continues its functions, but whatever decisions are arrived at of a military order it is General Lyautey's task and responsibility to carry them out. He is the one and only channel through which Government decisions will reach the commanders-in-chief on the various fronts, and it will also be through him that M. Albert Thomas, who from Undersecretary has been made Minister of Armaments, will receive communications from the Grand Quartier General.

This concentration of power has not been effected with regard to the Minister of War alone, it relates to every department. M. Albert Thomas, for instance, over and above the control of guns and shells which he had as Undersecretary, will now have the entire producing power of the country at his disposal, and will be responsible for providing the army and the Aviation Service with all the material requisite. In the initiation of schemes for the production of guns, M. Albert Thomas is taking on powers which were, before the reorganization, entirely in the hands of the commander-in-chief. He will use them subject to the final sanction of the Minister of War. Though, of course, the new balance of power has shorn the commander-in-chief of some of his privileges, he yet remains the entire master of the strategy on his particular front. In that respect General Nivelle will have exactly the same opportunities as General Joffre, and the record of General Lyautey in Morocco proves him to be perfectly capable of exercising undisputed authority as responsible head, while allowing perfect independence in tactical matters to the men whose part it is to lead the armies in the field.

CANADA'S PRODUCTION.

Figures for Past Year Show Strength of Dominion.

Canadians ought to consider themselves fortunate that, despite the big crop shortage of 1916, the farm output has a higher value than in 1915. The yield of wheat alone was about 220,000,000 bushels short of 1915, or about 45 per cent. less. Other grains were short. Pasturage was burned up by the dry, hot weather. Dairying was hampered. Feed became oppressively high. In fact, almost every drawback that could be expected heaped up trouble for the farmer, and yet the total of our output has a higher money value than in the abundant year preceding.

The cause of the extraordinary showing is to be found in the high prices brought about by a world crop shortage. Had Canada's crop losses been local, the blow would indeed have been heavy, but they coincided with shortages in the United States, in Argentina, and in Europe. Our field crops had a total value of about $850,000,000, and the products of the mine, forest, and fisheries brought up the total to about $1,250,000,000. If we add to that a manufacturing production estimated at about $2,000,000,000, it will be seen that the few millions of people in this country, deprived of 400,000 men in the army and navy, and of a large part of our usual foreign population, have been not unheedful of the call from Ottawa for “production, more production.” Indeed, if the crop output had been normal, we would have had a greater production per capita, probably, than any other nation in the world.

This matter of producing wealth from our rich natural resources is the life-blood of Canadian vitality, the foundation of Canadian ability to finance a fairly large part in the great war, and of our rapidly-altering world position. It is unfortunate that fear of conscription, needlessly arising out of the National Service card census, should be frightening United States citizens out of the West. They would not be liable for service even if it were decided, as a last resort, to compel military duty of certain classes. Canada wants them, as it wants all other producers, to stick to their work, for their own sake and that of the country. The splendid productive effort of Canadians ought to bear fullest fruit through thrift, and increased energy in enlarging output on permanent lines. If we keep persistently at it we shall build up resources and power that will see us through any post-bellum period of economic disturbance.

FROM WESTERN CANADA.

Former Mounted Police Officers Meet in London.

A little group of former Canadian North-West Mounted Police came together (in London a few weeks ago) in a brief reunion on the long trail of the war. Together they fought the merciless Arctic weather at the northernmost outposts of law and order. Before a hearth fire in Reggie Moreton's drawing room they traveled the old snow trails again. Moreton, known as “Dick” in the North-West, has now retired to private life and less strenuous work for his country. In his home at Kingston, a suburb, he holds open house for his old pals, drawn from odd corners of the globe by the magnet of the war.

Though the host wears spats and a high collar, he is the same Moreton who once held the Canadian tennis and amateur heavyweight boxing titles. He still illustrates his speech with American slang, learned as a soldier in Cuba and as a policeman in the Hudson Bay country.

“Lizzie” Jacques journeyed to London from a training camp to meet the others, but Sergeant-Major Billy (“Peggy”) Hope had spent his leave and returned to France before Jacques arrived. “Lizzie” is only his “service” name; he is really E. M. Jacques, a lieutenant in the Canadian-American Legion, and an ex-soldier of the 14th United States Infantry. Sergeant Harry Walker, 84th Canadian Battalion, was the other voice in the accidental round-up.

Walker left the force several years ago, and started to make his fortune with a farm of silver foxes. He caught a pair and caged them up in a fox run with wire running deep into the ground. With the little fox juniors in good health, he had a good business in hand.

One day he went into Dawson and learned that war had been declared. He never saw the foxes again, just turned them over to a friend, fortune, future, and all, to join up.

Hope and Moreton rode together back in 1900, “before they got electric lights and radiators in Dawson.”

“Hope was magistrate, mayor, and nurse among the Eskimos near Fullerton, Hudson Bay,” said Morton. “He was the farthest north tribunal, a week's ride from the nearest white settlement.”

Hope has been 18 months in France, and Walker has seen active service. Moreton is considerably over army age.

“Hope will never be hit,” Moreton said. “Not Peggy. He's the luckiest fellow on earth.”

Ontario Lumber Trade.

There has been a gradual improvement in the Ontario lumber trade during the past year due to the increased demand for building purposes, to war requirements, and to the improvement in the United States market. Operators, however, have been seriously handicapped by the lack of labor, and prices have not kept pace with the increased cost of production, which is estimated to be over twenty-five per cent. greater than in 1915. In the Georgian Bay district the cut was about normal, and the mills will be kept busy until well into the winter months. The Canadian Northern Sudbury-Port Arthur line has opened up large forest areas for future operations, and it is estimated that over thirty camps will be in operation in this new district during the coming winter.

Operations in the Ottawa Valley were less extensive than usual, according to the financial review of the Canadian Bank of Commerce, the cut being some 375,000,000 feet as against a cut in normal years of 500,000,000 feet, labor conditions and increased expenses being largely responsible for the decrease. The principal market for the output is in the United States, and as prices show a marked improvement, the demand being continuously firm, the outlook is favorable. Another large market is Great Britain, and while [illegible] the commencement of 1916 it steadily improved with a slight betterment in ocean freights, and latterly has been quite good. The home market has been small and largely depended on the demand for munition boxes, although the requirements of the building trade showed some slight improvement during the latter part of the year. The outlook for another season indicates lessened production in the woods and mills owing to the labor problem and the increased cost of supplies—in consequence the selling price of lumber should steadily rise.

Secured a Recruit.

On his way to the provincial hydro building, a few days ago, Sir Adam Beck was asked if he would “join up” by a recruiting sergeant in front of the Armories. Sir Adam expressed his willingness, and the man led him to the door of the Armories, asking him what unit he would like to join.

“I'll leave that to you,” was the reply, “but what are the conditions as to age?”

“Under 48,” was the prompt reply of the recruiting sergeant, who took a second look at the vigorous outdoor countenance of Sir Adam.

“Then if I say I am 48 will it be all right, you know I have a job now and I would not like to leave it unless I am sure you will take me?” queried the head of the hydro.

“Oh, a few years doesn't matter, what's your job?” asked the sergeant.

“Well I am nearly sixty,” replied Sir Adam, “and it's a good job.”

“You certainly have the courage, but perhaps you are a little over age, but what is your job?” replied the sergeant.

“I am remount commissioner for Canada,” was Sir Adam's smiling reply as he left the recruiting sergeant, who after a salute, looked at the retreating figure and wondered who he had been asking to enlist.

December is the wheat harvest month in New South Wales.

An Echo of 1914.

In its annual trade review The Monetary Times says: Prior to August, 1914, settlements at Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg, Vancouver, Quebec, Halifax, St. John, and Victoria were made in legals (Dominion notes), but the following month, when money began to get tight, the banks wished to concentrate and centralise cash reserves at convenient points, and accordingly arranged for settlement of daily balances by means of cash only at Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg, and Vancouver. It was decided that henceforth Quebec, Halifax, St. John, and Victoria should settle by draft on Montreal. But in the beginning of October, 1914, the British Admiralty advised the Canadian authorities that it was likely Victoria and Vancouver would be bombarded as a result of the operations of the German squadron (commanded by Von Spee) in the Pacific Ocean. The banks represented at the Pacific Coast, forthwith, made rush shipments of legals, gold, and a large portion of their own notes to Winnipeg for safety, and it was arranged that Vancouver should settle by draft on Winnipeg. When all danger of bombardment had passed, it was decided that on and after 1st May, 1915, the Vancouver clearing house should settle daily balances by means of legal tenders and the Canadian Bankers' Association ruled that after the same date all other clearing houses in British Columbia (i.e., Victoria and New Westminster) were to settle by draft on Vancouver.

JIMMY WALKS IN WITH SUNSHINE

POPULAR PLAY WILL BE REPEATED HERE ON GOOD FRIDAY.

The philosophy of looking on the bright side of life, even when a cyclone or some other elemental disturbance threatens is just what Jimmy does in "In Walked Jimmy" which comes to The Grand Good Friday, April 6, for two performances, with George Summers as the star. Jimmy just "blown in" and what a tonic he is, for the proprietor of a shoe factory who is about to end his life via the pistol route: What an ardent lover he makes for one of the girl clerks what a shrewd and logical and optimistic business man he is without being effervescent or farfetched in his methods. If a dark cloud or even a mauve cloud shrouds your horizon, see "Jimmy" as played by George Summers at The Grand. He will stimulate your interest in human nature. He will do to you what he did to the proprietor of the shoe factory; sign you up to a joy and happiness contract for the rest of your life with the privilege of transferring the contract and renewal when the term expires.

HEAD TAX ON CANADIANS TO UNITED STATES

OTTAWA IN DOUBT AS TO EXACT EFFECT OF U. S. REGULATIONS.

OTTAWA, March 30—Some misunderstanding seems to exist as regards the proposed head tax on Canadians entering the United States. It is not a Canadian but an American regulation. Heretofore foreigners entering the United States excepting Canadians, have been subject to the head tax of $4. There has been no tax on Canadians, or on any person who had resided a year or more in this country. Under the new American regulations, to take effect May 1, the head tax is increased to $8, and it is understood it may be applied to Canadians entering the United States for residence. Authorities here are in doubt as to the exact effect of the regulations, but it is understood Canadians visiting the United States may obtain identification cards, otherwise they may have to pay the head tax, which will be refunded if they return within a certain specified period.

greater Peterborough now than when he had first opened his eyes here. He had participated in the wedding of the C. G. E., and was glad to be able to take part in the silver wedding. The company had endeared itself to Peterborough. Those who had opposed it at first were now strong friends of the industry. He hoped with the opening of the Trent Canal to see Peterborough bigger and greater than ever before.

Peterborough's Advantages.

Mr. T. H. Matthews had listened with great interest to Rip Van Winkle's story, and pointed with pride to what the municipal bodies were doing for a greater Peterborough. Our power rates were lower than other cities, our water rates were the lowest except two, and the Utilities Commission, together with the City Council, were always ready to offer inducements to industries to locate here. To the householder, the cost of living was low owing to cheap light. Our natural development had been well operated, and there was every facility for a greater Peterborough. He referred to the good, clean work that had been done by the City Council. Mistakes have been made, but we cannot always use good judgment.

The splendid schools of Peterborough were pointed to, as also the excellent police department and the fire department, which would shortly have motor apparatus which would make it second to none.

Mr. Matthews referred to the care of the public health of Peterborough and the excellent work which had been done and which was being accomplished by the Peterborough Health Association. He felt that the Peterborough industries, whose head offices were not in Peterborough, should be asked to contribute to this cause. They all had funds for this purpose. He felt sure that Senator Nicholls would render every assistance in such a worthy cause. He was proud of Peterborough, and hoped at an early date to drive past the residence of Senator Nicholls. It was a good place to live in. Good golfing, good curling, good motoring, good boating were some of the attractions.

The evening was brought to a close by singing the National Anthem.

U. S. OFFICER STAYED OVER FOR BANQUET

A friend of Lieut.-Col. Ackerman in Florida has sent him a copy of the St. Augustine Evening Record, in which the calling out of the National Guard at Miami is reported. This was done as a result of the rumors of a plot to blow up the viaducts of the Florida East Coast Co. An amusing extract from the newspaper account is marked and reads as follows:

"The squad left Miami for Marathon yesterday afternoon and went on patrol duty there this morning. Captain Wigginton was unable to accompany the squad yesterday on account of the banquet and ball at Hardie's Casino last night, but he left Miami at 2 o'clock this morning to take comamnd of the squad, which will work in co-operation with special detectives and a private patrol employed by the Florida East Coast Company.

BOARD OF TRADE ANNUAL NEXT TUESDAY NIGHT

UNLESS MEMBERS TURN OUT THE BOARD WILL CEASE TO EXIST.

The annual general meeting of the Board of Trade will be held in the City Council Chamber on Tuesday, April 3, at 8 p.m. sharp. All persons interested in the advancement of the city are requested to attend. The minimum membership is 30 and unless this number turns out on Tuesday night the Board will cease to exist and the advantage of having an institution formed under authority of an Act of the Dominion Parliament will be lost to Peterborough. The Board has existed without cessation for about thirty years and has fully justified its existence throughout the whole of that time until the outbreak of war when development ceased and the officers decided it would be useless to hold meetings until signs of renewed development appeared. That time is here and the counsel of every broad-minded citizen is now needed if costly mistakes are to be avoided. Two heads are better than one and two hundred are better than two, so don't leave this duty you owe to your city for someone else to perform. Come to the meeting on Tuesday night whether you have been a member of the Board or not.

MAINTAIN ON FLANDERS' FIELD LIBERTY GAINED AT THE BOYNE

HONOR ROLL

Duke of Manchester L. O. L. No. 50 did itself proud last evening on the occasion of the ninth anniversary banquet held in the handsome dining hall of the Empress Hotel, and the committee who managed the event have every reason for accepting the congratulations extended to them on the success of the banquet. Furthermore the management of the hotel equally deserve the praise which fell from the lips of more than one speaker for the excellence of the table and the service.

The banquet was graced by the presence of a large representation of ladies, and occasion was taken by the speakers to congratulate them on having won the franchise. Patriotism towards Canada and the Motherland and the high principles for which the Orange Order stands were brought before the gathering in the speeches of the evening, and in recognition of fifty-seven members of the Duke of Manchester Lodge who answered the call of duty, an honor roll was unveiled. The enlistments represent half the membership of the lodge.

The names on the honor roll are: H. E. Carpenter, Norman Darling, Norman Barrie, Harold Losey, James English, James C. Gibson, Fred Wicker, who were killed; E. W. Hopkins, prisoner of war; C. Henry, H. Dodds, S. Montgomery, G. Latimer, O. R. Girven, W. McKay, Sam Rothwell, J. W. Edwards, Clayton Martin, James Sanderson, Silas Bullied, Jas. Fletcher, P. Bullied, F. C. Edwards, R. Speers, A. Moscrop and J. Jones, the latter two wounded; D. Loomis, H. Copp, B. L. Carpenter, B. Hanson, E. C. King, A. Hardman, E. B. Williams, V. Sedgwick, V. R. Nelson, E. W. Bird, C. Kellele, H. H. Reed, R. H. Rickaby, F. Holden, E. Reid, H. Ames, G. Carter, T. Record, A. Crowe, B. Clarke, the latter wounded; H. L. Stewart, N. Killinbeck, H. Spargo, W. H. Suddard, C. MacDougall, C. Edwards, R. Edwards, W. H. McGee, C. Holowell, Jas. Turnbull, H. Freeman, Andrew Rae.

Wor. Bro. E. F. Reid fulfilled the duties of toastmaster acceptably, the first toast, that of the King, being honored by the singing of the National Anthem.

"We are realizing today what it means to be part of the Empire, what it is to have the British navy and what it is to be Canadian," said Mr. G. A. Gillespie, M.L.A., in responding to the toast of Canada and the Empire. Speaking of responsibilities the war had brought, Mr. Gillespie said that until the last shot is fired we must do our utmost for Canada and the Empire, just as much as the boys in the trenches. We must be prepared to forego pleasures and make sacrifices this coming summer and if need be work extra hours in order to carry out our duty.

The speaker paid tribute to the ladies for the sacrifices made and his mention of the franchise for women brought applause.

Ex-Mayor Buller said: "We are proud tonight and always will be proud of the British Empire," and added that "Canada always will be on the front pages of history." The speaker paid tribute to Canadians who had gone to battle and had given up their lives; he spoke of the enlistments from Duke of Manchester Lodge, mentioned men like Major Bennett and Lt.-Col. Ackerman and pointed to the enlistments from Orange lodges in the County and Dominion, 600 from the former and over 70,000 from the country at large.

Honor Roll Unveiled

A large framed honor roll containing the names of 57 members of the Duke of Manchester Lodge who had enlisted was unveiled by Wor. Bro. J. H. Spence, assisted by Bro. W. H. Smith, Miss Calder playing Soldiers of the King as the Union Jack was lifted from the honor roll. Mr. Spence made a short and appropriate speech, in the course of which he said the Orange Society owed much to the ladies, first to the mothers who instructed the young in the principles of the Order and next to the wives and sweethearts.

Brethren in Khaki

Responding to the toast of Our Brethren in Khaki, Capt. J. H. Burnham, M.P., said he would make another effort to go overseas. In the near future men of more mature age would be required and he looked forward, and he was sure Col. Miller also did, to being employed in some capacity at the front. He said freedom dated from the British Empire and the freedom of the Empire dated to the Battle of the Boyne. It is this prise of liberty that the nations are now fighting for. He said Orangeism was born in the struggle of liberty and has maintained that feeling ever since.

Capt. Burnham referred to the language question and to the situation in Ireland and in concluding an excellent address said: Orangemen in khaki are fighting in alliance with Roman Catholics for the freedom of the Roman Catholics. Who will say that the Orangeman is bigoted when he is laying down his life for his Catholic brother. In this, the greater sacrifice; in this, the nobler task, the Orangemen cannot be charged with bigotry. On the field of the Boyne they won this liberty we enjoy today and on the fields of Flanders they are determined to maintain it.

"Our Sam Hughes"

Col. J. W. Miller referred to the response made by Canadians in 1866 and at the time of the Boer War. He reviewed the accomplishment made by Canada in the early stages of the present war, when "Our Sam Hughes the hero, stepped into the breach" (applause), and, continuing, paid his tribute to the women of Canada. Said the speaker: "We have thousands of Florence Nightingales in

SOME BOUQUETS FOR PETERBORO

In what he referred to as rambling remarks, which diverted him from the "text," Rev. W. T. Wickett, of Fraserville, said some nice things of Peterborough at the Duke of Manchester Lodge banuqet last night, when he responded to the toast of the Grand Lodge. He said that he had always admired the city of Peterborough. The hospitality shown to visitors and customers by merchants was worthy of note, and it was always appreciated. Also the cordiality expressed by the citizens on the streets to their visitors was appreciated. As an outsider he had always been welcomed with a hearty cordiality by the citizens and merchants of the city, and he had always felt that he would like to live here.

PETERBOROUGH, SATURDAY, MARCH 31, 1917

WHY NOT SETTLE IT!

MR. GORDON and that section of the public that questions his right to hold two city offices resemble a pair of boys chasing each other round a table. They are in continual motion, but it is a matter of some difficulty to define their relative position, that is as to which is really in the lead.

No personal or other selfish consideration should be allowed to figure in this question. The matter is one of vast importance to the public. If Mr. Gordon or any other man is not legally qualified to sit as a member of the Board of Education, then any business in which he participates is illegal. The ratepayers of the city are certainly entitled to the assurance that their money is being expended according to law.

If there are any members on the Board who dispute Mr. Gordon's membership, then they owe it to the public as a duty to take action calculated to set matters right. The taxpayers, too, owe the same duty to themselves. Someone should move in this case, and we believe that no one would be better pleased than Mr. Gordon himself to have the matter finally disposed of one way or the other. If ever there was a chance for a friendly suit to settle a question of general interest, here it is.

The official opinion of Minister of Education Pyne, even if backed up and authorised by the Attorney-General, as it probably is, does not advance the case a single step unless Mr. Gordon resigns voluntarily. This, judging from his statement published yesterday, he evidently has not the slightest intention of doing. An action at law is all that remains to bring about a settlement. A difference of opinion that has divided the people of the city for the past two and a half years, can be laid to rest forever in a short space of time.

Mr. Gordon's contention that he is not a city official is that he is only temporarily employed in the civic service. His duties as city attorney are merely a sideline. There are other members of the legal profession who hold that the payment to Mr. Gordon of a regular salary, instead of by fees, disposes of his claim. The city clerk is an official beyond all dispute. His standing as such would not be affected if he engaged in some other line outside of office hours.

CLOSING THE COLLEGIATE.

MR. JOHN CARLYSLE had a letter in The Review the other day recommending the closing of the Collegiate Institute in order to give the boys in attendance a chance to go out into the country and take up farm work. "Citizen" comes to his support and, in a letter published in this issue in another column, makes the same recommendation and for a similar reason.

There are probably more girls than boys attending the local Collegiate Institute, and it would hardly be fair to deprive the former of all educational advantages, seeing that they could not be expected to take up the same line of work as the boys. Neither would one-half of the boys be physically equal to the strain of farm work, even if they were willing to undertake it. If there is to be conscription, let it first of all be employed to get the slackers into the army before it is set in operation against the school children.

How are the farmers themselves likely to regard this proposition to make farm hands of school boys? Farming today is more in the nature of skilled labor than it was in the good old times when there was less machinery. There are places in the country which boys can fill, but they are comparatively limited. It is useless to cite the situation in Europe or talk of the women and children employed there in agricultural pursuits. The conditions are not such as to admit of comparison. Farm laborers are required beyond a doubt, but the man who suggests a volunteer squad of school boys has not solved the problem any more than if he made the same recommendation to relieve the industrial situation in the city.

Leave the Collegiate Institute's doors open for the benefit of the girls and the boys too young or physically unfit for hard labor. At least keep the schools in operation while there is a poolroom or a bowling alley left in commission.

There is no longer any corn to hoe, because the two-horse cultivator takes care of that, and it requires something of an expert to handle such a machine. There are berries to pick, it is true, but the season is short, and still at a considerable distance. There is fruit to gather, but it will be several months before the apples are ready to harvest. The farmer has his labor problems, not the least perplexing of which is to find steady work for his hired help, except one or two experienced hands, even through the summer months.

Any able-bodied boy who goes to the country and helps in the production campaign will not only benefit himself financially and physically, but will have the satisfaction of knowing that he is rendering the Empire a service as valuable as if he were actually in the trenches.

A QUESTION OF TASTE.

THERE IS LITTLE of the provincial outlook in the average citizen of Peterborough. The people as a whole are broad-minded and cosmopolitan in their views. When a distinguished Canadian, one of the country's captains of industry, was appointed to the Senate, Peterborough, always ready to recognize merit wherever it may be found, hastened to accord him the honor of tendering him a complimentary banquet. The tie that connected that gentleman to this city was a purely commercial one, and yet the citizens treated him in every respect as one of themselves. Politics and all save purely patriotic considerations were left out of the reckoning. All were Canadians in the welcome extended to the city's guest.

Not so The Examiner, that regards the outside world through a knothole in the backyard fence. Our contemporary had the execrable taste to turn a purely social function into something of a political bear garden and made it the occasion for an ill-natured attack on the Government for ignoring local talent in the matter of senatorial choice. Of course, it is good enough to say some kind things about the guest of the evening, but no virtues which he may possess can appease The Examiner for his lack of residence in this city.

We cannot imagine what evil genius poisoned the mind of our contemporary yesterday. It was more grouchy than ever. It criticised The Review in a true puerile spirit for alluding to the head of the Ontario Government as Premier instead of Sir William Hearst, and insinuates that we use the more democratic title in order to toady to the labor element.

The point is not well taken. In spite of any objections that may be filed by our aesthetic neighbor, we will continue to use the different designations indiscriminately, but with a preference to the one that shows that the gentleman in question is at the head of affairs in Ontario. There is only one Premier in this province, while there are so many knights that the term has almost lost its significance as a mark of distinction. The title conferred upon a man by a free people is a greater honor than that which is bestowed even by a sovereign, seeing that the first is a recognition of personal merit by those in a position to know.

The decision that Minister of Education Pyne filed with reference to Mr. G. N. Gordon's right to membership on the School Board was the best piece of local news published in this city for many a day. Being something out of the ordinary routine, The Examiner missed it as usual. In its disappointment it ill-naturedly proceeds to hold The Review responsible for the law and for the interpretation Dr. Pyne puts upon it, winding up with an essay on cheese as a diet.

Talking of cheese, we know newspaper men, so called by easy courtesy, who could with impunity indulge in Welsh rarebit with mince pie and pickles on the side, at any hour of the day or night, and the combination would not generate in their mentality anything like an original idea, morbid or otherwise. It is really too bad that such novices did not choose some other occupation. We would suggest a place in the ranks. Better that than weak and sneaking attempts to apologize for and defend others clinging to the same life raft as themselves.

A CALL TO THE CHURCHES.

TWO CALLS HAVE just been sent out to the churches, both originating in Toronto. The various denominations, including the heads of the different colleges, have united in a request that the people of Canada join in a special prayer service on Good Friday. The matter is clearly set forth in a letter in another column. The appeal in the first place came from England, and the religious leaders in this country hasten to volunteer their hearty co-operation. A circular dealing with the matter says:

> The appeal having been received from England, it has been thought well to endeavor to give effect to it in this country; and this we more gladly do because we must all feel how very necessary it is that repentance and prayer should characterize the Lord's people in the present great crisis of our Empire. We would therefore suggest that, following up this invitation, meetings be held for confession, humiliation and prayer, so that God may be pleased shortly to terminate the present terrible strife in such a way as shall be for His glory and the welfare of the nations.
> We would suggest, therefore, that where services are held on Good Friday, ~~these subjects~~ should be made a prominent feature, and, in churches where no service is usual on that day, a special meeting should be held with the same end in view.

The Organization of Resources Committee, of which Lieutenant-Governor Hendrie is chairman, have sent to the ministers of Ontario a request that tomorrow be observed as "Production Sunday," and that the necessity for an increased food supply be impressed on the people. Local pastors will duly heed the call and support the movement.

"HUSH-A-BYE BABY."

WHEN AN EVENT transpires The Examiner gets it, provided someone is kind enough to call it to its attention. When something happens, it misses it. Routine stuff is its long suit. The articles prepared in the Rowell workshop in Toronto, those distortions of political events, those canned opinions on current topics, sent to the party press by freight or mail, are eagerly seized upon by The Examiner and used as space fillers, dressed up as "Specials to The Examiner," hot from the wire.

Our contemporary, with scant grace, even in view of the fraternal gathering the other night, insinuates that an abnormal capacity for slumber is a qualification for a place in the Canadian Senate. If that is the case, the Government should visit the George Street sanctum and make a selection.

NOTES AND COMMENT.

FORTUNATELY all slackers are not newspaper tyros.

THE EXAMINER is evidently not yet weary of the penny banks discussion, but we would not like to undertake to say the same of the public.

IN THE MEANTIME and until this question is finally settled it might be well to keep all municipal offices under lock and key during the hours of darkness. Mr. Gordon possibly has a lantern.

PLAYING A DANGEROUS GAME

Liberal politicians in Canada have apparently decided to force the country into a general election. Quebec has been chosen as the base of their operations, and the signs of the coming attack are manifold.

During the past few weeks there has been carried on among French-Canadians an industrious and systematic propaganda against National Service. Quebec audiences have been told that the Borden Government is using National Service as a stepping-stone to conscription; that National Service cards are being issued under false pretences; that those who sign them are made liable for compulsory military service; and, finally that the one way out of the difficulty is to refuse to sign the cards and work for the return to power of Sir Wilfrid Laurier. At the present time the cities of Quebec and Montreal are placarded with posters denouncing the Government for attempting to bring about conscription, and mass meetings are being daily held, addressed by Liberals and Nationalists, inflaming the public mind against the Administration and insidiously working for the support of the Liberal party. Within the past week alone meetings of this character have been addressed by one of the most prominent of Quebec Liberal members of Parliament — Alphonse Verville—as well as by the official Liberal candidate for a con- of others who are well known among Sir Wilfrid Laurier's workers in Quebec. There is all too good reason to believe that this sinister activity is being engineered from Ontario, and that it is not being carried on without the knowledge and consent of Liberal leaders outside of Quebec. The other day, for example, the Montreal Herald-Telegraph, of which Hon. Geo. P. Graham is the editor, contained a double column front page editorial denouncing any attempt to enforce conscription in Canada.

The partisan basis of the whole movement is better appreciated when it is realized that while the Government is being attacked under Liberal auspices in Quebec for attempting to bring about conscription, it is simultaneously assailed under Liberal auspices in Ontario for not bringing about conscription. In Quebec sections, where the country's war policy is thought to be unpopular, the Government is cursed for going so far. In Ontario, where war sentiment is strong, it is cursed for not going far enough. In Quebec the return of Sir Wilfrid Laurier is demanded to call a halt to our participation in the war. In Ontario his return is urged to more vigorously prosecute the war.

The time has come in Canada for plain speaking. The truth is that a few mad partisans in the Liberal party are scheming to plunge this country into the turmoil of a war election, hoping thereby to be placed into power by the foreign element in the West and a disloyal minority in the Province of Quebec. We do not affirm that this madly partisan scheme has either the sanction or support of the rank and file of Canadian Liberals. We believe, as thousands of their sons at the front have shown, that they are just as loyal, just as devoted to the Empire's cause as Conservatives. The menace lies in the character and well-known ideals of the men who control the party's policies. The Liberal party, if elected to office tomorrow, would be dependent for its life upon the support of Austrians and Germans in the West, shirkers who want to avoid conscription in the rest of Canada, and Nationalists in the Province of Quebec; and its war policy would necessarily be influenced accordingly. To such a danger this country must be aroused. If an election is forced before the war is decisively won the people must see to it that steps are taken to prevent slackers, anti-conscriptionists, aliens and Quebec Nationalists from getting control of the country's destiny while 400,000 of our best and bravest are at the front.

OPINIONS OF REVIEW READERS

Editor Review: In your report of the lecture in St. Paul's Church last Friday night by Rev. Mr. Turnbull you omitted what I considered an important part.

If my hearing served me right, the lecturer, after reading Gen. 1: I., II., said that "the world had been previously inhabited and the devil was responsible for the earth being without form and void." This was rather startling doctrine to me, and as there are to be other lectures would it not be well to let us have some further light as to the inhabitants of the former world, and the devil's part in it.

Mr. Pogue at the close of the lecture said, "We should thank God for being privileged to listen to such an able discourse." He had learned more of the devil than he ever knew before.

With all due respect to the reverend gentleman, I am not quite sure that we should thank God for listening to an elaborate display of Satan.

Paul says in Rom. 16: 19, 20: "I would have you wise unto that which is good and simple concerning evil, And the God of peace shall bruise Satan under your feet shortly."

However, I believe the general public would be pleased if these transient preachers will be a little more explicit in their new doctrine, such as the world prior to the account in Genesis.

A HALT IN EDUCATION

Editor Review: Due to the necessity to utilize all available land to provide supplies for the Allied armies of Europe, the populations depending on such provision and home consumption, efforts are being put forth for the purpose. Preparation is now freely discussed and suggestions made to acquire all vacant lots in urban centres for this work.

Sacrifices are being made and have been made, inasmuch as individuals have left home and families, as well as remunerative occupations, in order to stem the advance of a menace, that would if not put down neutralize all advantages we now enjoy.

Efforts put forth with much less sacrifice would greatly assist the suppression of such autocracy and bring to those engaged in the struggle supplies that cannot be done without. No matter what armies there may be in action and ready for action, or training for action, or what provision for transportation there may be, unless adequate supplies are available progress will be seriously impeded.

The sacrifice that might be suggested is as follows and before setting out the same, we do not forget the importance of education, nor do we overlook the necessity to keep the student at school during his most receptive age, yet, as stated before, the ruling of an unscrupulous autocratic board would be most undesirable and a halt of six months in the progress of institute education would be a reasonable sacrifice compared with others made and the accomplishment of the end in view. Therefore I think we are justified in asking the Department of Education to close all institutes from the 15th of April until the 15th of October in order to make it possible for all of the boys to assist in agricultural operations which is absolutely necessary for the supply of the great bulk of supplies.

I might further suggest that the able-bodied male teachers then liberated could also very materially assist. One hundred students and teachers thus assisting would as a result of their co-operation place available for consumption more produce in one county than the vacant lot system would in twenty-five.

A GREAT APPEAL.

Editor Review: A great appeal has emanated from thirty or forty religious leaders in England, calling upon all God's loyalists, as far as possible throughout the world, to engage in a united effort of intercession, on the great day of the sacrifice of the Son of God, universally known as Good Friday. It has been taken up in Canada through the co-operation of a large body of representative Christian leaders, the heads of the various theological colleges, the president of the Bible Society, the Evangelical Alliance, Bible League, China Inland Mission, Y.M.C.A., etc., etc., a truly super-denominational and catholic appeal.

The appeal asks that, wherever possible, at some hour of that day, groups of people who believe in the need and the power of prayer, congregate in churches, school houses, public halls and homes, and at a given hour of the morning, afternoon or evening, continue in prayer and supplication to seek the Lord for pardon for our sins, personal, family, church and national, and to ask for God's blessing and leading, in this great crisis of our Empire, and that those who, like the Anglicans and others, have special services on that day, offer definite intercession.

Never was prayer more needed. No sensible Canadian Christian will be side-tracked from dependence upon God by the successes of the hour, or lose head and heart in the excitement of transient elation. God is still the First and Final Factor in this war and prayer is still the final instrument of victory. It was not only the valor of the fighting forces; it was the three men on the top of the hill praying, that won the victory that day at Rephidim (Exodus 17: 11-12).

May we hope that, in response to this simple appeal, a vast body of Christians will be stirred to co-operate in this movement of prayer on Good Friday, and in some way, as they are led by the spirit of God, make provision to this end, however simple, in their own church or district. Today, prayer is the most valuable help that can be given to the Empire. God is waiting for the

EVERY ONE CAN do something for his country

Some can bear arms
Some can produce food
Some can make munitions
Some can give money

It is the privilege of all to help.

YOU CAN SERVE by Fighting—Working—Saving—Giving

This is NATIONAL SERVICE

Are YOU doing your part?

ALL EYES turn now to the Canadian Farmer, for he can render the Empire SPECIAL SERVICE in this sternest year of the war.

But—our farms are badly undermanned—25,000 men are needed on the land.

With insufficient help, the Man on the Land fights an uphill fight to meet the pressing need for Food.

CITY and TOWN can help.

Municipal Councils, Churches and Schools, and other organizations, both of men and women, can render National Service by directing all available labour to the Land.

Farmers themselves can exchange labour. School boys can assist.

Were you raised on a farm? Can you drive a team? Can you handle fork or hoe? If you can't fight, you can produce. Spend the Summer working on the Farm.

Let every man, woman and child in the Dominion who has access to Land, no matter how small the plot, make it produce Food in 1917.

NDOOR SPORT CARD MADE BIG HIT WITH FANS AT THE ARMORIES

un Galore in Boxing Bouts for the Soldiers.

The officers and men of the 247th ttalion entertained their friends t night at a smoker in the Ar- ries, and everyone who was lucky ugh to be present thoroughly en- yed the boxing bouts, burlesques, d music. It was not an enticer recruits, for that was the farthest ught from the minds of the pow- that be.

The onerous duty of being master ceremonies was filled with preci- n by genial Major O'Flynn, while the difficult position of referee was capably and delightfully handled by Sergt. W. E. Turley of Toronto, a returned soldier and one who regrets that he cannot go back and be in at the death.

The first number was a bout for the flyweight championship of the world between Kid Pants and Kid Coat. It was by far the most really life-like set-to of the evening. This was followed by a burlesque. Three men were blindfolded and placed in the ring, all gloved and dressed for a real bout. They were put into their corners, told to take two steps forward, and away they went. It was worth the money to see them go. Most of the hitting landed on air, and some of the spectators are laughing yet.

The go between Bandsman Dallin and Sergt. Giorno furnished considerable excitement, particularly in the last round, when the men got into some lively sparring.

Sergt. Turley next entertained with a very graphic account of his trip overseas with the first Canadian Division. Stories were told of the mud at Salisbury Plain, how the orator met Major O'Flynn at Givenchy, and his story of the retreat from Mons was fine. The sergeant has a splendid voice, and he used it with effect, singing the soldiers' favorite songs, "Sing Me to Sleep," "If the Sergeant Steals Your Rum, Never Mind," "Keep Your Head Down, Allemand." Sergt. Turley concluded his sketch with the recitation "The Spirit of Rifleman Brown."

Privates Hill and Wade, who have had the gloves on for only four days, staged the next bout, and from their efforts last night will be heard from again. Both were very evenly matched.

The real bout of the evening was a six-round go between Frank Bull of Toronto, international featherweight champion and runner-up for the Ontario honor, and "Red" Gallagher, lightweight champion of Canada and who only recently lost at Pittsburg when the judges could not agree and ordered an extra round. In every round last night the two men gave some splendid examples of the manly art. They had a tendency to close fighting and holding which kept Referee Turley fairly busy. The two men were loudly applauded when the last round was finished.

Capt. Belton acted as timekeeper in all the events.

The 247th Band contributed some good selections before and during the smoker.

SORROWS OF SATAN

Editor Review: The reverend gentleman who said that Satan is behind Christian Science seems to have an uncanny familiarity with the adversary, and an equally amazing ignorance of that which he opposes. No such respect for the devil was shown by Christ Jesus, who rebuked the error which Peter had voiced saying: "Get thee behind me, Satan." Surely he was not addressing a personal devil, but rather speaking in the highly figurative language of the East. He was using the common personification for evil, the one evil or the evil one. Thus he put evil behind him and in this sense it is behind Christian Science. Also false theology and demonolgy are put behind truth, and should be considered out of date.

"There is no proof of the existence of a personal devil, and Jesus said, "There is no truth in him." Evil is the suppositional opposite of the Infinite One. What we all need is to know more, not of evil, but of good, in order to experience better, healthier, saner lives.

Christian Science, far from denying the Atonement, explains it as the unity between God and man, which Christ Jesus exemplified.

FINANCIAL MATTERS ARE DEALT WITH BY COMMITTEE

55 Soldiers Treated At Nicholls Hospital.

The city finance committee met yesterday afternoon and in addition to passing the monthly accounts dealt with the following items that were referred to the committee for action or recommendation:

The Trades and Labor Council applied for a grant of $100 towards a proposed celebration of Labor Day here. The application was favorably reported on.

The city solicitor was instructed to prepare a bylaw regarding grants for patriotic purposes. The Government Act says that any firm or person enjoying tax exemption of any kind is liable to taxation for patriotic purposes.

The Council will be asked to authorise the committee to sell the bonds now ready to be issued. The amount to be issued is $90,000 Utilities Commission, $10,000 Peterborough Light and Power Co., and $60,000 Patriotic Fund grant.

The payment of the monthly grants to the public and separate school boards was recommended.

Coroner Greer wrote the committee, enclosing a letter from the Attorney-General, in which it was stated that $50 was a proper fee for a stomach analysis. The city solicitor will report on this.

The Nicholls Hospital sent in a statement of the soldiers treated at the hospital in order to fit them for service. The cases treated were 55 in number, and the total days in hospital 566. The statement from St. Joseph's Hospital was not presented.

A communication from the Roumanian relief fund was received.

The Single Tax Association wrote the city regarding the cultivation of vacant lands. They will be informed that Peterborough has already taken action.

The Only Medicine For Little Ones

Mrs. Timothy Bowes, Blissfield, N.B., writes:—"I have always used Baby's Own Tablets for my three children and I speak very highly of them as I could not get along without them. Baby's Own Tablets are the only medicine I would use for my children." The Tablets cure all the minor ills of little ones and the mother who always keeps a box of them in the house may feel reasonably safe against the consequences of sudden attacks of illness. They are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

A physician boarded a crowded crosstown car. A woman was standing, and a big German seated, sprawling over twice the space necessary. Indignantly the doctor said to him:

"So here! Why don't you move a little, so that this tired woman may have a seat?"

For a moment the German looked dazed. Then a broad smile spread over his countenance as he answered:

"Say, dot's a joke on you, all right! Dot's my vife!"

Every losing ticket on a horse race represents just so much rainbow gold.

Many people complain of lack of money, but few complain of lack of sense.

DRINK HOT WATER BEFORE BREAKFAST

Says you really feel clean, sweet and fresh inside, and are seldom ill.

If you are accustomed to wake up with a coated tongue, foul breath or a dull, dizzy headache; or, if your meals sour and turn into gas and acids you have a real surprise awaiting you.

To-morrow morning, immediately upon arising, drink a glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it. This is intended to first neutralize and then wash out of your stomach, liver, kidneys and thirty feet of intestines al the indigestible waste, poisons, sour bile and toxins, thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal.

Those subject to sick headaches, backache, bilious attacks, constipation or any form of stomach trouble, are urged to get a quarter pound of limestone phosphate from the drug store and begin enjoying this morning inside-bath. It is said that men and women who try this become enthusiastic and keep it up daily. It is a splendid health measure for it is more important to keep clean and pure on the inside than on the outside, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, causing disease, while the bowel pores do.

The principle of bathing inside is not new, as million of people practice it. Just as hot water and soap cleanse, purify and freshen the skin, so hot water and a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate act on the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels. Limestone phosphate is an inexpensive white powder and almost tasteless.

WHEN SOLDIERS RETURN

Great Lessons Learned Abroad—New Tasks Faced

Sir Robert Borden, addressing the Lawyers' Club of New York, said in part: "Many hundred thousand men will return after this war to their homes in the Overseas Dominions of the British commonwealth. They will have thronged upon the stage of the world's theatre of action and taken a mighty part in settling world issues and determining the future destiny of civilization and humanity. Upon our Atlantic and Pacific shores, by our inland waterways in the northern hinterlands of Ontario and Quebec, on our vast western plains and still further west within the shadow of majestic mountain ranges, these men will take up anew the task of developing and up-building our country.

"They will take up that work with a consciousness that Canada has played a worthy part in the fateful struggle which she entered at the call of duty and for the cause of freedom. Theirs will be an imperishable recollection of comradeship with men of the Motherland and of all parts of the King's dominions; theirs also a wider vision and deeper insight from service in a high cause. Hardly less profound will be the influence of the war upon all our people. They have learned that self-sacrifice in a just cause is at once a duty and a blessing; and this lesson has both inspired and ennobled the men and women of Canada."

COLONEL SHOT MASCOT

Dog Was Victim Because of Love of Rabbits

At Bedford County Court Colonel Joseph Sunderland, a justice of the peace for the division there, was fined $10 and $3.00 costs for assaulting Private Arthur Horne, attached to a regiment which was manœuvring over the defendant's land. Private Horne said that on the fatal day he had in his arms a terrier—the regimental mascot—weighing 13 pounds, which Colonel Sunderland, coming into the field, ordered him to put down, saying that it had been after his rabbits. When he refused to do so, the colonel, who was carrying a gun cocked, attempted to throw him. Finally he put the dog down and the colonel fired at it, killing it instantly.

The Empire's emergency call

Instead of now embarking upon the critical period of the great war-struggle with every confidence of victory, what if we were to-day bemoaning a lost war! Such an unthinkable catastrophe would undoubtedly be ascribed to the food shortage. Help to increase production!

Statesmen and economists agree that the universal food shortage is to-day the most dangerous menace of all! Yet the weapon to conquer it is in the hands of everyone able to increase production. If you have even the smallest plot of ground available, think of your responsibility. Let not selfishness or indifference rob you of this very real duty of rendering to your country a practical patriotic service. Grow vegetables.

Here is the tremendous significance of the present universal shortage as seen by the Premier of Great Britain. Lloyd George declares:

"One year's unselfishness will save the British Empire! It will save humanity!"

The splendid patriotic efforts of those who toil for victory on the farms cannot cope with the vast need. City, town and village dwellers should help. Even then there cannot be too much food production. Grow vegetables this year.

It matters little that you can reap real, worth-while profits in delicious fresh vegetables on your table, beneficial exercise and even a money profit from any surplus produce. The big, pressing reason for growing vegetables is that great desire in every patriotic heart at this vital moment, to contribute something, even though it be only a mite, to help end this horrible war with victory.

Everyone should help. Let one and all take this appeal to heart. Let the slogan for 1917 be:

The Right Spirit!

"I am going to take Lloyd George at his word," writes a well-known Canadian. "This year I have made up my mind to do all I can in the best way I can. And I shall not trouble myself about profits. I shall be satisfied if the world gets the good of it."

"A Vegetable Garden for every home"

How does vegetable growing help? It saves money otherwise spent for vegetables. It helps to lower the "high cost of living." It sets free for vital war work the labor that would otherwise be engaged in producing vegetables for your use. It increases the surplus for export. Are these not worth-while contributions to victory? Grow vegetables this year!

The Ontario Department of Agriculture appeals to Horticultural Societies, labor unions, lodges, school boards, etc., to take the initiative and actively encourage vegetable growing.

Organizations are requested to arrange for instructive talks by local practical gardeners. If local speakers cannot be secured, the Department of Agriculture will endeavor to send a man. As the number of available experts is limited, arrangements for meetings and applications for speakers should be made at once.

The Department suggests the formation of local organizations to offer prizes for best vegetable gardens, and will assist in any possible way any organization conducting a campaign for vegetable growing on vacant lots.

Write for free literature giving instructions about methods of preparing the ground and cultivating the crops; also plan of garden, indicating suitable vegetables to grow, best varieties, and their arrangement in the garden, etc.

Write for Poultry bulletin.—The scraps from the average table are sufficient to feed hens. You will be highly repaid in fresh eggs. Bulletin gives full directions how to keep hens.

this country; if it were not so our boys would not enjoy the comforts they do." Women had responded as nobly as the men. His reference to the need of socks by the soldiers and the good work carried on by the women was applauded as was also his statement that "the lads over there have blessed the women of Canada for their kindness."

Bro. W. A. Howard and ex-Ald. J. Edgar responded to the toast of Our City. Ex-Ald. W. J. Johnston was down for an address but after reaching the hotel and congratulating the lodge on the occasion, he returned home to rest.

Fire Chief Howard spoke of the industrial and commercial life, the moral and religious life, the political life and the social life of the city, all of which received due justice at the speaker's hands. He gave interesting statistics on the industrial and commercial life of the city; referred to the high position Peterborough enjoys from a moral and religious standpoint, adding a word of praise for the police department. In taking a negative view to the suggested decreasing of the staff he pointed to the danger which might follow the entry of the United States into the war, as a result of which there would be an influx of undesirable persons. "We must keep our police up to the standard," said the speaker. Political life was like Caesar's wife, beyond reproach, and the social life was such that we only had to go to the larger cities to appreciate what we have in the city and country life.

Ex-Ald. Edgar put in a word in favor of government by commission, using as an argument the good work accomplished by the Utilities Commission. The speaker took up the matter of position for returned soldiers and said that the city council had not carried out the promises made to the men who enlisted and had returned to the city after having done their duty. He mentioned the sanitary inspectorship as one instance where the council had not lived up to promises made. Nothing was too good for the returned soldier.

The Grand Lodge

Rt. Wor. Bro. Geo. McCartney, Grand Organizer, and Bro. Rev. W. T. Wickett, who was elected deputy-chaplain at the Grand Lodge of Ontario East, responded to the toast of The Grand Lodge. Mr. McCartney was delighted with the magnificent banquet and he congratulated the lodge on their entertainment and said they had been well advised in coming to a temperance hotel and the management certainly deserved all the thanks the guests could give. Speaking of the language question, he said: "We must stand together and say the English language is the language of instruction and it is the language that is going to prevail. All honor to Mr. Rowell, who voted with the Premier in bringing about the happy result." The Grand Lodge, he said, had 400 lodges and a membership of 20,000. It used to meet at Millbrook but now Peterborough could hardly give enough accommodation. No man living was too good to be an Orangeman and no man who could not conduct himself properly had any place in the Order. The speaker congratulated the ladies on having received the vote and added he would like to see a strong ladies' lodge in Peterborough.

Rev. W. T. Wickett had had his two good ears wide open and was somewhat disappointed when nobody mentioned the market. He said Peterborough had a splendid market and he always had admired the city. He was glad to be united with Orangemen because the Order stood for high ideals and an Orangeman who was true would be a Christian man. If he was a good man when he entered the order he ought to be a better man by his membership.

The toast of "Sister Lodges" was fittingly responded to by Rt. Wor. Bro. George Williamson and Bro. E. H. Brown, and that of "The Ladies" by Bro. A. F. Hagerman.

The proceedings were brought to a close by the singing of the National Anthem.

The Sweet Young Thing approached the famous horticulturist gushingly. "Tell me," she begged, "the best way to distinguish the poisonous fungi from the edible."

"Eat 'em," was the curt rejoinder.

CANADIAN OFFICER REGAINS HIS HONOR

Soldier Though Court-martialed Wins Back His Commission—Daring Deeds in "No Man's La[illegible]

A London correspondent [illegible] Some time ago Lieut. O. B Jones, a Canadian officer, was dismissed by court-martial. Like that other distinguished officer, Colonel John Elkington, Lieut. Jones determined to "make good," and so win back his honor. He thereupon enlisted as a private in a well known Montreal battalion. Gallantry in the face of the enemy won him his corporal's stripes; then he was promoted to be sergeant. His reckless courage brought the D.C.M., and, later, a bar. It was said of him that he was "always out killing Germans."

He was appointed wiring sergeant, then bombing sergeant, but it was as a scout that he most distinguished himself. On March 21, 1916, he went over to the enemy trenches to examine them and stole a sniper's plate (metal shield). A month later he again went over to the enemy trenches and secured another plate.

Daring Idea

After that Sergeant (as he now was) Jones was put in charge of the bombers, and then came the big fight at the end of June. We had difficulties in ascertaining the enemy's new lines, and Jones was ordered to go out at night and find out exactly how the line stood. Knowing how hopeless it was to move about at night, Jones had the daring idea of going out by daylight. At 7 o'clock in the morning he slowly crept across "No Man's Land," and followed an old communication trench. He finally reached a strong sandbag block, and, hearing the enemy on the other side knew that he had arrived at their lines.

He secured an entrenching tool from a dead German, and started to make a tunnel right under the sandbags. He eventually got through to the other side, covered himself with a sandbag, and crept into a hole. Although a German sentry was firing at random he stayed there for two hours unharmed.

Counting the Enemy

He was able to count the number of the garrison, and to fix the exact location of the new line, and all bombing and machine gun strong points. The result was that after a few hours our artillery were able to drive the Germans out of their positions. In this work Sergt. Jones was assisted by Sergt. W. A. Thompson, who was since been killed on the Somme. Both sergeants got the D.C.M. for this great act of heroism.

Some weeks later Sergt. Jones was out patrolling for twenty hours under much the same circumstances on which he won his bar to the D.C.M. He amused himself reading "Omar Khayyam." This was the occasion when he was wounded by machine gun fire on the Somme.

HAVE RETURNED FROM FLORIDA

MR. AND MRS. JAS. KENDRY RETURN FROM THEIR SOUTHERN TRIP.

Mr. and Mrs. James Kendry have returned to the city after a winter spent at Seabreeze, one of the most popular resorts of Florida, and at other Southern points. Both enjoyed the trip, which enabled them to escape the rigors of the past season. While he was South Mr. Kendry favored The Review with several copies of Southern papers, from articles in which it was evident that the sentiment of the people in that section was in favor of active American participation in the war.

CITY COUNCIL.

The city council will hold its regular monthly meeting on Monday night.

OLD-FASHIONED HAGGIS

In a recent issue you gave directions for a "Haggis." Now, I hail from Scotland, and my mother always makes the old-fashioned Haggis, which is just oatmeal, suet, pepper and salt, done in a sheep's bag, or, if she has not a bag she makes what father calls a pan haggis. Just take some suet minced finely and heat it in a pan and when melted add the oatmeal, pepper and salt but do not make too dry. Cook for a while, and it is ready.

For oat cakes, take, say, two cups of fine oatmeal and a large tablespoonful of lard rub together until the lard is completely mixed with the meal, add salt, then take a cup of boiling water and mix to a fairly stiff dough. Knead a little and roll out. Cut into shape, and bake a few minutes, say, ten minutes, in a fairly hot oven.

Old Country cakes are baked on the girdle on the fire and then toasted before the fire on the upper side of the cake, as you cannot turn them like scones or barley bannocks.

PAINLEVE, PRODIGY WHO SAVED VERDUN

Chemist, Scientist and Politician as Marvel of France—Invented Mysterious Explosive

Paul Painleve, a French chemist, was the real cause of the Germans being driven out of the outer forts of Verdun. He it was who invented the mysterious explosive against which their field fortifications went down and before whose onslaught the Germans had to retire in a week more than they advanced in eight months of the hardest fighting the world has ever seen. As a chemist Painleve lectured before eager classes of the Sorbonne. According to The London Chronicle, his prodigious intellectual powers were manifest before he reached his teens.

Prodigy Discovered

His teacher in the lay school at Paris decided that a prodigy had arrived. Paul was seen idling while the rest of his class had to work, yet knew his lessons perfectly. The teacher went to the director, who declared that the boy could be examined for promotion into the next higher class. In due time the same kind of report of Paul was again handed in. The process was continued until Paul was in peril of promotion out of the school altogether. At last the director was convinced he had a marvel of a mind to deal with. Paul was discovered. A special purse was even procured from some source. It is affirmed that in his eleventh year he could have taken a bachelor's degree at the university.

Leader of Men

M. Briand is quoted as having declared that Painleve was a born leader of men with an unparalleled capacity for administration. Clemenceau pronounced him an inspired debater. The effectiveness of Painleve in the laboratory was based upon qualities totally different from those which won him success in politics. He had a passion for order, symmetry, harmony, method in his researches. "You are an old maid!" the late Henri Poincare was alleged to have said to him. "Minerva was an old maid," he replied with his characteristic smile. "She came full grown from the head of Jove and was never young." Poincare, himself the supreme mathematician of his time, despaired of the universal Painleve who took all science for his province.

His Political Triumph

Side by side with the glory that came to him as a member of the Academy of Science, marched the glory of his political triumph. He would hold a class spellbound at the Sorbonne with the delicacy of his researches into the theory of light, heat and sound, and repair at night to a packed hall for the sake of haranguing discontented proletarians. "Do you not think," asked Poincare after a riot in which his friend got a blow on the nose, "that you might abandon your absurd politics?" "That is all very fine for you," retorted Painleve, "for you can go shooting in the forest of Rambouillet whenever you please; but I am poor and my only recreation is politics."

Stupendous.

"What is an avalanche, dad?"

"It's a landslide on a big scale. Looks something like a Sunday newspaper sliding off the parlor sofa."—Washington Times.

Possibly.

"What is this howl about the drama?"

"Probably because they've been trying it on the dog."—Baltimore American.

Napoleon's Destructiveness.

Napoleon was destructive by character and custom. He stuck his paper knife into the costly chairs that were provided for him everywhere. He wasted huge quantities of paper. Whenever he took up anything that was frail or finely worked he was quite certain to demolish it or damage it before he put it down. He pulled up the choicest plants in the hothouses, and when he could do it without being seen he used to shoot Josephine's rare birds.

One day the emperor shot out one of the eyes of Massena, the duke of Rivoli, but nothing was said of it. Berthier took the blame for it, probably because he was master of the hunt.—"Napoleon's Men and Methods."

What Massenet Dreaded.

Massenet dreaded the first performance of his operas so much that he usually left the city and hid until they were over. In his book "Souvenirs de la Vie de Theatre" Pierre Berton tells of meeting him the night before the production of his "Roi de Lahore" and congratulating him on the success that was sure. He was astonished at the weary, melancholy attitude of the composer. "Massenet silently took off his hat and pointed with his finger at his hair. It was freshly silvered, to my surprise, for we were then both young men. And he said to me, 'See what it costs to bring out an opera?'"

Never Again.

A recruiting sergeant stationed in the south of Ireland met Pat and asked him to join the army. The latter refused, whereupon the sergeant asked his reason for refusing.

"Aren't the King and the Kaiser cousins?" asked Pat.

"Yes," said the recruiting sergeant.

"Well," said Pat, "begorra, I once interferred in a family squabble, and I'm not going to do so again."

Long Chains Worn.

Long chains of varous sorts are in fashion this winter. The woman who seeks individuality nowadays outnumbers the woman who merely follows the fashion—which means that most women try to find something just a little different in the detail of their dress than that of their friend and neighbor. So it is that there are a dozen and one different sorts of long chains to be found, each as interesting as the one before it.

Suede and Jersey.

Callot introduces a sensational new sport suit made up from a side plaited skirt of white silk jersey and a short coat of white suede. It is lined with Indian red silk jersey, and collars and cuffs of the kid are faced with the red

Mennonites Are Serving.

The guarantee of exemption from military service to Mennonites and Doukhobors must be kept with the original parties. It is another question whether it is applicable to all people who may profess these faiths in the future. The Mennonites, who were parties to the original contract forty years ago, claimed to stand aloof from all public affairs, and renounced all privileges of citizenship such as voting and holding office. The younger generation have departed from these rules, and become electors. This imposes upon them the obligations of citizenship, and many have recognized it by enlisting. The Church elders of the old school ask that these volunteers be sent back home, but they will ask in vain.—Vancouver News-Advertiser.

"Be a Sinew in the Colossus of Production"

A call to Sow that we may Reap

Ontario's farms stand in dire need of labor at this seeding time. Results of investigations by the Ontario Department of Agriculture show it. There is about one man per hundred acres left on the farms—not enough! Unless labor is forthcoming in thousands—men and boys—the farmer cannot now sow even a normal harvest, much less the increase the Motherland expects Ontario to produce.

This labor must come from the cities, towns and villages.

The world's available reserves of grain are gone. We are living literally from hand to mouth.

Therefore—this call urges upon all Boards of Trade, Chambers of Commerce, Patriotic Societies, urban and rural Mayors, Aldermen, Councillors, Reeves, retired farmers and others to hold local meetings at the earliest possible moment and determine upon the best ways and means of meeting this great emergency in their locality.

The Central Committee is at your service and will co-operate with suggestions, etc.

Chairman—His Honor Sir John Hendrie, Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario.
Vice-Chairmen—Sir William Hearst, Prime Minister; N. W. Rowell, Esq., K.C., M.L.A.
Secretary—Albert H. Abbott, Esq., Ph.D.

Shirker's Prayer

(Contributed.)

I thank Thee, O Lord, that I live in politically-ridden Canada, where the government is too much afraid of losing votes to dare to compel such shirkers as myself to do their duty to King and country. Thou knowest, O Lord, that I am constitutionally opposed to anything that might bring discomfort, pain or inconvenience to myself. Thou knowest, O Lord, that I am fifty per cent. selfishness and fifty per cent. cowardice, and that there are so many others who would make better soldiers than I would. Therefore, O Lord, I ask Thee to light the Divine fire of patriotism in the hearts of my fellow workers in shop and office, that they may see their way clear to do their bit, and incidentaly that I may get advanced to their position when they go. Thou knowest, O Lord, that I am doing my bit for King and country in my own way; that I am making sacrifices, that I put on one side one per cent. of my pay for patriotic purposes, when I don't forget it; that I go to the patriotic meetings and shout with the loudest to encourage the other fellows to join; that I have made sacrifices; that it was only last week that I got up one hour earlier to see several of my old chums leave for the front, standing in the cold all that time, so that I might give them a handshake when they left. That is all I did give them. I had meant to give them a little keepsake, but found I would not be able to take in the hockey match if I had done so. Thou knowest, O Lord, how my heart bleeds when I see these fine fellows who have returned from the front minus arms, legs and sight. I feel this so much, O Lord, that I have to sneak round back ways to my boarding house, because I cannot stand the sight of so much suffering; and, in conclusion, O Lord, some must stay to welcome those that return, and I want to be one of them, to stand in the front of the crowd and wave the old flag, and I hope, O Lord, that you will watch over and protect me and my job that I have tried so hard to hold, and that You will not put it in the heart of my employer to fire me to make room for some returned hero, just because I am a slacker.

NATIONAL SERVICE CARDS ARRIVING AT THE OFFICE IN OTTAWA.

UTILITY OF NATIONAL SERVICE HAS ALREADY BEEN PROVEN

The question uppermost in the public mind when the national service idea was first proposed was, of course, what useful purpose would it fill. Recognizedly now, it is of fundamental importance to have knowledge of a country's resources and capabilities if war, and the problems created by war, are to be dealt with effectively. Britain has shown her recognition of this by establishing her national service organization under the direction of Mr. Neville Chamberlain, one of the most brilliant organizers in the Old Country. Similarly, Germany, by the starting of her "Auxiliary Service Board," has demonstrated her appreciation of the important part national service will play in the war, and in the subsequent life of the nation.

It so happens also that the utility of the National Service Board's organization Board has already been abundantly proved. During the recent coal shortage, which threatened to tie up almost the entire business of the country, if not to occasion the deaths of hundreds of people consequent to the sever weather conditions then existing, Sir Henry Drayton, chairman of the Railway Commission, asked the National Service Board if it could supply him with the names of five hundred railroad engineers, foremen, conductors, telegraphists, switchmen, etc. Though the card-sorting operations and work of statistical compilation was at that stage by no means completed, yet within twenty-four hours the desired information was furnished. Similarly, much valuable work of the same order has been done for the munition plants, railroads and other large and small employers throughout the country. In a direct military sense, much good work has also been accomplished in preparing for the local recruiting authorities lists of likely men not engaged in essential occupations. When the Royal Flying Corps — which is being raised and trained in Canada — needed three thousand mechanics, the national service cards were specially used, no less than twelve thousand names being secured from the Ontario lists alone. The result is that the Royal Flying Corps is able to report splendid progress in its recruiting.

In successfully carrying out its task of taking stock of the man-power of Canada, the National Service Board has performed a great work. That all this information will be of the utmost value in helping to solve the many after-the-war problems which will confront the people, besides enabling the country to most easily bear its burdens while the war is on, goes without saying to those acquainted with the National Service Board's organisation. The man-power inventory itself is essentially a "preparedness" asset. If the war should be prolonged, it would be invaluable for administrative purposes.

MARKET PRICES

Bad weather conditions made the attendance at the market this morning small and as a result prices on all lines of produce were considerably strengthened.

Eggs, while dropping on the outside markets, were a cent or two higher here.

Butter remains firm and sold readily at 43c to 45c, the latter price being for small lots to regular customers.

Fowl were in demand but there were very few offered today that would satisfy a particular buyer. Good chickens sell at 25c lb. and hens at 18c to 22c.

One lady had three ducks on sale at $1 each.

Good parsnips sold on the outside market at 50 cents a peck.

The dressed meat section was principally represented by veal, which sold at 18c for fronts and 20c for hinds.

This was Market Clerk Moloney's last day on the market. On Monday Walter Fisher, the new clerk, will be in charge.

Very Impatient Prisoners.

Canadians do not make patient prisoners-of-war in Germany, and make more attempts to escape than any other section of the army. Moreover, they do not lose heart when recaptured, and almost invariably the man who has made one unsuccessful attempt repeats the attempt twice and even thrice. The spirit which animates these unfortunate victims of the war is shown in a letter from Donald MacNicoll, of Vancouver (16th Batt.), who writes from a German camp: "I am confined in my 3 x 4 room. I am not sick, unless it is of the home kind. I am here for that honorable offence of 'beating it, as the Americans would say. This is my second attempt. The first time I got within four miles of liberty, and the next 3½. Fourteen days' solitary confinement on bread and water—that is what we suffer for these attempts; but, then, look at the prize if you win, and you know we are always going to win." The writer goes on to speak of his progress in the study of German and French.

A TYPICAL CANADIAN.

Brief Sketch of Man Who Does Honor to Dominion.

News has come to his home that C— H—, a young man who lived in or so near Toronto as to make no difference, has been gazetted a lieutenant. To those who knew him the case of C— H. for in this instance the good old custom of the censorship must be followed, and credit withheld where it is due, is one of the most inspiring of the war. It has been generally supposed that the great majority of the soldiers who enlisted in the first contingent, who threw down their tools of trade at the first blast of war and rushed to arms, were lured by adventure, that they were fighting men who never backed away from an argument, and who would rather be in a muss than not. That may be so, but perhaps most of us knew an exception to the rule. C— H— was such an exception. He was not a fighting man. Probably he had never struck a blow in anger in his life, even when he was a schoolboy. He was not thirsting for adventure. He was not tired of home; nor did he yearn, so far as anyone knew, to see the great world outside of the narrow circle in which his life had been spent. C— H— was what is often contemptuously called a "goody-goody boy." He never played truant. He always went to Sunday school, even long after he was old enough to wear a moustache. He sang in the choir. He shook hands at the door. Maybe he gave his "experience" now and then. He was a good boy, and he looked it, and this may have been what exasperated a lot of people who knew him casually.

When the war began our friend C— H—, who was a Methodist, a Grit, and no doubt a member of the anti-cigarette and abolish-slang societies, had been married for a couple of years. He had one little baby. The only son, he was also, in a sense, the chief support of his father and mother and a sister, for the father's business had been slowly crumbling before the fierce assaults of local competition, and it was C— H— who was keeping the little ship afloat. A very short time after the war broke out C— H— said to his father, "Dad, I feel I ought to go." It must have been a blow to the father, and what a blow to the young wife and mother we can imagine; but if they sought to point out to C— H— that he was not a fighting man, that he had tremendous duties and responsibilities at home, that the place was full of single slackers, it made no impression upon C— H—. He enlisted as a private, and soon this lad who had been gently, tenderly brought up, was roughing it in the mud at Salisbury Plain. He went to France later, was promoted from private to corporal, from corporal to sergeant, and to sergeant-major. Now he is a lieutenant. Incidentally he has won the Distinguished Conduct Medal. His father is dead in the meantime; his business is gone. His wife, his sister, and his mother pick up the paper in the morning with trembling fingers, for C— H— is still on the firing line somewhere in France. It would appear from all this that there are worse places than Sunday schools for building up character, that the best soldiers are not the roughnecks, and that you may know a man for years and know nothing at all about him if you have failed to make allowance for the part that devotion to what he believes to be right plays in his actions.—J. V. McAree in The Mail and Empire.

HELPED IN OIL FIELDS.

Drillers From Lambton County Were in Roumania.

Oil drillers from Lambton County were in Roumania as oil drillers from Lambton County are in all parts of the earth where wells have to be sunk. Two or three advance agents of the exodus of Canadian oil drillers from Roumania have already been heard from. Their story is a record of good work for the allies and of disappointment for Germany in the oil fields of Roumania.

Roumania's 1915 production of oil was 12,000,000 barrels, value $30,000,000, at $2.50 per barrel. The world's production of oil is 425,000,000. Roumania's output of oil was 3 per cent. of the world's production in 1915. Germany's conquest of the Roumanian oil fields was expected to give the Teutons an immediate supply of 1,000,000 barrels of oil per month from Roumania with the extra supply secured when Germany speeded up production.

Oil drillers from Lambton County report that the Roumanian production of oil will be absolutely nil until new wells are drilled. The Canadian oil drillers worked with the British officers in the Roumanian oil fields. Their letters tell of the complete destruction of machinery and buildings in the Roumanian fields. As for the wells, a Canadian says:

"Iron was dropped down the bore of every well and concrete poured in on top of the iron. When the drill gets through the concrete it strikes the iron. The drill will go round and round. It will be three years before the Roumanian oil fields are again on a producing basis."

Enquiry at the head office of the Imperial Oil Co. to-day did not bear out the theory that Germany could not sink new wells in the Roumanian oil fields in less than three years. Reports of destruction are so complete as to make it certain that Germany cannot get oil without sinking new wells. The Roumanian oil fields oppose a hard formation to the drills and the authorities of the Imperial Oil Co. state that six months is a minimum time for drilling a shallow well in Roumania and eighteen months a minimum time for the deeper wells. British engineers and Canadian oil drillers seem to have combined to disappoint Germany's hopes of securing an immediate supply of oil from the Roumanian wells.

Captured Sixteen Huns.

For taking prisoners fifteen German soldiers and one German officer, Lieut. Godfrey Alan Johnson, Sci. '12, former well-known McGill athlete and prominent student leader, has just been awarded the Military Cross, according to advices which reached McGill University.

Lieut. Johnson accomplished the capture of the Germans by making use of the same presence of mind which used to stand him in good stead when he captained the McGill football team on the gridiron back in 1911. It was in the course of the recent operations on the Somme front after the Canadians had captured a German trench. Lieut. Johnson was called up with his Field Company of Canadian Engineers to assist in consolidating the position, and in erecting the necessary defences, those erected by the Germans having been demolished by the Canadian artillery fire. While his men were engaged in this work, he, unarmed and totally unprepared for any hostile attack, proceeded to take a stroll through the former German works. Arrived in front of a former German dugout, he was surprised to see the head of a German officer appear at the door. Although he was without a weapon of any kind, Johnson readily took in the situation, and making a motion towards his hip pocket, caused the German officer to throw up his hands in true "Kamerad" fashion. With the officer there surrendered fifteen soldiers who had hidden in the dugout to escape the bombardment and had been overlooked by the British soldiers in their cleaning-up process.

Lieut. Johnson, besides playing football with the McGill team, was connected with various other undergraduate organizations, including the Students' Union, of which he was vice-president. He was president of the Football Club. Lieut. Johnson's home is in Ottawa, and he went overseas a year ago, and since going to France has been attached to the 11th Field Company, Canadian Engineers.

Left Money in Banks.

There have been a lot of people in Canada to whom money was no object. They have left balances distributed among the chartered banks amounting to nearly a million dollars. They give strength, tone up the stomach and weak digestion, clear the complexion of pimples, eruptions and boils, and drive out rheumatic poisons.

If you are pale and sallow, if you feel continually tired out, breathless after slight exertion, if you have headaches or backaches, if you are irritable and nervous, if your joints ache, if your appetite fails and food does not nourish nor sleep refresh you, Dr. Williams' Pink Pills will make you well and strong. To build up the blood is the special purpose of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and that is why they are the best spring medicine. PROHIBITION IN MANITOBA.

Interesting Figures After Being Dry Seven Months.

Although Manitoba has been "dry" only since June 1, drunkenness in the province decreased 87 per cent., as compared with 1915, according to the official reports from the police court records. The statistics for 1916 closed on December 30, and police and prohibition officials agree that, owing to rigid temperance laws and rigid enforcement, there was a huge decrease in crime. There were only 621 convictions for crime in Manitoba in 1916, as against 927 for 1915.

There are five judicial districts in the province. The following are detailed figures of commitments to jail secured in each district for 1916 and 1915:

	1905.	1906.
Winnipeg	573	471
Brandon	206	65
Minnedosa	32	21
Portage la Prairie	111	[illegible]
Morden	15	7

There are 24 criminals in the Portage la Prairie jail at present. Of these 16 come from far northern Manitoba, which is being formed into the northern or Dauphin judicial district. Only 8 are from the central or Portage section. Another interesting fact in connection with the report is that during 1915, in Carberry, there were 34 convictions for various crimes. Since the Temperance Act came into force in Manitoba, there have been none.

In 1915 and up to the time that prohibition shut out the bars of the province, there were 3,176 drunk or drunk-and-disorderly convictions in the eastern judicial district. Since then there have been only 419. In Brandon district, for the same periods, the figures are 423 and 46; in Portage, 205 and 23, and in St. Boniface, 133 and 6, or totals for the cities of the province of 3,937 and 494. There was only one conviction for drunkenness in St. Boniface during the past four months.

There were 214 persons convicted for selling liquor in the province since June 1, 1916, as far as the records of the provincial liquor license department show. Of these 107 passed through the city police court in Winnipeg.

Prohibition has reduced drunkenness in Manitoba more than 86 per cent. during the half year the Macdonald Act has been in operation, according to a statement by J. N. McLean, chief inspector of the provincial liquor license department.

Mr. MacLean bases his assertion on official figures for Brandon during the half-year period the prohibition law has been in force. Since June 1 there have been only 46 cases of drunkenness in the second city of the province, as compared with 455 cases from January 1 to June 1, 1916.

"These figures are typical of the entire province," said Mr. MacLean.

"The Macdonald Act has had a remarkable effect on sobriety in Manitoba," said Mr. MacLean. "A year ago drunkenness was common. To-day it is exceptional, at least the public evidence of it is lacking."

The biggest effect of the Macdonald Act, in the opinion of Mr. MacLean, has been in entirely abolishing the "treating system." "A man may drink as much as he likes in his own home now," said the chief license inspector, "but there is no public drinking at bars, and no crowds of 'drunks' collecting in the jail cells. The abolition of treating has reduced drunkenness to the minimum.

"That was the purpose of the law. If absolutely prohibition had been wanted, such a law would have been passed. The greatest menace of liquor to the public has been removed, and the general moral tone of the province has been uplifted."

Machine Plants Trees.

A machine has been devised that will plant from 10,000 to 15,000 forest tree seedlings in a day. It is about as large as a mowing machine and keeps three men and two horses busy. One man drives, while the other two handle the seedlings.

First, the machine makes a furrow, into which the small trees are dropped at regular intervals. As each one is put in place, a pair of rollers replaces the dirt about the roots. As the machine journeys along a marker draws a line which shows just where the next row of seedlings is to be planted.

More Power at Less Cost

Both Series "18" Studebaker FOUR and Series "18" Studebaker SIX are noted for their great power, and especially their great power in ratio to their very low consumption of gasoline.

It has taken Studebaker four years to improve, refine and perfect the wonderful Studebaker motor. It has been solved through the experience of 250,000 cars in the hands of owners. It is only through an evolution like this, that perfection of power in ratio to fuel consumption can possibly be developed.

There are no secret processes; no basic patents; no features of design that are unknown or prohibited by patents. The Engineer can use what he wishes, but he can only know how to use the best features by continually improving, refining and perfecting—through the experience of a motor in actual service.

This is why Studebaker can truthfully claim that the design of its motor is unsurpassed in simplicity, accessibility and power. By the refinement of reciprocating parts, vibration has been reduced to an almost unobservable minimum.

The bearing areas of the motor have been enlarged and increased, giving greater durability, more strength, still further insuring smooth, vibrationless operation.

But you cannot appreciate the splendid POWER of the Studebaker car until you TRY it.

GERMAN WRITER ADMITS DEFEAT

THE vigilant censor, like Homer, sometimes nods, and then articles slip into the press which make us gasp when we read them. Such is a brilliant essay in The Frankfurter Zeitung from the pen of no less a personage than Geheime Hof-Rat Prof. Dr. Freidrich Meinecke, of Freiburg University, one of the German historians of the first rank. The professor tells us that the entire German war-plan "collapsed at the gates of Paris in the Battle of the Marne." This idea has long been current in the Allied press, but up till now no Teutonic publicist of any standing has endorsed the view that the "strategic retreat" at the Marne and the failure to take Verdun must be counted as German defeats. Professor Meinecke has a new theory as regards the commencement of the conflict, for he tells us that "only in a political sense did Germany begin the war as a defensive war," while "in a military sense" it has been distinctly a "knock-out war." The professor writes:

"Our first object was to overthrow France rapidly, and to compel her to make peace. As it was our interest rapidly to reduce the number of our enemies, this peace would probably have been very lenient for France. If we succeeded, we could then turn quickly, carrying out the same military idea against Russia also, with the best prospect of success, and then, under favorable conditions, conclude the final peace with England, who would have been disarmed on the continent. This peace, also, like the first peace concluded with France, would have had to assume in high degree the character of a compromise, since we could not hope to overthrow England's naval supremacy.

"This whole program, brilliantly begun, collapsed at the gates of Paris in the Battle of the Marne. This battle was not a tactical victory, but it was a great strategical success for the French. Perhaps our program would not have collapsed if we had carried through our original strategical idea with perfect strictness, keeping our main forces firmly together, and, for the time, abandoning East Prussia."

Dr. Meinecke goes on to sketch subsequent developments, and says substantially: We took to trench-warfare, the enemy did likewise; we tried, and failed, to break through both on the Yser and on the Bzura and Rawaka; the French tried, and failed, to break through in Champagne. People at home began to argue that the war had finally developed into one of attrition. Then in May, 1915, German troops succeeded in breaking through in Gallicia, but ultimately had to settle down again in defensive positions. The French and the English tried again, and failed again, to break through in the West—in the battles of Loos and Champagne. The professor then passes to Verdun and the Somme, and his comments run:

"The argument used among us a year ago was that the decision must be sought not in the intangible distant East, but in the [illegible] west, the nerve-center of the enemy's force. The decision, however, must not be a decision in the old sense, aiming at a break-through and rolling-up of the enemy resistance—for such a decision was regarded as no longer possible here in the West—but a decision better adapted to the experiences of the war of position and to psychological calculations. We should, in fact, break in at a particularly critical position, destroy one of the most important French fortresses, and so prove to the French that they could no longer win, and that they would do better to end a war which had lost all prospects for them. That was the origin of our undertaking against Verdun. But this time the new politico-military idea led only to a heroic episode.

"If our original successes could have been pursued at the same pace to their goal, our political purpose would perhaps have been attained. But meanwhile our enemies pulled themselves together for still more gigantic achievements. England learned from us universal military service and the conversion of industry for the production of a mighty supply of arms and ammunition. At the same time she leaned upon the industrial strength of America, and so, while Japan helped also, she was able to equip the new Russian formations with the apparatus which we had smashed the year before. Thus in June and July, 1916, it came to the great double offensive of our enemies in East and West. The result was that we had to interrupt our operations against Verdun, and the enemy offensive also achieved partial successes, especially in the East, although the real object—to break through and roll up our lines—could not be achieved, in spite of an intensity of attack and superiority in technical resources far greater than in our break-through in Galicia. This was due to the fact that we, in the interval, had still further developed the possibilities of trench-warfare."

Professor Meinecke says that the Battle of the Somme has led to the conviction in Germany that it is no longer possible for either side to arrive at a military decision "in the full peace-compelling sense," and that Germany's offer of peace arises from—

"the idea that the sacrifices demanded by the continuation of the war no longer bear any relation to the military results which can still be expected, and that it is statesmanlike, intelligent, and wise to abandon the intention of destruction, which after all does not lead to destruction and to seek a reasonable compromise."

Vivid Blouses.

There is an attempt to bring back vivid blouses for the spring. This will be quite easy to do if the blouses are worn outside and not inside the skirt. Straight middy blouses of blue and purple crepe de chine are offered in the specialty shops. They are embroidered in colored threads and bullion.

To the Man on the Land.

For two years and a half, war, red and ruinous, has raged through the world, and still no decision has been reached. There is reason to hope that before 1917 closes the struggle for liberty will have been won, or be greatly advanced. Amid the varying phases of this titanic conflict the fact stands out more clearly than ever that agriculture is of supreme importance. Extraordinary measures are being taken by the allied countries to increase and encourage production. It is earnestly hoped that every farmer in Canada will strive to increase the food supply of the Empire. A still powerful and unscrupulous enemy openly avows its intention to try and sink all ships carrying supplies to England during the coming year. In the tremendous strain yet to come a vital factor will be ample and unfailing flow of food to England and France. No matter what difficulties may face us the supreme duty of every man on the land is to use every thought and every energy in the direction of producing more, and still more.—Martin Burrell, Minister of Agriculture.

GERMANS WERE CAPTURED ON A COMMERCE RAIDER.

Some Anecdote About the Huns Now Living in the Camps at Amherst, Nova Scotia, Where They Are Being Treated With Kindness That Canadians Held in Germany Might Envy.

THAT the British Government had established a detention camp for German prisoners of war on this continent is probably little known. But there is such a camp, and established for nearly two years at Amherst, Nova Scotia, where are kept under surveillance a part of the crew of the auxiliary cruiser Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse, the ship despatched even before the beginning of hostilities between England and Germany with orders to begin raiding England's commerce.

The dash was a bold one and for a while accompanied with considerable success; but one day the cruiser caught a Tartar and was sunk. Fleeing on two steamships they had held up, the crew were caught by another British warship and sent as prisoners of war to Nova Scotia.

The experiences of these German prisoners are most interesting. A part of the narrative is obtained from the prisoners themselves, relating as it does to the sailing of the cruiser in pursuit of her quarry.

Two days before war was declared between England and Germany, and in anticipation of such a step, which indicates how thoroughly Germany had prepared herself to make quick and effective strikes, the auxiliary cruiser Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse sailed to the north of Scotland and up to the coast of Greenland, where she captured two English fishing schooners, seizing their cargoes of fish and sinking both vessels.

Taking a southerly course, she got in touch with a British passenger steamship, and was rapidly overhauling her when information was picked up that a British cruiser was dangerously near at hand.

The Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse was immediately turned and headed for the west coast of Africa, where rich pickings were anticipated. While sailing on this course she held up and sank two English freight steamships, and, continuing south-westerly, made for the West Indies.

When within a short distance of the islands she fell in with the colliers Bethnia and Navara, compelling their masters to lay to, pending repairs on the Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse, during the process of which steam was kept low on the raider. In the meanwhile coal was being removed from the captured ships, for the raider's bunkers were getting low, and another opportunity for coaling up under such advantageous conditions might not soon present itself.

While the raider was thus engaged in appropriating enemy coal the British cruiser High Flyer crept upon her and opened fire. The gunnery of the British tars was so accurate and effective that the Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse was unable successfully to return the compliment. She put up a fight, but it was a short-lived one, and soon she was in a sinking condition.

Her crew took to their captive ships and headed these toward the United States, but before they could reach the American coast and make the safe port hoped for they were overhauled well outside the three-mile limit, this time by the British cruiser Essex, and taken into the port of Kingston, Jamaica.

There the German officers and sailors were taken ashore and held in confinement until March, 1915, when orders were received to transfer them to Amherst, there to be detained during the remainder of the war.

The prisoners are comfortably housed in a building 900 feet long, which was remodelled for their occupancy. The winters being very severe in that part of the country, the building was thoroughly equipped with steam-heating apparatus. As exercise in the open is essential to health, a large enclosure was built, with a high, woven wire fence around it, and in this the prisoners are privileged to engage in various forms of athletic games.

To further provide for their comfort and make their detention less irksome, the Y. M. C. A. of the United States caused a building to be erected and well furnished. A part of the equipment consists of a well selected library. Various classes have been established and competent instructors provided to impart useful knowledge.

These prisoners, generally speaking, are a bright and well-set-up lot of men. They are passing their long period of confinement under conditions that are quite unusual. They read, play games, and indulge in music. Two large choruses have been organized and a good orchestra has been established which gives really enjoyable concerts. There are some who prefer theatricals, and for their accommodation a stage has been built with necessary scenic accessories.

Such as prefer to work are privileged to labor on the roads and aid in clearing the land on the government experimental farms at Nappan, a short distance from the detention camp. For this work they are paid a small wage.

A special train carries the workers to and from the experimental farms, and there, as well as when in camp, they are provided with plenty of wholesome food, so that there is little for them to complain about.

On one of these trips last August four prisoners made a break for liberty, leaping from the train while it was in rapid motion. One of the quartet was so badly injured that he was unable to crawl into the brush to hide and was brought back to the camp for treatment. The others ran into the woods, remaining in hiding until hunger drove them to the expedient of returning to the farm under cover of the night and soliciting food of other prisoners.

Before returning to camp the second day three of the guard sent out with the train had been detailed to remain at the farm with instructions to watch for the fugitives. These men noticed that food was being secreted, and surmised that it was being cached for the prisoners. Therefore, they posted themselves where they could surprise the runaways if the latter should attempt to creep in to gain possession of the food.

At dusk the watchers observed the men coming out of the woods. Two of them were approaching the spot where they had arranged the food should be placed when they were challenged by the guard and ordered to halt. This command was uttered thrice, causing one of the prisoners to stand fast. His companion broke into a run, and when about eighty yards distant was shot and instantly killed. The prisoner who had sufficient discretion to come to a halt was returned to the camp that night. The third prisoner had been standing close to the edge of the woods when his comrades were challenged. He had but to step back a little to get under cover. Later in the night, by making a detour through the woods, he took to the road, hoping to elude the guard, but was caught before morning.

INTERESTED IN DOMINION.

Duke of Connaught Opens Maple Leaf Club.

A special London correspondent writes: His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught appears to have quite taken the Canadians this side of the water under his special care, and whenever there is an opportunity he seems to go out of his way to show a kindness and interest in everything from the land of the Maple. The great reception he had when opening the additional Maple Leaf Club in London from the crowded gatherings of Canadians, demonstrated the keen appreciation all of us feel for his consideration. Lady Drummond presided, and welcomed the Duke in a most appropriate speech, thereafter dealing with the necessity of such clubs for the soldiers on leave from the front and from the camps and possessed of no friends or places to go during their stay in the metropolis. She especially mentioned the active part Mr. and Mrs. Rudyard Kipling had taken in the organization of the scheme, and paid a tribute, too, to the work of the Hon. Mrs. Ronald Greville, who has done so much, besides placing her own home, 11 Charles street, Berkeley square, at the disposal of the club. Nor did she forget to acknowledge in glowing terms the generous subscriptions that had flowed in from all parts of Canada, especially mentioning the help received from the Daughters of the Empire, the British Columbia and Yukon Church Aid Society, and the munificent grant for building and equipping this latest addition to the Maple Leaf Clubs from the Government of Ontario.

The Duke of Connaught paid graceful tributes to the work of Lady Drummond, "the life and soul of the movement," and to the Hon. Mrs. Ronald Greville, and spoke of the pleasure and interest he always took and would take in everything pertaining to the great Dominion. The Duchess, he said, regretted very deeply being unable to be with them owing to slight throat trouble, and Princess Patricia would not have been absent had she not made it a rule to devote Thursdays to work at the Ontario Military Hospital, Orpington, having to make her visits to the various Maple Leaf Clubs on other days, and had in fact been working at one on the previous evening when she had served seven different supper parties.

Wishing the clubs every possible success, he declared the clubs open, remarking that though these brave men were thousands of miles from home, they might rest assured that everybody hoped and tried to make them feel happy and at home.

Silks, Velvets, and Motors.

Sir Edmund Walker's annual address as President of the Canadian Bank of Commerce was a masterly review of war-time conditions in trade and finance. He spoke of "prosperity beyond anything we have ever known in almost every part of Canada," but emphasised the fact that extravagance is out of place in view of the changed situation which may follow the conclusion of peace. His remark that $20,000,000 left the country last year in payment for motor cars, silks, and velvets constitutes a severe reflection upon the apathy of many people in presence of their country's trials. Millions are being wrongly spent on other luxuries. A large proportion of the population is still asleep as far as the seriousness of the conflict is concerned. The people must save and economize to help in financing, in winning, and in shortening the war.

"Thrift for the individual is excellent, but just now that is of minor importance. Thrift for the sake of Canada, thrift for the sake of the Empire, thrift to win the war should be our cry. We shall not fail for men, difficult as enlistment may be. We shall not fail because of inability to make or to procure war supplies. If we fail it will be because we have wasted on unnecessary things the money that would have won the war. The man or woman who works hard at making shells may take much comfort in helping to win the war, but the man or woman who, in addition, saves a part of the present high wages due to the war and buys a war security, or helps a bank to do so, has helped twice, and the second kind of help is the most vital. The manufacturers of the United States will make war supplies for money. We are doing better only if we supply them on credit."

The United States coast guard in 1915 saved 1,507 lives.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Hot Compresses.

Hot water bags may sometimes take the place of hot compresses since they have been made so handy in shape and size, writes Fannie Sprague Talbot in Good Health. They are easily prepared and eliminate all the painful fuss of wringing the steaming, bulky cloths. When used in lieu of the hot compress the bag should be wrapped in a damp flannel or bath towel, flannel preferably, so that the steamy effect be obtained.

Germans Captured at Longame and Doignies ---Lines Held Strongly Against French ---Foe's Counters Are Checked.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, April 2. — The British have captured Croisilles after a desperate defence by the Germans, Reuter's correspondent at British headquarters reports.

The towns of Longame and Doignies also have been captured by the British, who took some prisoners.

Bitish Headquarters in France, April 2.—British forces today widened the wedge they had inserted in the German lines in the region of St. Quentin and captured the villages of Atilly and Villecholes.

PARIS, April 2. — (Official Statement.) — "In the region of St. Quentin our patrols pushed northeast of Dallon and north of Castres (these towns are about three miles from St. Quentin) as far as the enemy's lines, which they found strongly held.

"In the sector south of the Oise there was heavy fighting between advanced posts.

"South of the Allette our troops followed up their success and drove the Germans beyond Vauxaillon. Enemy patrols were dispersed by our fire.

"The number of prisoners taken yesterday was 120. We captured five machine guns.

"In the Champagne, several German counter-attacks against positions which we captured west of Maisons de Champagne were checked by our fire.

"We repulsed completely attacks on small posts east of Auberive and west of Navarin farm.

"In Alsace we made a successful surprise attack at Carspach wood and took prisoners.

"Over the remainder of the front the night passed quietly."

The Chancellor denied categorically the Turkish report that three thousand British had been killed in the attack.

A TRIBUTE BY PASTOR TO LATE MR. T. A. S. HAY

OUTSTANDING VIRTUE WAS LARGENESS OF MIND AND HEART.

TRUEST OF FRIENDS.

In St. Paul's Presbyterian Church Sunday morning Rev. R. Pogue said: "I cannot refrain this morning from saying a word in reference to the worth and character of the late Mr. T. A. S. Hay, who passed away last Wednesday evening. He was a lifelong member of St. Paul's congregation; he was born in the city over 67 years ago, and from earliest infancy was connected with this church, first as a Sunday school scholar, then as a member of the church, and then for twenty years as a member of the board of managers. There was no one more interested in all that period in the welfare of St. Paul's Church than he. As a member of the board of managers he was beloved and respected by all his fellow-members, and he always discharged faithfully and well whatever work was assigned to him by the board. He was never absent from his place in the sanctuary when able to attend. The regularity with which he waited on the means of Grace was an inspiration to all who saw him and knew him. He possessed one outstanding virtue among many others that were admired, and that was a certain largeness of mind and heart combined with an absolute simplicity of character which made him the truest of friends and raised him above the petty meannesses which characterize some men. It was impossible to be mean or small in his presence.

"He loved the Church of Christ; he loved all things good and beautiful. No one ever labored more faithfully for the welfare of his city than he.

"We shall miss him greatly in St. Paul's Church. In his removal by death his church has lost a loyal member, his minister a true friend, and the city a useful citizen. The loss to his wife and daughters and his only surviving sisters no words can describe. May the God of all consolation sustain and comfort them."

CORP. G. POTTER HERE FOR VISIT

HIS LEG AMPUTATED AFTER WOUNDING BY SHELL EXPLOSION.

G. and Mrs. Potter, Montreal, is in the city for a few days, having come down from Toronto, where he is being fitted for an artificial leg to replace his left leg, which was amputated after he had been seriously wounded while fighting in France. Corporal Potter sustained sixteen wounds when a German shell landed in the British lines, killing five men and wounding twenty others.

Corporal Potter, who went overseas with the Grenadier Guards from Montreal, saw much fighting, and he considers that he has much to be thankful for in spite of the fact that he lost his leg. He is the guest of Mr. Thos. Rork, 319 Simcoe street.

PETERBOROUGH, MONDAY, APRIL 2, 1917

SELECTING A SENATOR.

"PROGRESS" has a letter in a local paper—and some way or other there is a familiar ring about the communication—in which the selection of a senator from Peterborough is discussed. All are agreed that our city is entitled to this distinction, and that both parties should unite, as they appear to be doing, in order to secure it. As "Progress" so aptly says, partisanship should not figure in the question. Neither should personal animosity be allowed to deprive the community of a well-merited honor.

But "Progress" proposes an all but impossible program. Even the "Greater Peterborough Association" could hardly be expected to agree upon an appointee. And if they did, there is only a slight chance that their selection would find favor in another quarter, so that negotiations would wind up just where they started.

Parliamentary experience may not be absolutely essential, but it is highly desirable. Not every business man, however successful in his own line, would make an efficient senator. Such an official must have a working knowledge of public affairs and the science of government. The Administration at Ottawa can be trusted with the task of making an appointment that will advance the public welfare and elevate the standard in the Red Chamber. Peterborough does not lack senatorial timber. It may be impossible to please everybody, but if an appointment is made, the disappointed will accept the inevitable and join in congratulations. The old and familiar custom used in making such selection is likely to be followed. Faithful public service will be rewarded, and in the recommendation submitted to the powers at Ottawa the opinions of all prominent citizens will be given the same consideration.

MR. ROWELL AND ADVERTISING.

MR. ROWELL, the leader of the Opposition in the Ontario Legislature, does not play the political game fairly. He insists upon attempting to get the Government into corners by adopting measures that no one knows better than Mr. Rowell himself would at least result in confusion and which he would himself hesitate to enforce if he were Premier of the Province.

Mr. Rowell believes that the Government should pass a law making it illegal for any newspaper to carry a liquor advertisement, even though the majority of the papers have refused to accept any more of these contracts. To pass such a law would simply mean that Ontario would be flooded with newspapers from the Province of Quebec, sent to paying subscribers or distributed free by the men whose advertisements appear in them. The Legislature has no control over the postal system of the country.

The residents of this city do not lack an illustration of how such legislation would work out. An evening paper published in Toronto still carries liquor advertisements, and the circulation of that paper has trebled at least in Peterborough since the other Toronto journals have closed their columns to this class of business. Anyone can take a census of the temperance people of the community by watching their choice when they buy a Toronto paper at the newstands.

To make such a law effective it would be necessary for the Dominion Parliament to take action and deny the mails to circulars and newspapers advertising liquor. This would be a simple matter so far as Canadian publishers are concerned, but the postal union agreement must be observed. Foreign papers and circulars would still come into the country unless that agreement was abrogated.

RAISE MORE FOOD.

OVER IN THE UNITED STATES they are having the same agitation for a greater production of foodstuffs. According to the Buffalo Express the Department of Agriculture advises householders to plant small gardens and so help to reduce the cost of living. Farmers are advised to turn their usual oat acreage into spring wheat this year. That would be in line with a general speeding up of farm production which is now necessary.

Assistant Secretary Vrooman of the Department of Agriculture, says: "Of the most important of two things which the United States can do for the Allies in the case of war—namely to finance or to feed them—perhaps the more important is to maintain a steady supply of foodstuffs to their shores."

Here in Canada there is a necessity for more production, aside altogether from the needs of the armies in Europe. The home supply is short and prices are excessively high. The prospects are that these prices will go even higher before the end of the year, no matter what may be done on the farms in the way of extending operations. Every resident of the city should provide for his own family by raising vegetables on every foot of his garden lot and by cultivating vacant land if the opportunity to do so arises. The householder and the farmer who adds to the supply of foods is conferring a double benefit, one upon himself and the other upon the Empire. Let the Canadian farmer do his best and he cannot raise enough this year to overstock the market or to depress prices to such an extent that he will be unable to make a profit on what he sells.

Mayor Duffus has called a meeting to be held tonight in the rooms of the Patriotic Fund, for discussing further this question of greater production. Let everyone interested turn out in his own behalf and as a measure of patriotism.

CHINA'S GREAT VICTORY.

CHINA HAS ALWAYS been looked upon as the least progressive country in the world, and yet the people have achieved the greatest triumph over a vice which had blighted their race as a national curse. For years the use of opium has enslaved tens of millions in China. It may be a moot question whether the opium or the liquor habit is the more harmful, but it is agreed that of the two the former is the harder to stamp out. But now the vice of China is to be exterminated. After this date, the opium traffic, so far as China is concerned, must cease altogether.

Twelve years ago the spirit of reform first appeared in China, when the people aimed at the restoration of the yellow race to its old-time prestige. It was another case of conditions becoming so bad that something in the way of improvement had to be brought about.

The Mandarins and the rich, the governing classes, in tens of thousands of cases, smoked most of the night and slept most of the day. The poor, countless millions of them, lived existences of such utter monotony, discomfort and wretchedness, that they found in the pipe the only relief from misery. Whole populations were sinking, in some places had sunk, into indescribable lethargy and social decadence.

The empire was debauched and its strength sapped by what the victims themselves often described as "dirt." Even the poorer and more ignorant of the smokers were in most cases ashamed of their habit; while the educated looked upon it as the beginning of China's national sorrows as well as the cause of their own degradation.

Faced with such conditions, the reformers realized and declared that all attempts to create a new China must prove abortive if opium were allowed to continue to sap the vigor of the nation. The basis of national renovation, they saw, must be a sound and energetic people, and having gained control of the government they acted according to that principle. An edict against opium was issued in 1907. Part of it was as follows: "Since the first prohibition of opium, almost the whole of China has been flooded with poison. Smokers of opium have wasted their time, neglected their employment, ruined their constitutions and impoverished their households. Thus, for several decades China has presented a spectacle of increasing poverty and weakness. It arouses our indignation to speak of the matter. The court is now determined to make China powerful; and it is our duty to urge our people to reformation in this respect. We decree, therefore, that within a limit of ten years this harmful muck be fully and entirely wiped away."

The regulations against opium decreed that smokers report themselves and take out licenses; government officials under sixty years of age cleanse themselves of the habit within six months; all dens to be closed after six months; no pipes or lamps to be made or sold after the same period of time; the cultivation of poppy and the importation of the drug from abroad to be steadily diminished; shops for the sale of the drug to be closed on March 31, 1917, when the entire traffic was to come to an end.

The shops have been closed. China has been emancipated, and another proof is furnished that the world is growing better. The labors of the alien missionary may have had their effect, but, as usual, action on the part of the State was required to buttress the work of the Church.

EVEN IF YOU CANNOT keep up with the fashion in clothes, you can be in style by having a backyard or vacant lot garden.

THE DAY IS COMING when a man can declare his devotion to the Empire without giving offence to some neighbor with a hyphen in his name.

JUST NOW CANADA needs something more than a patriotic demonstration on Dominion Day. It is practical patriotism rather than the noisy variety that counts in a crisis.

OPINIONS OF OTHER EDITORS.

Paying Off Social Debts.

(Detroit News.)

Now is the time when the wise ones among the faithful begin asking their lady friends to the $2 and $3 shows. It is generally understood that members of certain churches, who live up to the regulations of Lent refrain from theatregoing during the forty days before Easter. Hence the sudden generosity on the part of the long-headed swains.

She Knew the Brute.

(People's Journal, Dundee.)

A story is circulating in the city about a bright youth who thought he would be funny with the girl on the tramcar. He asked for a ticket to the Dardanelles. The lady said nothing, but gave him a penny ticket. When the car reached the recruiting office she said sweetly: "Here you are, sir!" Then the band struck up.

What's the Matter With Sir Sam?

(Woodstock Sentinel-Review.)

General Sir Sam Hughes made a most remarkable statement the other day on the occasion of his visit to New York. Asked by a reporter as to his views on the position occupied by the United States, he said it would be presumption for him to advise the United States as to what it should do in case of war. Of course, everybody knows that Sir Sam knows just what the United States ought to do, but what is coming over him that he allows modesty to interfere with his telling?

BOY SCOUTS IN WAR TIME

One thing the war has shown the rest of the world is the vlue of the Boy Scout training. The British Government evidently trusts a Boy Scout as is shown in the recent notive appearing in the newspapers of Great Britain, and reading as follows:

> "The Government requires one thousand Boy Scouts, between the ages of fiften and eighteen, for shipbuilding at Sandwich, Kent. They will be enlisted in the Royal Engineers, be paid at the rate of 1s. 3d. per day, and parents will be entitled to soldiers' separation allowance."

Boy Scouts in Great Britain and Ireland, in France, Belgium, Italy and Roumania have answered the call without hesitation, and in Canada the Boy Scouts are leaving a record of service which every Canadian is proud of.

Not a military organization, but one in which the highest ideals of citizenship are taught. Loyalty and patriotism go hand in hand with service to ones home and country and if Boy Scouts join up with the military units it is only because they realize their duty and are prepared to do it when the call comes.

Scouts Will Aid in Production

"I promise to do my best to help other people at all times." One of three promises made by a boy on becoming a Scout is exemplified in the action of the Scouts of Cambridge, England, who have volunteered (over 200 strong) to assist the farmers in their locality with the production of food. Two hundred or more boys saved the berry crop in Ontario last year and the Scouts of Ottawa have already signified their intention of assisting where practicable in the production of farm and garden produce. Other Scouts in Canada will follow the example of their brother Scouts in Ontario and assist in the gathering of this year's crop. "A Scout is hungry but he need not be" is the caption of an article appearing in a recent issue of the official organ of the Boy Scouts of America and descriptive of the success of a troop in converting a vacant lot into a productive market garden. Making a garden is worth while just for the fun there is in it, and also for the very material help provided in the production of food for the country.

Church Property Was Under Insured

The recent loss of a seminary at Bathurst, N.B., brings to light an interesting instance of the under-insurance which is still too common in Canada in the case of property controlled by religious bodies or devoted to religious purposes. The reverend fathers who conducted the Bathurst institution were formerly located at Caraquet, N.B. They were burned out there on Dec. 31, 1915, their building, which had cost $250,000, being insured for only $66,800. The Bathurst building was then being completed by the same Order for the purposes of a theological college and the students from Caraquet were moved into it until other arrangements could be made. On March 6 the Bathurst building, which had cost $150,000, was destroyed, the insurance being only $55,000.

Thus, within fifteen months, two fires have destroyed property to the value of $400,000 on which there was only $120,000 insurance. This heavy direct loss must be a serious matter for the Order, and we imagine the circumstances will have a prejudicial effect upon the results of any fresh appeal for funds. The facts show strongly the necessity imposed upon those in responsible charge of religious and philanthropic institutions of making arrangements by which the financial loss arising from fire can be adequately met in a business-like manner through insurance. With the present numerous and urgent demands upon the generosity of the well-disposed, oppeals arising from a distinctly avoidable misfortune are likely perhaps to meet with a chilly reception.

Wit and Wisdom

Obliging

For the purpose of advertising fishing rods, a shopkeeper hung a large rod outside his shop, with an artificial fish at one end of it. Late one night Perkins, who had been dining a bit too well, happened to see the fish. Going cautiously to the door, he knocked gently.

"Who's there?" demanded the shopkeeper from an upper window.

"Sh-h! Don't make a noise, but come down as quietly as you can," whispered Parkins.

Thinking something serious was the matter, the man dressed and stole downstairs. "Now, what is it?" he inquired.

"Hist!" admonished Perkins. "Pull in your line quick; you've got a bite."

The Real Boss

"Now," said the bridegroom to the bride when they returned from their honeymoon trip, "let us have a clear understanding before we settle down to married life. Are you the president or the vice-president of the society?"

"I want to be neither president nor vice-president," she answered. "I will be content with a subordinate position."

"What position is that, my dear?"

"Treasurer."

But He Escaped

"You seem to be late this morning."

"Yes; I was coming through the park on my motor cycle and when I wasn't looking a squirrel sneaked up and chewed the nuts off it."

Taking No Chances

Horace— There's your friend Simpkins. I am afraid he's going to get soaked to the skin. Why don't you ask him under your umbrella?

Ely—I'm afraid he would recognize it.

Plying the Needle.

You can utilize to good advantage the tops of the children's wornout white hose by turning them into socks. Stitch the hem on the machine and crochet around twice to hold the edge in shape.

To join lace and embroidery buttonhole the edges together instead of seaming them. It will be found that this makes a much smoother seam and will launder nicely.

The mother of boys knows how unsightly the drawstrings used in their blouses look when they show (which they always do). But if she will substitute elastic the same as she uses in her own blouses she will find the result much neater.

When tatting use a crochet hook instead of a pin for the joining and the work will be found to go much easier and quicker.

An Attractive Blouse.

A particular chic blouse has a novel shoulder yoke cut in one with portions of the front, the rest of which are slightly gathered, the juncture of the pieces being maneuvered with those little openwork seams which are so decorative in themselves that no other trimming is required.

EDITOR'S MAIL

Editor Review. In my former letter, providing assistance for agricultural production for the year 1917, I perhaps was too exacting in suggesting the closing of Collegiate Institutes for the six months of summer, and I appreciate your comment re such letter.

Whilst I do not presume to intimate that the girls of the Institutes and the lady teachers should engage in farm operations, yet I would suggest that all make some sacrifice if necessary rather than have the female population subjected to indignities, the robbing of husbands and families, or be driven away into slavery.

Today one of the greatest necessities to carry this war to a successful termination and suppress Prussian barbarism is the supplies necessary, and with the assistance in sight today thousands of acres in Ontario will practically remain uncultivated unless some extra provision is made, whether by a sacrifice of something or the importation of outside help.

Reference to the system of farming carried on today requiring skilled labor is not consistent with the existing conditions, because the experience of the farmer today reveals the fact that one of the most successful operators of modern farm machinery now is the bright Canadian boy, and, due to such machinery, the boy of fourteen years of age will accomplish more than would the full grown, able-bodied man some years ago.

The greater part of the operations of the farm is now carried on by the use of machinery, consequently the driving of horses is the main duty to perform, and almost any boy or slightly built teacher who holds the lines up during the grain seeding, root and corn planting, retiring at 9 p.m. and rising at 5:30 a.m., would be physically fit for almost anything.

Rather make some sacrifice than have the devastation of France, Belgium, Poland, Roumania and Serbia repeated here.

A REMARKABLE STATEMENT

Mrs. Sheldon Spent $1900 for Treatment Without Benefit. Finally Made Well by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Englewood, Ill. — "While going through the Change of Life I suffered with headaches, nervousness, flashes of heat, and I suffered so much I did not know what I was doing at times. I spent $1900 on doctors and not one did me any good. One day a lady called at my house and said she had been as sick as I was at one time, and Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound made her well, so I took it and now I am just as well as I ever was. I cannot understand why women don't see how much pain and suffering they would escape by taking your medicine. I cannot praise it enough for it saved my life and kept me from the Insane Hospital."—Mrs. E. SHELDON, 5657 S. Halsted St., Englewood, Ill.

Physicians undoubtedly did their best, battled with this case steadily and could do no more, but often the most scientific treatment is surpassed by the medicinal properties of the good old fashioned roots and herbs contained in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

If any complication exists it pays to write the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass., for special free advice.

WOMAN'S PROBLEM

Stripped Herself of Her Little Artifices to Save a Young Girl

By FRANK FILSON.

"Come here, girl, don't look at me as if I were a dragon!"

Elsie went forward and looked at Miss Ingleby with an expression of so much mingled hatred and admiration that the elder woman flashed her white teeth and her eyes twinkled exactly as they did in the posters with which almost every hoarding in the United States had been decorated at one time or another.

"On Thursday Morning I Will Give You My Answer."

She went forward defiantly, but a moment later somehow she found that she was crying upon Miss Ingleby's shoulder, while the singer caressed her and patted her hair gently.

"So I have stolen her beau away from her and she wants him back!" whispered Miss Ingleby. "Isn't that so, dearie?"

Elsie raised her head. "I shouldn't mind if—if you meant to marry Tom," she sobbed. "But I know you are only amusing yourself with him, because Tom is much younger than you."

"How old are you, child?" inquired Miss Ingleby.

"Twenty," said Elsie defiantly.

"And Tom?"

"Tom is twenty-five. And you must be nearly thirty," said Elsie. "So I know you don't mean to marry Tom. And we were to be married at Christmas, and now—now he won't speak to me."

The match between Elsie Lennon and Tom Banks was approved by all Kentville, for Tom was a rising young business man of the town and Elsie's father, old Major Lennon, who kept the summer hotel, had been one of the first settlers. And they had been sweethearts for years.

Since the singer had come to spend a couple of weeks' vacation, however, he had had no eyes for poor little Elsie. He seemed fascinated by the older woman's bright eyes and witty talk, her mature ways and air of the world.

"Never you mind; you shall have your Tom again," whispered Miss Ingleby encouragingly.

But it seemed a harder problem than Miss Ingleby had expected. She had not meant to lead Tom on. But a woman of the world often forgets that the light interchange of repartee and badinage may be the cut and thrust of mortal earnest to an inexperienced young man.

It was Tom who furnished her with her opportunity that evening when they sat together on the piazza.

"Miss Ingleby," he said, "I want to tell you something. You are going away on Thursday—but I don't want you to go out of my life. You have made me love you—"

"Love you!" she exclaimed. "Why, you are nothing but a boy!"

"I am twenty-five," he answered sullenly. "I know you may be a year or two older than I am. But where love exists age does not count. I—"

"Mr. Banks, listen to me," said the singer. "Do you think it the part of an honorable man to make love to one woman when you are engaged to another?"

"No, I don't," he cried. "But how can one help whom one loves? I am fond of Miss Lennon, but since I have known you that other love of mine has seemed tame and weak. I was only a boy when I became engaged—now you have made me a man."

"Will nothing I can say disillusion you?" asked Miss Ingleby despairingly.

"Nothing," he answered. "When I look at you you seem the incarnation of all beauty to me. I want you; I don't care for honor or duty; I want you."

Miss Ingleby rose up slowly. Her face was pale, her lips trembling.

"On Thursday morning I will give you my answer," she answered.

That was Tuesday evening. Tom Banks lived in a fever of happiness during the following day. He could scarcely attend to the details of his business. His whole being burned with a consuming passion for the beautiful singer. What though a few years in age separted them—two, or three, or five at most? He had known of cases of greater disparity in which happy marriage had resulted. He did not think of Elsie at all.

And she had been a silent witness of that last interview. From her little room in the wing of the house she had seen Tom seize Miss Ingleby's hand and cover it with kisses; she could not tear herself away, even though the sight scorched her heart as though a burning hand were laid there.

She dreaded the evening meal. There were but three other guests at that season; her father and herself sat at a table facing Miss Ingleby. [illegible] hotel ever since their engagement. Surely Tom would spare her his presence that night. But his infatuation proved too strong for him. He entered and bowed coldly to her, nodded to the old major, who, absorbed in his soup, saw nothing of the little tragedy, and waited for Miss Ingleby to appear. And Elsie could not tear herself away, though she knew that each glance between them was like an arrow in her heart.

The door opened and a woman came in. A gray-haired woman, with wrinkles round her eyes and mouth, and pallid cheeks. She was dressed in a plain black suit of antiquated cut; she was just motherly-looking body of forty-odd years. The major loked up and stared hard.

"Who is that, Elsie?" he whispered, as she seated herself at Tom's table.

"Miss Ingleby!" stammered the girl in amazement.

The rest of the meal was passed in absolute silence. Elsie's eyes took in every detail of the incident. She saw the expression of amazement that crept into Tom's eyes, saw him attempt to speak, choke, and at last rise and hurry from the room. And Miss Ingleby, brave Miss Ingleby who had stripped herself naked of her little artifices to save another woman, sat there unconcerned, the cynosure of all eyes, making a courageous show of eating until the last course was served. Then she went to her room.

There Elsie found her afterward. She understood that the elder woman had made atonement for her offense. There could be none greater than that. The dazzling beauty, the pride of the footlights, turned into a plain old woman to save an innocent girl's heart.

"Why did you do it?" whispered Elsie.

"Because," answered Miss Ingleby slowly, "I was young once, and sweet and innocent—like you."

She kissed her good-bye and none of them saw her again. But on the Piazza Elsie found Tom, walking like a madman. When he saw her he came humbly up to her.

"Elsie," he said, "you know what sort of a fool I have been. I suppose we can never be the same to each other again, but if you will give me a chance—"

"Perhaps we can be more, Tom," she whispered. And she knew that from that moment hers would be the stronger soul, that the innocence of youth had yielded to the knowledge of maturity; that the sheltering love she bore Tom was immeasurably stronger than the girlish adoration which was gone for ever.

Cities Are Transients.

What cities, as great as this, have once triumphed in existence, had their victories as great, joy as just and as unbounded, and, with short sighted presumption, promised themselves immortality? Posterity can hardly trace the situation of some; the sorrowful traveler wanders over the awful ruins of others; and, as he beholds, he learns wisdom and feels the transience of every sublunary possession.—Oliver Goldsmith.

Swallow It Quick.

Impatient people water their miseries and hoe up their comforts; sorrows are visitors that come without invitation, but complaining minds send a wagon to bring their troubles in. Many people are born crying, live complaining, and die disappointed; they chew the bitter pill which they would not even know to be bitter if they had the sense to swallow it whole in a cup of patience and water.—Charles H. Spurgeon.

Crossing Africa in Motorboat.

Lieutenant Gratz of the German army has succeeded in crossing Africa in a motorboat. The most important geographical result of the enterprise appears to be the discovery that there is a continuous waterway from the source of the Zambezi, in northern Rhodesia, to the River Kongo, which is thus proved to be the longest river in Africa. In 1909 the same official crossed Africa in a motorcar.

Moral Indifference.

If ignorance and passion are the foes of popular morality, it must be confessed that moral indifference is the malady of the cultivated classes. The modern separation of enlightenment and virtue, of thought and conscience, of the intellectual aristocracy from the honest and vulgar crowd, is the greatest danger that can threaten liberty.—Henri Frederic Amiel.

Ruskin's Creed of Work.

The man or woman who does work worth doing is the man or woman who lives, breathes and sleeps that work; with whom it is ever present in his or her soul; whose ambition is to do it well and feel rewarded by the thought of having done it well. That man, that woman, puts the whole country under an obligation.—John Ruskin.

ALASKAN DEVELOPMENT

Its Railways May be Linked up With Lines in British Columbia

The development of Alaska, which is now occupying the attention of the United States Government, will benefit British Columbia very considerably, experts say. The Pacific Coast Province is looking forward to the time when the main line of the Grand Trunk Pacific will be linked up to the system of Alaskan railways about to be built by the United States, thus providing a new northern avenue of commerce for Canada. From Prince Rupert the Alaskan boundary can be reached by a steamship trip of forty miles and the traveller returning from the land of the Northern Lights can be well on his way to Chicago over the new Transcontinental route before he would reach Seattle by the older method of travelling down the coast by steamship. Governor Strong of Alaska, in his annual report just published, says that "everything done in Finland in population, wealth, and material development is possible in Alaska on a much larger scale." With a climate very like that of Alaska and with one-fourth Alaska's area Finland supports two millions seven hundred and fifty thousand people, she has over three millions head of live stock; she produces annually some nine hundred thousand tons of grain and legumes. This development is in part a result of good roads, canals and a railway system aggregating two thousand five hundred miles of line. The new railways and wagon roads building in British Columbia and the Yukon will diminish Alaska's severe handicap in transportation matters, and as Alaska's fishing, mining and farming opportunities are much greater than those of Finland, British Columbia's northern neighbor has obviously a bright future.

A POULTRY ALPHABET

A sickly bird is rarely worth doctoring, the axe being an excellent surgical instrument to apply to sick fowls.

Balanced rations supply maximum of nourishment with minimum of waste.

Cull closely, for it does not pay to board idlers.

Do not attempt too much to accomplish thoroughly.

Every insect left to mature will decrease the profits of the flock.

F-i-l-t-h spells failure.

Good stock is the best foundation but it must be handled with common sense.

Hens are not magicians, so can not manufacture eggs unless given proper materials.

Indolence and poultry breeding make a combination which would bankrupt a wealthy fancier.

Just a little observation will prove that the I-know-it-alls never make successful poultrymen.

Kindness shown to fowls pays in increased egg supply.

Lice multiply rapidly in uncleanly surroundings.

May chicks, pushed to maturity, make fall layers to fill in the time when earlier hatched birds are resting.

No mixed flock can give the satisfaction of a single-breed.

One's favorite breed is usually the best with which to win success.

Pullets should be separated from cockerels as soon as sex can be distinguished.

Quickly kill the chicks which are dwarfed or crippled when hatched.

Rush young birds toward maturity if you wish large profits.

Select breeders early and dispose of all other male birds.

Try to waste no feed, either by over-feeding, careless methods, or one-sided diet.

Unless you give your flock regular care, they are not likely to return profits.

Very few poultrymen know so much that they can learn nothing from the experience of others.

Watch the flock constantly. It is the eye of the owner that gets results.

CANADIANS HAVE HUMOR

Praise For Comrades From Son of Neutral General

"I'm an American, but I've got to say this: the spirit of the Canadians at the front is wonderful. They've got a sense of humor, and that's what pulls them through," declared Pte. Harry W. Wilmer, in Ottawa, after having been wounded at the front. Wilmer's father is a retired adjutant-general of the United States army, L. A. Wilmer of Baltimore.

Pte. Wilmer got off the Cunard liner Ascania at Quebec with seven bits of shrapnel still embedded in his left shoulder and as he put it himself, "Goodness knows how many bits they took out of me in the hospital at Boulogne." He is from Baltimore and San Francisco, and came all the way from the last-named city in October, 1914, to enlist in the 21st Battalion, the famous Eastern Ontario battalion which rendered such yeoman service during the early days of the war. Back after ten months' hard fighting at the front, he said, "I guess I got a few of the Huns." He expected to go back again.

Pte. Wilmer says the only things with any life in them inhabiting Ypres are rats, and cats gone wildly insane with the shell fire. The city is flattened flat, not a building standing. Near Hill 60 a "whizz bang" sailed over and exploded near him. He received the majority of the flying pieces in his body. One of his most thrilling experiences was in an attack on the Hun trenches at St. Eloi. Wilmer dashed over the ground with bombs in his hands. "I was so excited I didn't know what was happening," he said laughing.

LORD FRENCH'S WARNING

Invasion of England Possible—Not Probable, Because Unexpected

Lord French, speaking at Wolverhampton, said that whenever we heard of naval engagements in the Channel it was always possible that behind more enemy ships of war transports might be bringing troops to land in this country at some unoccupied point. "The whole history of war," he continued, "teaches us that what happens is something that we do not expect. This war has taught us this if any war ever did. Therefore I want you to remember that invasion is possible. I do not say it is probable or imminent or menacing—but it is possible."

Charged Air Squadron

Two British aeroplanes, says an official report, encountered seventeen German machines behind the hostile lines in France. The Britishers dived into the middle of the German formation and attacked. One pilot got to very close quarters with a German machine, which burst into flames and was seen to plunge to earth. He then attacked a second machine which was driven down and fell in a field. A third machine went down vertically and was seen to crash against the ground.

For supplying stout to a wounded soldier a Ramsgate, England, woman was fined $50.

RATIONS OF SERBIANS

Stew and Bread Are Mainstays—No Luxuries

The standard ration of the Serbian soldier is stew and bread. Paprika almost always enters into the stew in some major or minor portion. On the best days two stews are sometimes served, each well peppered. They eat a tremendous quantity of bread, as do all the Balkan peoples, and though it is coarse it is of very good quality.

The morning meal is coffee and bread, or sometimes hot sugared milk and bread, when luck is with the commissariat. At noon there is a rich and sustaining stew, made with potato, rice or flour thickening and at night something else of the same sort. Here and there one sees an epicure having his meal apart. He will cook his ration over a tiny fire, combining it with what he may have been able to buy during the day. Back of the fire, if he has been lucky, is a little rack of sticks on which strips of beef are being smoke dried. It is an excellent addition to the meat and a fine emergency ration.

In all the army luxuries have been sacrificed and only necessities are carried. That is what remains of an army of strong, tough, enduring peasants, accustomed to common fare and hardships, and now animated by a spirit which is compounded of fury and desperation, and of a stubborn disbelief that in the end they can fail in their fight.

It's not what the player does in a baseball game, but what the umpire says, that counts.

Money cannot buy an ounce of love, but it can purchase tons of sympathy.

Insurance and Financial Review of March 1917, has the Following to Say of Scott & Walmsley Limited

The underwriting firm of Scott and Walmsley, which is so well and favorably known throughout Canada for its sound business principles, and which has under its management The Queen City Fire Insurance Company, The Hand-in-Hand Fire Insurance Company, The Millers and Manufacturers Insurance Company, and the Fire Insurance Exchange Corporation, has had one of the best years in its experience.

During a particularly trying year, when many fire companies were well satisfied if they succeeded in breaking even, it had the happy experience of making a profit in the four companies under their management of $84,000.00, and this after paying liberal dividends to shareholders and to policyholders in the mutual and stock companies.

Fire underwriting is always something of a gamble, but when one sees, year after year, a substantial profit made by the sam underwriters, there is something more than an element of luck entering into it, and credit must be given to the men in charge, not only for sound business methods, but also for careful underwriting. Had the same care and attention been given to detail, in many of our Canadian fire insurance companies which have gone out of business, there would have been a different story to tell.

The shareholders of the companies under the management of Joseph Walmsley, Col. John D. Chipman and F. E. Dingle, of Scott and Walmsley, Ltd., general agents of the four companies, are to be congratulated on having three such able men to look after their affairs.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

BY JOHN W. S. McCULLOUGH, M.D., D.P.H., CHIEF OFFICER OF THE PROVINCIAL BOARD OF HEALTH.

INFANT WELFARE.

Convulsions.

THESE ARE COMMONLY CAUSED by indigestion or indeed any acute illness. Rarely are they due to brain disease. An injection of soapsuds and a warm mustard bath made by adding one-half a cupful of mustard in a half-full bathtub with water not above 105 Deg. F. Test the water with your arm bared above the elbow. It is easy to burn a baby by having the water too warm. While this is being done get a doctor.

Colds and Contagious Diseases.

Acute colds are very contagious. Children with colds or sore throat should be kept away from other children. The disease may be diphtheria, scarlet fever, or measles. They are all dangerous.

Skin Eruptions, Rashes.

If the baby has any skin rash, get a doctor; and if the disease is pronounced to be contagious notify the health officer and submit to the health regulations. Don't be careless about letting your neighbor's children get the disease from yours. Recollect that your child has probably contracted his illness from someone's carelessness.

Whooping Cough.

Whooping cough doesn't begin with the "whoop." It begins like any other cough, and after several days the whooping sound ending like the "coo" of a pigeon, marks the true condition. The contagion lasts about four weeks, or as long as the whoop. It is a dangerous disease in young children, and kills more babies than scarlet fever and measles put together. Besides it is a condition upon which tuberculosis is often grafted. Children with a cough should be kept away from other children. They should not go to school, or be taken on trains or into public places.

Diarrhoea.

If the baby has too frequent movements it is always safe to give a teaspoonful of castor oil and cut down the food supply. If the baby is taking the bottle cut off ~~milk or~~ dilute the mixture or give boiled water till the doctor comes. If diarrhoea is severe cut off all food. In older children give only water and gruel or dry toast. But delays are dangerous. Have the doctor's advice.

Constipation.

If the baby has not had a movement for 48 hours, give him a small enema of two or three ounces of warm soapsuds or a suppository of soap or glycerine. Milk of magnesia—one dessert spoonful at six months, should be given to assure a movement next day. Enemas and suppositories cannot be continued as a routine measure as they may irritate the rectum.

(1) Have a regular time for bowel movements. Stick to this rigidly.

(2) Give plenty of fluids. Boil the water to be certain of its purity, and give it to the baby freely. An infant after a few months should take one and one-half to two ounces of boiled water in the twenty-four hours, increasing to six to eight ounces by one year.

(3) Diet, orange juice and prune juice are useful in preventing constipation and good for the baby.

(4) Too little fat in the food (cream) tends to cause constipation.

(5) As the child gets older, coarser cereals and brown bread are useful.

(6) Encourage the use of vegetables, especially ones of coarse fibre.

(7) Massage the belly, up on the right, across the top, and down on the left.

Earache.

Children often have earache as the result of large tonsils and adenoids or with the course of a cold. Earache is dangerous as it may develop into a running ear, deafness or mastoid disease. Heat applied may give temporary relief, but it is a case for the doctor. The competent physician will, if necessary, puncture the ear-drum and relieve the trouble.

Eczema.

Eczema rashes are often due to bad digestion or improper food. No mother should try the cure of such a trouble. Have the doctor ferret out the cause and apply proper treatment.

LADY STUDENTS OF QUEEN'S TO DO MEN'S WORK

FARMERS' ORGANIZATIONS GUARANTEE STEADY SUMMER'S WORK.

CO-EDS WILL CAMP OUT.

KINGSTON, April 2—The call of the Empire for increased food production has been answered in a very practical way by the lady students of Queen's University. Some time ago a movement was started at the college to enlist the help of the girls on fruit farms in the Niagara Peninsula during the summer, to fill the vacancies caused by the rallying of the men to the colors. Already sixteen girls have decided to go and before the college closes it is expected still more will join the party.

The students will go to one of four camps in the vicinity of Hamilton and will live in hostels managed by the Y.W.C.A. It is thought the Queen's girls will go to Oakville. A matron and cook will be provided and the girls will share the rest of the work. The board will be $4 per week.

The farmers' organizations have guaranteed steady work for the students all summer. The farmers will call at the camps in the morning for the helpers and bring them back at night. On wet days they will work in jam factories. The rates of pay are 1 1-2 cents per box for picking strawberries, 2c for raspberries, 15 cents an hour for picking peaches and apples and for hoeing and weeding.

The Queen's girls will leave for the field of operations about May 15 and will remain till college reopens in the fall.

A MIXUP IN O'REILLY CASE

COBOURG PAPER HAS THE LOCAL CHIEF FACING A HIGH COURT ACTION.

When Chief Ruse of Cobourg arrested James O'Reilly at the request of Chief Thompson, he had just been allowed to go on suspended sentence by Judge Roger. In reporting the case the Cobourg Sentinel Star says:

"The Peterborough police had the charge laid some time ago, and in the meantime another man was arrested as O'Reilly. Now the Peterborough chief of police is up against a high court action for the false imprisonment of the other O'Reilly.

This statement is entirely wrong. No person by the name of O'Reilly was arrested on this charge and there is no high court action for damages so far as Chief Thompson is concerned.

WAS APPLICANT FOR POLICE JOB

John Candlin, a farm hand, stole $5 from the pocket of his landlady on Thursday last and this morning he appeared before the police magistrate to answer to the charge. A plea of guilty was entered and a sentence of one month in jail given.

Mrs. Sharman, the prisoner's landlady, told of the theft and also that Candlin owed her $9 for board.

Chief Thompson identified the prisoner as a man who had applied for a position on the local police force, remarking that the applicant apparently thought that it "takes a thief to catch a thief."

Was Young Man of Unusual Promise

Clarion Joel Baker, who died at the home of his parents, Dr. W. A. and Mrs. Baker, on Monday of last week, was a young man of unusual promise. He was 21 years old at the time of his death. He was the only son and only child of his parents. Had he lived six weeks longer he would have graduated B.A. of McMaster University. Dr. Gilmour, who came to the funeral as the representative of McMaster Faculty said in his brief address at the home that the Chancellor and Faculty had agreed unanimously to ask the Senate to confer the degree in absentia and that in all probability the name of the deceased would be enrolled among the graduates of the University, where his conspicuous talents were known and appreciated.

Five students came to the city from McMaster to represent the student body, Messrs. E. S. Cole, M. Fawthrop, Ibra Connors, Lepofsky and Harry Wilson. Mr. Cole, who is the president of the student body, spoke for ten minutes expressing the sympathy of the young men and women of McMaster, who felt this death that hod come so suddenly as a personal bereavement. Arrangements were made to have the body lie over Tuesday night in the chapel of the university before being taken on Wednesday to the town of Aylmer, Ont. Through the night the students took turns in standing beside the casket, two for each hour, as a tribute of respect for the memory of the departed. The floral tributes were many and beautiful, the faculty of McMaster University and the students being represented in this way as well as by deputation.

The service at the home was conducted by Rev. J. R. Webb, the pastor of Murray St. Baptist Church and the pallbearers were Messrs. W. Scott, Jethro Graham, Carl Browne Meldrum Fawthrop, Leon Webb and Charlie Lapp.

Dr. and Mrs. Baker have the sincere sympathy of the entire city.

Hats For Evening.

The edict of the French government that hats and simple gowns must be worn in the evening in public has already brought about the fashion in this country. Milliners are delighted over the change. They are offering all manner of brilliant and expensive hats to wear with low evening gowns. It has been a half dozen years or more since this fashion was accepted in America. Today one sees more than half a dozen fashionable women in the restaurants in the evening adopting it. The majority of these evening hats are of silver tulle or bullion cloth.

New Sweaters.

Most of the new sweaters, whether of Angora or of the various yarn weaves, are made to slip over the head. They are ample below the waist and have apron string belts and cravats, the former tying the rather loose garment in about the waist. The more Frenchy kinds have yokes and button ornaments.

MEN BURNED IN EFFORTS TO SAVE HORSES

ENNISMORE FARMER LOST HIS BARN AND ITS CONTENTS.

CATTLE ESCAPED.

Ennismore was visited by a very serious fire on Friday afternoon last in which Harry Cadigan and Bernard McManus had narrow escapes from serious burns in getting horses to safety.

On Friday Mr. McManus took his woodcutting machine to the Cadigan farm and the men had worked all morning on the wood. During the noon hour rest the men were in the barn smoking and it is thought that a spark from one of the pipes had, unnoticed, landed in the straw, because the mill had no sooner started than smoke was sen issuing from the top of the barn. Mr. McManus and Mr. Cadigan both rushed to the horse stables, which were found to be filled with smoke. Mr. Cadigan got his team out but Mr. McManus found the flames reaching near his team and the horses in a very frenzied state. He succeeded in getting them untied and was leading them out when one horse braced itself in the doorway and had to be pulled out.

Mr. McManus was badly burned on the arms, hands and head and Mr. Cadigan on the hands and face. The horses were singed and one of them badly burned on the ears.

Within five minutes after the horses had been rescued the barn fell in.

All Mr. Cadigan's farm machinery, hay, some grain and four pigs were destroyed. The cattle were loose in the farmyard. The loss is not covered by insurance.

From nose to chin I'm loving her.
At nights she haunts my dreams.
When splitting rails I think of her.
And she may think of Jeems.

Fair maiden, take my beating heart
And tread it under foot.
Call me a chump or other names.
Leave me alone to root.

Reject the love I give to thee,
My sighs repay with scorn.
Tell me to chaw up paris green
As chaws the hog the corn.

Drive me to death by shot or rope
And laugh in fiendish glee,
But my last word shall be of love—
The love I'm loving thee.

The poetry was copied and sent to the fair Josephine, and what do you think happened? Why, she sent for Jim and asked:

"Well, why didn't you tell me this three months ago and save time? Of course I'll marry you!"

See? Just as easy as rolling off a log when you know how to fling the sentiment around and make it rhyme.

Rhyme That Hung in the Parlor.

They had a sorrowful circumstance at Farmer Gilman's, and when they had told me all about it I put it into a poem to be hung up in the parlor. It read:

We had a bull—where is he now?—
We had a man named Sam;
We had a creek beyond the barn,
That creek it has a dam.

The ice upon the dam was weak
When Sam went out to slide,
But he'd no fear in his bold heart
As he did slip and glide.

Our bull was on the hill above
As Sam he did disport.
He gave a beller and a snort
And gayly did cavort.

But when a little time had passed
Something aroused his ire
He pawed the ground an acre round
Until he did perspire.

And, careless of the peril great,
Sam slid and slid around
Until there suddenly was heard
An awful thunderous sound.

Down rushed the bull upon the ice—
A crash—a smash—a race,
And that 'ere Sam and that 'ere bull
Went down in fond embrace.

Oh, bulls a-pawing on the hills;
Oh, hired men named Sam,
Take my advice and keep away
From things that have a dam!

Not to Be Cajoled.

The lady of the house hesitated.

"Are my answers all right?" she asked.

"Yes, madam," replied the census man.

"Didn't bother you a bit, did I?"

"No, madam."

"Feel under some obligations to me, don't you?"

"Yes, madam."

"Then perhaps you won't mind telling me how old the woman next door claims to be!"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Avoiding the Stereotyped.

"Why are you putting up all those tents?"

"Because," replied Mr. Cumrox, "mother and the girls want to do something original in a social way. They want to give something in connection with which the words 'house guest' and 'house party' cannot be used."—Washington Star.

CONSTITUTION DISCUSSED COMMITTEES APPOINTED

At Meeting Held by Engineers' Club.

A meeting of the Engineers' Club of the city was held in the Oriental Hotel Saturday evening. After dinner the members adjourned to the parlor. The meeting opened with a discussion of the proposed constitution of the club, and after some suggestions had been made it was referred to the executive for further consideration.

It was decided that regular meetings would be held on the second Thursday of each month from September to May inclusive, and that the present officers would hold their positions until May 1st, 1918.

The following committees were appointed by the president:

Membership: P. P. Westbye, R. H Parsons, A. G. Grier, B. L. Barnes, P. L. Allison.

Meetings and Papers: R. B. Rogers, N. C. Mills, G. R. Langley, D. Easson, V. S. Foster.

Entertainment: A. W. Spence, W. J. Dickenson, R. N. Early, S. H. Holden.

The first named in each committee is chairman of that committee.

The paper of the evening was read by Mr. A. Gordon Grier, of the Canadian General Electric Co., entitled the "Status of the Engineer." Mr Grier's paper showed much knowledge of the subject and was quite successful in its main object of promoting discussion amongst the members.

The following members were present: Messrs. C. E. Canfield, R. B Rogers, H. O. Fisk, R. H. Parsons, C. E. Sisson, R. N. Early, D. L. McLaren, H. A. Fife, Wm. Sangster, G. R. Munroe, N. Marr, G. A. G. Goulet, N. C. Mills, W. Munn, S. H. Holden, Gerald Hall, A. G. Grier, L. D. W. Magee, P. L. Allison, W. S. Foster, R. L. Dobbin, H. J. Lungren, N. D. Seaton, P. P. Westbye, W. J. Dickenson, A. B. Gates, B. L. Barnes.

The club now has a membership of thirty-five, and those instrumental in its foundation are very much gratified by the interest being taken in it. The officers are as follows:

Hon. President—R. B. Rogers.
President—C. E. Canfield.
Vice-President—P. P. Westbye.
Sec'y-Treas.—R. L. Dobbin.

Directors: Messrs. G. R. Munroe, C. E. Sisson, Wm. Sangster, H. O. Fisk, R. H. Parsons.

The next regular meeting of the club will be held on Thursday, 12th April, and for that evening an effort is being made to have Mr. J. A. Shaw, chief electrical engineer of the Canadian Pacific Railway, read a paper on the "Electrification of Steam Railways." This will be confirmed later.

KELLY'S MIND WAS A BLANK

UNABLE TO RECALL NAME OF THE FRIEND WITH WHOM HE SUPPED.

William Kelly will have to spend some days, weeks or months in jail unless he tells who it was that supplied him with liquor on Saturday.

At this morning's session of the police court Kelly was charged with being drunk and he pleaded guilty. His familiar countenance was recognized by the magistrate, who queried as to how long it was since Kelly had been in the dock before. Kelly stated that he had been asked by a man to go for a drive and as an inducement had been promised a drink. The drive and the whiskey were enjoyed and Kelly said "Au revoir" to his friend at the exhibition grounds and when he walked back to the business section of the city was so drunk that a police officer took him in charge. He could not remember the friend's name, where he lived or anything that would lead to identification.

Chief Thompson asked the witness why he had stated that he "would do six months twice a year before he would tell who gave him the wet goods." Not getting a satisfactory answer the chief asked for a commitment on contempt proceedings and it was granted.

The fine on the drunk charge was $10 and costs.

VALUE OF THE SOUP POT

That the disappearance of the soup pot in the American kitchen was one of the reasons for the present high cost of living is a statement made by Miss Pearl MacDonald, economic expert, of Pittsburgh. She added:

"In making soups, meats and bones can be used which are not used at all by American women. I also would recommend the making of clear soups only on rare occasions as in the clear soups you remove substances which are highly nutritious."

Refraining from expensive cuts and steaks also was recommended by the speaker.

CAPACITY CROWD IS PROMISED FOR MEETING TUESDAY NIGHT.

Announcement of the Greater Production meeting in the Opera House tomorrow night was made to the pupils of the city schools today and young Peterborough will be well represented at the meeting. The 247th band will play concert numbers and Mr. Arthur Milton, baritone soloist at St. Paul's Church, will sing.

All indications point to a capacity crowd so that citizens would be well advised to be at the theatre early.

The speakers previously announced will be on hand and give addresses in keeping with the object of the Greater Production campaign.

Can Replace Picture.

Senator Boyer recently gave out a piece of news that will be very welcome to Canadians who prize our national relics. One of the serious losses sustained by Canada in the burning of the Parliament House was the destruction of the picture of the Confederation conference which hung in the Railway Committee Room. The canvas showed all the figures who had finally brought to consummation the federation pact; each of the persons was represented by a true portrait. The canvas was destroyed and could never be restored, but the National Advisory Art Council has secured from Mr. Harris, the artist who painted the picture, the original drawings from which he painted the group. In the drawings, as in the picture, each of the fathers of Confederation is represented by a true portrait. The artist is too far advanced in years to paint another group, and it has not been thought advisable to have the work done from the drawings by another hand; but it is a consolation to know that the original drawings are now the property of Canada.

Dinosaur Bones Lost.

Two skeletons of the duckbilled Dinosaur were lost to science with the sinking recently by a German raider of the ship Mount Temple, according to Charles H. Sternberg, who found the bones in the Red Deer country in Alberta. The prehistoric specimens were 32 feet long, and were being sent to the British Museum in London. They filled 22 boxes and weighed 20,000 pounds.

FREDERICK FUNSTON WAS VERY SMALL PHYSICALLY BUT HAD PLENTY OF PLUCK

General Frederick Funston, whose recent sudden death was such a severe blow to the American army, which is none too well organized and can ill spare a good leader, was physically one of the smallest men in the military service of the United States. He was barely five feet five inches tall, and usually weighed less than 120 pounds. Not until 1896, when the Cuban insurrection was at its height, did Frederick Funston become known throughout the United States as a first-class fighting man, but his friends in Kansas where he spent his early manhood—long had so classified him.

As a student at the University of Kansas, when he weighed less than 100 pounds, he conquered a 200-pound "bad man" who threatened him with a razor. To add to the giant's humiliation, Funston marched him through the streets of Lawrence, Kan., at the point of a revolver, to a police station.

A few years later, while city editor of a paper in Fort Smith, Ark., young Funston stirred up intense feeling by attacking editorially the publication's own political party leaders during the absence of his editor in chief.

Many threats are said to have been made against Funston and the newspaper property, but he remained on guard until his superior returned, and then turned over the plant, unharmed. Incidentally, Funston also resigned.

Along the Santa Fe railroad they still recall how Funston, as a passenger train conductor, threw a drunken cowboy off a train, and later when he hurled a rock through a coach window, pursued him several miles on foot while the train waited.

GENERAL FUNSTON.

Funston's first experience on the firing line came in Cuba, where he commanded General Gomez's artillery with remarkable results.

After engaging in twenty-two battles and being wounded three times, he resigned his command because fifty guerrillas who had aided the Spaniards were executed against his wishes.

Captured by Spaniards on his way to Havana, he escaped death by swallowing a letter to the President of Cuba which would have proved his identity.

While a colonel of the famous Twentieth Kansas Volunteer Infantry in the Philippine war Funston performed feats of bravery that brought him the title of brigadier general. His capture of Aguinaldo River at Columpit under fire featured his work.

Funston has been described by his superiors as absolutely fearless. Ever ready to plunge into danger, he cared little whether his force equaled that of his opponent. One day, the story goes, when it appeared certain the Filipinos would destroy three companies under Funston's command, General Harrison Gray Otis inquired of the colonel how long he could hold his position.

"Until I am mustered out!" Funston replied; and he made good by repulsing the Filipinos.

When the volunteers were discharged, Funston retained his rank as member of the regular army. As a regular he made a mark by maintaining order in San Francisco during the disaster of 1906. Temporarily in charge of the troops at the Presidio, when the disturbance came, he quickly declared martial law and set about obtaining accommodations for the homeless, keeping down the cost of food, and arresting troublemakers. It was while he was in command of the troops at Vera Cruz in 1914 that he was raised to the rank of major-general. He then was 49 years old.

The ambition of Funston's youth was to go to West Point, but he failed in an entrance examination. In later years he repeatedly outranked West Pointers who were in school when he failed of admission.

What Japan Pays.

Japan's shipping is on the boom. New lines are reaching out for the trade with the continents and islands of the seas. Japan is the coming Britain of the Pacific, the Phœnicia of the Far East. Heavy subsidies are pouring profits into the pockets of ship-owners, and each vessel, from tug to liner, is paying for itself every day the war lasts.

Commercial connections are being made in new territory. Many say that these markets will revert to those who held them before the war broke out. But the Japanese are persistent and polite. A passenger on one of their liners knows what it is to be looked after. They are branching out in industry, and wages are almost as low as ever. Japan is sacrificing womanhood and manhood to win world markets. Other nations will be slow to pay the same price for gold.

Hungary's Crown.

The crown of Hungary was once within an ace of coming to London. When Kossuth struck his famous blow for Hungarian liberty in 1849 he obtained possession of the crown, and when compelled to flee the country buried it at Orsova. Four years later a flood made him fear for the safety of the precious diadem, and he gave orders for it to be disinterred and brought to him in London. Unfortunately one of his messengers talked indiscreetly of his errand, with the consequence that the Austrian Government gained knowledge of the secret, and unearthed the crown on Sept. 8, 1853.—London Chronicle.

Making It All Right.

An old lady who had been introduced to a doctor who was also a professor in a university, felt somewhat puzzled as to how she would address the great man.

"Shall I call you 'doctor' or 'professor'?" she asked.

"Oh! just as you wish," was the reply; "as a matter of fact, some people call me an old idiot."

"Indeed," she said, sweetly, "but, then, they are people that know you."—Tit-Bits.

Running A Gantlet

By WILLARD BLAKEMAN

A number of Britishers were recently talking about the question of England's maintaining a supremacy over the Suez canal when one of them said:

"They may be able to take it away from us by force of arms, but they can't do it by process of law."

"How so?" asked one of the party.

"I was a member of the British embassy at Berlin when the ambassador received a cipher telegram from London saying that a big block of stock of the Suez canal had been offered for sale at Cairo. He was directed to send some one there to make the purchase at any price. He called me into his private office, showed me the dispatch and told me to leave at once to do the job. He said further that every large power would be glad to control the canal in this way, and if it were known to the others there would be a race as to who would get there first to make the purchase. The Germans would be surely after it. If it were known that I was going to Cairo I might be waylaid by the German secret service. I considered this highly probable, and instead of leaving Berlin in my own proper person I stole out after dark.

"The route I chose was by rail to Genoa, thence by sea to Cairo. On the train in the same compartment with me was a lady who from her cast of features, her dark eyes and hair I set down as being Turkish. She was certainly of an oriental type and a very beautiful woman. It is quite a journey from Berlin to Genoa, and the lady and I were in the same compartment together for a long while. Smoking was not allowed in the compartment, but when at a certain time all had left it but she and I she took out a box of cigarettes and asked me in French—the medium between different nationalities on the continent—if I objected to her smoking. I said no, and she offered me the box. I declined the offer, whereupon she took out one, lighted it and began to smoke.

"My suspicions were aroused by seeing her every few moments apply her handkerchief to her mouth and nose, I fancying that she did so to inhale something on it that would counteract an effect. My suspicions were confirmed by a peculiar odor in the smoke and a languor stealing over me. I attempted to lower a window beside me, but was already so benumbed that I couldn't get it down. I had just enough command of my forces to smash the glass with my fist. The fresh air revived me, and when I turned again to the Turkish lady she, in well affected surprise, said:

"'Monsieur is sensitive to tobacco smoke?'

"'Very,' I replied.

"I was satisfied that she had been sent to delay me, and since by my manner I indicated that I was on my guard she made no further attempt to interfere with me. When we left the train at the border to take another I kept my eye on her and saw her heading for a telegraph office. I did not doubt that she would send a message to announce her failure, and some one else who stood ready would take up her work where she had left off.

"The first night out from Genoa I was walking the deck, taking my usual smoke before turning in. It was quite late, and there were but a few persons still up. I was near the stern of the vessel when a gentleman came from the taffrail and as he reached me stepped and said in French with an Italian accent:

"'The phosphorous illumination in the wake of the ship is very beautiful.'

"Without forethought I went the few yards between me and the taffrail and was looking over when the man who had followed me seized me and lifted me to throw me over. Luckily for me I had been an athlete at home, being fond of cricket, rowing and especially wrestling. My man was very strong, but I withstood his efforts.

"The next morning"—

"Hold on. What did you do with the other fellow?" asked one of the listeners.

"When I tell a story," replied the narrator, "I tell the story as I wish to tell it, and I don't feel obliged to answer questions."

"Oh, go on!"

"The next morning and all the rest of the time that I was on the ship I kept my room. I had become satisfied that some power—mind you, I don't say it was German—had let loose its bloodhounds to tear me to pieces if necessary to keep me from Cairo, and I didn't care to give any more of them an opportunity.

"I reached Cairo at night and, going to a hotel, went to bed thankful that I was not tossed about a corpse in Mediterranean waters. I would have enjoyed a good sleep had I not feared some spy with murderous intent was under my bed. As it was, I merely dozed and the next morning after breakfast went out to get a conveyance to take me to my destination. A jehu drove up, but before committing myself to his care I scrutinized him. In a twinkling I saw that he wore a wig and a false beard.

"'Thanks, no,' I said to him. 'I've met several of your friends already and have no desire to hobnob with any of you.'

"I walked to the place I wished to go, and before I left it the British government owned that block of stock. When I made the return journey I slept all the way. No one was interested in me."

Big Problem to Be Faced in Western Provinces.

That there are literally thousands of prosperous German farmers in the three Prairie Provinces who are enjoying unparalleled prosperity owing to the prevailing high prices of wheat but who steadfastly and stubbornly refuse to contribute to the Canadian Patriotic or other war funds in any way, is the statement of L. A. Guertin, of Vancouver, who has just made a three months' tour of Alberta, Saskatchewan, and Manitoba.

Some of these German farmers are admittedly naturalized Canadian subjects who have been residents of the Dominion for some time, according to the statements of Mr. Guertin, but the majority of them are of the hyphenated class who emigrated to Canada from the American side some years ago and have established themselves very comfortably on large farms in the majority of instances. The stand they have taken in regard to contributing, despite their evident affluence, is creating much adverse comment in many of the towns and villages throughout the three Provinces mentioned.

The number of Germans and Austrians—but mostly thrifty Germans—in some of these prairie towns is surprising, according to Mr. Guertin, In some of the towns there are easily one-half or one-third Germans either engaged in agriculture or some of its allied industries. In the case of east Regina, for instance, Mr. Guertin was informed that the voters' list showed that fully fifty per cent. of the residents there were Germans or of German extraction. And they were all well off and had ample money to spend for all the luxuries they desired, due mainly to the high prices they secured for their grain and other products. Mr. Guertin cited the case of one German farmer in Saskatchewan who had 15,000 bushels of potatoes stored awaiting a further rise in prices and declined to sell at the prevailing prices. As there was no actual scarcity of potatoes he could not be forced at present to sell his crop. And with very few exceptions indeed, could these Germans be induced to contribute to the Canadian Patriotic fund or any other of the numerous tag day donations or similar collections which all loyal Canadians have been contributing to so liberally.

A good pointer: The weather vane—sometimes a disappointer. Still, it has its good points.

Judged by His Own Case.

"Pop, what is the lull before the storm?" "The honeymoon, my son."—Exchange.

Its Use.

Nick—What good is an asbestos curtain, anyway? Nax—Keeps the show from being roasted.

Always Down.

The Boss—Anybody call me up while I was out?

Office Boy—Yes, sir; your wife.

"Oh, you're mistaken. She never calls me that way."

His Advantage.

The second officer of the brig was in the act of upbraiding the able seaman, Aaron Tappin, for his weakness for rum. Said the second officer:

"Tappin, you might have been a second officer, like me, instead of a sailor before the mast."

"Stow that stuff," answered the able seaman. "When I'm drunk I'm an admiral."—London Opinion.

Hebrew Writer Declares Brave Armenian People Wear a Crown of Thorns

"FROM more than one area of the war zone, from Belgium, from Galicia, from Turkish Armenia the same story reaches us; the same dread saga of the wanderings of whole populations under the spur of massacre, rape, hunger. Little children fall like flies by the wayside and new children are born on the march. Mothers go mad. Girls throw themselves into the rivers. Men are killed and buried like dogs." writes Israel Zangwill.

"'I saw all our women and my mother torn to pieces by the monsters who disputed for possession of them,' says the old Princess in Candido, 'and I was left for dead amid a heap of corpses. For three hundred leagues around similar scenes were going on without any omission in the five prayers a day prescribed by Mahomet.'

"It is impossible in reading the evidence as to the treatment of the Armenians in the Ottoman Empire not to be reminded of this and other episodes by which Voltaire strove to disconcert the optimism of his Pangloss Episodes which, however, seemed to transcend the license of even satirical invention and to have no warrant in the actual facts of mediaeval history.

"Alas, we now know that Voltaire's imagination fell below, not exceeded, the diabolism of human nature at these moments when maddened, by war lust aggravated, let us charitably admit by war panic, it returns to that pre-historic animal nature through which the soul has slowly struggled.

"But Belgium has almost all the world for her friends and the faith in restoration goes before her exiles like a pillar of cloud by day and a pillar of fire by night. Even the Jews of the pale, torn and tossed between the alternate victors, begin to find organized help and behold some faint gleam of Zion on the political horizon. On Ararat alone no ark can rest. For Armenia alone there is the cry without answer, 'Watchman, what of the night.'

"Only for a minority can there be political redemption; let us at least bring physical salvation to their agonizing remnant.

"Sister nations I have been accustomed to think the Armenians and the Jews. Both hail from sisterlands of the cradle of civilisation. Both come trailing clouds of glory from the purple days of Persia and Babylon. Both have borne the shock of the ancient and mediæval empires and of the militant migration of their races, and both hold to their original faith, for if the one was the first preacher of Jehovah the other was the first nation to profess Jesus. And sisters, too, in sorrow, although exiled, scattered, persecuted, massacred.

"Sisters forsooth, yet not equal in suffering. Hitherto through the long centuries the crown of martyrdom has been pre-eminently Israel's. And as day by day during this war of wars there came to me by dark letter or whisper the tale of her woes in the central war zone I said to myself surely the cup is full. Surely no people on earth has had such a measure of gall and vinegar to drain.

"But I was mistaken. One people has suffered more. That people whose ancient realm held the legendary Eden has now for abiding place the pit of hell. I bow before this higher majesty of sorrow. I take the crown of thorns from Israel's head and I place it upon Armenia's."

CHOICE CATTLE ARRIVE FOR THE EASTER MARKET

Easter cattle for the local butchers arrived in the city today from some of the best feeders in the country.

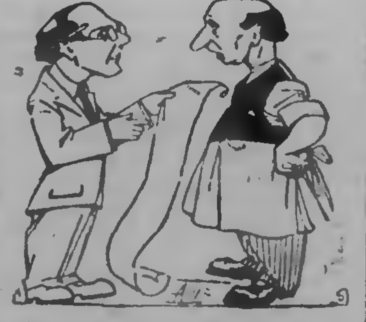
Mr. Fred Maggee of Emily brought in three fine Durham steers of the "baby beef" stamp, which were to be dressed for Jopling Bros. Easter market. This firm has finished at their own barn a Hereford steer which was raised by Mr. Thomas Northey of Buckhorn. It weighs about 1800 lbs. and is an exceptionally fine conditioned animal.

Messrs. Gordon Mann, Fred Mann nad Phil Westlake are feeding veal calves and Mr. Sam Redmond spring lambs for Jopling's easter display.

John Mertin expects to have an exhibition of Easter beef that will surpass any of previous years. Mr. George Mann of Smith has fed three very choice heifers and Mr. F. R. Dickson of Smith one extra Durham steer for the occasion. A special feature will be a number of roaster pigs specially fatted by Mr. W. Grant of Smith.

The vead calves will be from the stock of Mr. T. Rosberry and two extra spring lambs will be sent in by Mr. Thomas Lynch of Otonabee.

Not Far Wrong.



Managing Editor (to foreman)—I wrote that the shower last night, though copious, was not sufficient to meet the wants of the mill men. The compositor set it up "milk men." No; let it stand.

On Water Street alleys on Friday afternoon Wh. Henderson rolled two games for a total of 1075—192, 193, 255, 235. His last three games tied George Cairns' score of 690 for the record on the alleys. Henderson won last week's prize in five pins with a score of 173 for high single.

BROTHER AFTER BROTHER

Seeks Shortest Route to Front on Hearing Tragic News

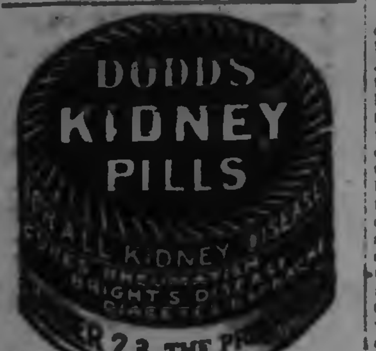
Garfield Silcox, whose name appeared among the Canadian killed, was a well known civil engineer. During the construction of the Grand Trunk Pacific railway he was engaged on that road on the Skeena river section in British Columbia, and on the section just east of the Rockies. When the war broke out he had a residency on the Hudson Bay railway. He enlisted in Winnipeg with the 45th Battalion and left for overseas in March, 1916, and transferred to the Mounted Rifles. He was a native of Swansea, Wales.

L. E. Silcox, a brother of the late Garfield Silcox, who has occupied a position in the H. B. railway as a divisional engineer for some years, arrived in civilization on the same day en route to England, where he intended joining the flying corps, after visiting his mother, who was seriously ill at her home in Swansea. When he read of his brother's death he immediately signed up with the engineers to leave for overseas at once. Mr. Silcox carried out important location and constructional works for the Grand Trunk Pacific and Hudson Bay railways during ten years.

Cardboard Pennies

To meet the shortage of small change in France the Toulouse Town Council has decided, says the Paris Daily Mail, to issue $270,000 worth of "sous" and $70,000 worth of pennies made of cardboard. The council guarantees to repurchase the entire issue within six months of the end of the war. The two denominations will be in different colors and both will bear the city arms.

With the colder weather there comes an immediate request from the body for more fuel to keep it warm. Just as we must think about starting the furnace in chilly fall days, so we have to plan for heating our bodily furnace with the best kind of fuel food. In the summer the one class of food that was repugnant and distasteful, was fat. But colder weather brings a relish for various forms of fat and more heating food. All kinds of fat are actually burned in the body as fuel. Sugar is burned indirectly and these two—fats and sugars—are the two classes of foods which generate heat and make it possible for us to withstand the low temperature of winter. In the tropics fatty foods are almost unknown. In polar regions the Eskimo subsists almost entirely on blubber and other oils.



"Ty" Cobb

TYRUS COBB

T. Raymond Cobb, Detroit's temperamental star, who accepted Charles Herzog's challenge to do battle in "an affair of honor" and administered a beating to the New York player. Cobb and Herzog are both southerners, the former from Georgia and the latter from Maryland. Herzog admitted defeat and the combatants shook hands.

O. L. A. PRESIDENT

The withdrawal of E. A. Doyle, Newmarket, for the presidency of the Ontario Amateur Lacrosse Association obviates the necessity for any contest for the office, James P. Lancaster of Havelock being elected unanimously. It was anticipated that the contest for the presidency would furnish lively competition, as the men were conceded to have an equal chance of election.

WHEN YOU ARE GIVING A CHILDREN'S PARTY

Be sure to have an abundant supply of wholesome, attractive drinks. Children are always thirsty after romping about.

Chop all the fruit you use for the cakes, even the currants. In this way they don't upset the little tummies.

A supply of small individual sponge cakes, iced with chocolate and made in attractive shapes are sure to be popular and are quite wholesome.

Keep the menu very plain, but decorate lavishly and gaily. Food that looks pretty and party-like will delight the little people, while the simple, wholesome fare that leaves no after effects will make the mothers rise up and call you blessed.

Very thin sandwiches filled with simple fillings and free from condiments will be much appreciated, especially if cut in fancy shapes and garnished prettily.

Let the party begin early and break up early; put the time clearly in the invitations. If the tots are kept up much after their usual bedtime it means frazzled nerves with subsequent squabbles and tears to spoil the joy of the evening.

Fruit pastes, home-made fudge, plain taffies are the best candies and an old-fashioned candy pulling adds considerably to the pleasure.

Rice Cutlets

Mix together one cupful of boiled rice, breadcrumbs and chopped, cooked meat. Season with salt and pepper, add a grated onion and moisten with enough milk to make a paste. Shape into cutlets, dip in egg and crumbs, fry in deep fat and serve with tomato sauce.

Rice Muffins

Mix one cup of milk with one cup of flour, one egg, one cup of flaked rice, two teaspoons of baking powder, the same of butter, and a little salt. Bake in a hot oven fifteen minutes.

WOMEN HANDLE CRANES

Some Remarkable Tasks in National Projectile Factories

Arnold Bennett, in special correspondence, says: You can observe an N.P.F. in various aspects. There is the human aspect of its picturesque adjuncts. For instance, the canteen under its own separate roof, with a prodigious veranda for the al fresco, surpassing town halls in size, and supplying all the diverse cooking and eating accomodation which young women who know on which side their bread ought to be buttered require. There are the women's dressing rooms and the lavatories—I never saw before and do not hope to see again, so many white faience basins with hot and cold water, rows and rows and rows and rows, and scores in a row. There is the ambulance station with every device.

There are the women in the roof controlling the overhead travelling electric cranes that command every foot of the floor space. Each has a rope to slide down by in an emergency, and for practice sake she is obliged to slide down that rope at least once a week. There are the other women who drive the electric carriages on the floor itself—miles of line—sitting in a sort of easy chair, and tickling levers. (Six-inch and nine-inch shells are not to be lightly thrown about. The latter weigh more than a man, and it takes either electricity or two men to shift them to and fro; electricity does 90 per cent. of the shifting).

"ALL IN ONE MORNING"

Canadian Soldier Experiences Several Very Narrow Escapes

A Port Elizabeth soldier writes: "In one hour on Saturday I was buried twice by great shells. The second time my pals had to dig me out. Again on Sunday I was buried almost at the same spot. From 10 a.m., when the fun started, I had a good many close calls. My rifle was badly damaged—hit in four places. First, the bayonet was smashed by a bullet; second, a bullet went clean through the butt about eight inches from my shoulder; third, a bullet smashed the woodwork about the centre. The rifle was still good then, but the last shot damaged it altogether. It struck the bolt just above the magazine, and split the steel so much that I couldn't work the bolt. I threw it away then and took one from a dead man lying near.

"One bullet made a hole right through the top of my steel helmet, taking a little hair with it. Another struck the top cartridge pouch of my equipment just below the heart and exploded seven cartridges. Another took the front of the pouch clean away. Another severed the strap attached to my water bottle. Another went clean through my waterproof sheet which was rolled and strapped on the back of my belt, and a whizz-bang shell nose-cap knocked a small roll of sandbags clean off my shoulder, to the strap of which it was fastened with a piece of string. How is that for a narrow shave? All in one morning, too."

Sir Douglas Haig was unanimously elected Rector of St. Andrew's University.

Cuban Rice

Put one tablespoon of lard in a frying pan, when hot add the giblets from two chickens and one onion cut up, taking care not to burn the onion while browning. Add two cups of canned tomatoes, and cook until thoroughly blended and of a rich color. Add one quart of cold water salted, and when it boils stir in one-half cup of uncooked rice. Chop two sweet green peppers fine and add one table spoon of chopped parsley, one-half teaspoon of chopped thyme and one-quarter teaspoonful of cayenne pepper. Let all cook slowly for three quarters of an hour, stirring occasionally to keep from sticking. Will serve six persons.

The Last Card.

"Miss Antiquate is making preparations to go abroad."

"Yes, poor thing! She has given up all hopes of being kidnaped at home."—New York Journal.

The Kid Speaks.

I'd like to be a player
And with the ball team stand,
A wagon tongue beside me,
A mitt upon my hand.
And when the season opened
How happy I would be
To step up to the plate and have
The crowd all watching me!
—Spokane Spokesman-Review.

A Possible Danger.

"There is danger of his dying for love."

"Nonsense!"

"Well, the rich heiress has refused him."

"What of that?"

"He may starve."—Browning's Magazine.

Your Coiffure.

There is no longer any necessity for loading the hair with braids, rats, puffs and curls. The fashions today are so simple that the woman who has only a small crop of hair can easily dress it well. In dressing your hair consider the shape of your face. The back of the head is of importance, but the frame made by the hair must be becoming to the face. Women of severely classic features and fine brows can wear the hair brushed straight back from the forehead and coiled at the back of the head or at the nape of the neck.

Simple hairdressing necessitates cleaner hair, therefore healthier hair. The hair must be thoroughly washed every week or two, especially if one exercises much. Some women boast of washing their hair but once in six weeks. Imagine the scalp, with its myriads of oil glands and its heavy growth of hair to retain the dust, being bathed only once in that long period.

Smocked Evening Wraps.

Evening wraps, which are really warm and entirely envelop the figure this winter, are made of velvet and satin in veritable turquoise blue, slavic green, peacock blue and vatican purple.

Put Buttons in Salt.

Said an expert waitress lately: "I have noticed in cafes and different homes how angry looking one gets when the salt and pepper shakers don't work and their contents stick inside. Now it will surprise you how this works. Just put two large pearl buttons inside of each shaker, and when you go to shake it it will surprise you how easy it comes out. I also find if you put two spoonfuls of cornstarch to two pounds of sugar and mix together and then put what you want in your sugar bowl it will not lump together, and you will never notice there was starch in it."

Bran Muffins.

One-half cupful of bran, one and one-half cupfuls of flour, one-quarter cupful of sugar, one tablespoonful of butter, one egg, one cupful of milk, one teaspoonful of salt, four teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Sift the flour, baking powder, sugar and then the bran together; add milk gradually, then well beaten egg and melted butter. Bake in hot oven in gem or iron pans twenty to thirty minutes.

Piccalilli.

Two gallons of chopped cabbage, two gallons of chopped green tomatoes, a gill of salt, three chopped peppers to make piccalilli. Put all in a press overnight. In the morning squeeze out the brine and mix in a pound of sugar, an ounce of celery seed and a teaspoonful of grated horseradish. Boil one and a half quarts of vinegar, pour on the mixture and cook until tender. Squeeze overnight through a thin cloth. In the morning chop the cabbage and peppers and add the tomatoes.

ROAST GOOSE.

The Way Mother Used to Get That Remarkable Flavor.

A green goose from three to four months old is a great delicacy and is cooked like a game bird without stuffing. Season inside and out with salt and pepper, put half a white onion inside to absorb any strong taste, dredge the outside with flour and roast in a hot oven for about an hour. Serve with boiled white onions and apple sauce.

For an older goose—and, even so, it should not be more than a year old you may use the time honored stuffing of potatoes and sage. Having thoroughly cleaned and washed the bird in soda water, remove all the fat that can be reached from under the skin or inside. This may be saved and tried out to use later for goose grease. To make the stuffing boil for twenty minutes or half an hour a half dozen potatoes. Peel and mash, adding to them a tablespoonful of salt, a teaspoonful of pepper, a teaspoonful of powdered sage and two tablespoonfuls of white onions minced and fried yellow in butter. Mix these ingredients lightly together, then bind with two tablespoonfuls of melted butter. Season the goose on the inside with salt.

High Shoes Worn.

Last winter many women wore low shoes in the street throughout the worst weather. Now unless a woman steps from a limousine or a taxi she is seldom seen courting pneumonia. Those who are on their way to afternoon functions requiring elaborate dress generally slip on a pair of silk gaiters which are in keeping with the costume and may be slipped off on arrival at destination. There might be some question of correctness in wearing these spats with a crepe or chiffon afternoon dress if kept on after the coat was removed. Black patent afternoon pumps or slippers are worn with stockings which match the gown.

Fillet Lace Trimming.

New blouses show filet lace used extensively as trimming. This fashion began in November, but was not widely taken up until the present month. The usual form the filet lace takes is a wide turnover collar extending into a broad panel that runs to the waist in front and deep cuffs that fit the wrists and are fastened with small lace buttons. Although the lace is sometimes put on handkerchief linen blouses, the most fashionable combination is with crepe de chine and georgette crepe.

Crucifixion by St. John's Choir

PRESENTATION ON GOOD FRIDAY WILL BE THE NINETEENTH.

The last rehearsal but one of Stainer's sacred meditation of the Passion of Our Blessed Lord, known as the Crucifixion, was held last night in St. John's Church after the evening service. Owing to the illness of Mr. H. W. Morphet all the tenor solos will be sung by Mr. Walt. Hutchinson instead of the latter part of the work as formerly arranged. Mr. John Taylor and Mr. Tom Ward will sing the baritone parts. Mr. Cyril Devey will preside at the organ, Mr. R. J. Devey conducting. This presentation will be the nineteenth by St John's choir, as the work has been given several times in All Saints as well as in Lakefield and Norwood. But few of the choristers who took part in the first presentation will be present on Friday next. With Mr. Morphet away only the following choristers are now available who were present at the first presentation: Mrs. Devey, Mrs. Seward, Mr. George Brown, Mr. Cyril Devey and Mr. R. J. Devey. Mrs. A. L. Amy will sing Granier's Hosanna during the evening.

New Sport Hats.

Hats introduced for Palm Beach, Aiken and the spring sporting events are high crowned, pot shaped, made of fuzzy felt. They are done in brilliant yellow more than any other color, and the novelty is that they are cross-stitched in black worsted threads in a loose, negligent manner. In the front or at the side the two edges of the materials are brought together and laced with the black thread.

Block Print Trimming.

The newest sport suits for the south sent over by Callot show a block design in colors used as a border for skirt and jacket. Large blocks of Indian red will be used on a cream colored silk jersey suit.

Cleaning Shiny Serge.

If anybody could invent a process to remove the shine from a worn suit his or her fortune would be assured. The shine cannot be permanently removed from any material, but it can be so treated that it will keep its shiny face in the background for a little while. First of all, brush the garment well. Then purchase a lump of ammonia from a drug store and dissolve it in one pint of boiling water. With an old stocking—this is better than any other cloth—dipped in the ammonia solution rub the shiny part backward and forward. Wash off the ammonia with a brush and clean hot water. Hang the suit up to dry in the shade. When pressing the garment wet it with hot (not boiling) water instead of cold. Lay the cloth on the suit and press with a hot iron until dry. Then wet the cloth again and iron lightly, but not enough to dry the cloth. It is this latter treatment that gives the material the dull new finish to take the place of the old shine.

AVIATORS BROUGHT DOWN CAPTURE TURK SCHOONER AND TAKE VESSEL TO PORT

Russian Airmen Compelled to Descend Opened Machine Gun Fire on Ship and Crew Made Away.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PETROGRAD, April 3. — On the Black Sea on March 27th, during a raid by our seapaines on Derkes, one of them was hit by the enemy, says today's war office statement. Its petrol tank being punctured, the machine was compelled to descend. The aviators, Lieut. Sergeev and Sub-Lieut .Tur, seeing a Turkish schooner, attacked it by opening machine-gun fire. The crew thereupon left the schooner. Our aviators having sunk their machine after taking from it the compass, machine gun and valuable belongings, boarded the schooner and set sail for our shores. They encountered a heavy storm during their adventure, but arrived with the schooner at Duarlidatch Peninsula, west of Perek, on Sunday. From this place our aviators returned to Sebastopol on a torpedo boat. The only provisions available on the schooner consisted of a few pieces of bread and a little fresh water.

In the Chelvov-Voinin region, 16 miles southeast of Vladimir-Volynski (Volhynia), after artillery preparation and mine-throwing activity, the enemy attacked our positions and forced his way into our trenches. Some of the Germans were bayoneted and the remainder fled.

Minor enemy attacks in the region of Pustomyty, south of Voinin, also were beaten back.

DR. HOFFMAN LEFT $50,000 FOR SALVATION ARMY IN CANADA

OTTAWA, April 3—With the exception of one or two small bequests, the late Dr. George Christian Hoffman, retired chemist, mineralogist and assistant director of the Geological Survey of Canada, who died in Ottawa March 6 last, left all his estate of $89,635.89 to be used for the charitable and social work of the Salvation Army in Canada and for the establishment of two fellowships for pathological and extended surgical serearch work at Queen's University, Kingston. The Ottawa Maternity Hospital and St. Luke's General Hospital were also beneficiaries.

The late Dr. Hoffman left his estate of almost ninety thousand dollars entirely in cash. He possessed no real estate. The cash in the bank at the time of his death amounted to $88,704.29 and cash on hand $731.60.

To the Salvation Army in Canada, the late Dr. Hoffman left in all $50,435.89. During his lifetime he was a great admirer and sympathiser in the work which the army is doing and his generous bequests are the result. First, he left $2,000 to the Toronto branch of the Salvation Army, of which $1,500 is to be used for general purposes and $500 for social work. He left $500 each to the Salvation Army Rescue Home and the Salvation Army Children's Home of this city.

SOLDIERS OF THE KING MILITARY NOTES

Lieut. Ketchum, who has developed into a crack marksman since going to the front, recently qualified in the sniping course. Among the souvenirs received from him by the latest mail is a German soldier's field service cap, showing unmistakable signs of the campaign mud.

FOREIGN RELATIONS COMMITTEE APPROVES THE WAR RESOLUTION

Practically the Same Form as Introduced in Congress and Vote Was Unanimous Except for Chairman Stone.

SENATE POSTPONES ACTION

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

WASHINGTON, April 3. — The Senate adjourned this morning until 10 o'clock tomorrow without passing the war resolution.

WASHINGTON, April 3. — The Senate foreign relations committee today approved the Administration's resolution declaring that a state of war exists with Germany in practically the same form as it was introduced into both Houses of Congress last night. The vote was unanimous except for Chairman Stone. Senator Borah was absent. Senator Hitchcock, who will handle the resolution on the floor, went immediately to the House foreign affairs committee to show the changes the Senate committee had made, so that it might be identical when presented to both Houses.

An effort will be made to have the resolution passed today.

The resolution follows:—

"Joint resolution declaring that a state of war exists between the imperial German government and the government and people of the United States, and making provision to prosecute the same.

"Whereas the recent acts of the imperial government are acts of war against the government and people of the United States;

"Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in congress assembled, that the state of war between the United States and the imperial government, which has thus been thrust upon the United States, is hereby formally declared, and

"That the President be, and he is hereby authorised and directed to take immediate steps, not only to put the country in a thorough state of defence, but also to exert all of its power and employ all of its resources to carry on war against the imperial German government and to bring the conflict to a successful termination."

URGENT CALL TO SPEND WEEK-ENDS AND HOLIDAYS TO HELP WITH THE CROPS

Manufacturers, Merchants, Bankers and Others Will be Interviewed by Committees in Search of Leave of Absence for Volunteers.

Committees organized by the local branch for Organization of Resources are to make a canvass of the manufacturers, merchants, banks, retired farmers, young men about town, and go out into the townships of the county, with a view to ascertaining public feeling on the proposed scheme to send city folks out into the country to assist the farmers in seeding operations and afterwards in the harvest. These committees, appointed at a meeting held in the Patriotic Fund rooms last night, will report at a meeting in the City Council chamber next Saturday afternoon, to which the reeves of the county, farmers, and the district representatives of the Department of Agriculture will be invited.

The committees are: Messrs. B. F. Ackerman and A. E. Coulthard, to interview the manufacturers; Messrs. R. B. Rogers, Col. J. W. Miller, R. Denne and R. Harstone to interview the merchants; Merrs. Col. Stevenson ,F. D. Kerr, Judge Huycke and R. R. Hall to organize the outside municipalities; Messrs. W. H. Dunsford C. H. Pennefather and H. C. Stabler to interview retired farmers and the bankers, and survey the situation as regards the possibilities for service on the part of the young men about town.

The scheme is this: Find out from the manufacturers, merchants, bankers and other employers if they will permit their employes to be released for one or two days a week, possibly at the week-end, to go into the country and assist the farmers with their seeding. These volunteers would be conveyed to and from their farm labors by automobiles. Then there are others, say the clerks, who might be glad to forego the annual summer holidays of days or weeks and, with the consent of their employers, take leave of absence when their services can best be utilised on the farms. The wages will be soldier's pay—$1.10 a day and board for men.

Registration Bureau

The farmers will have to come forward and make their wants known. Mr. G. A. Gillespie has placed his offices and office staff at the Peterborough Creamery at the disposal of the local committee, who have decided to conduct a registration bureau where the farmers can make inquiries and state their requirements.

Manufacturers Busy.

When the committee to visit the manufacturers was named, B. F. Ackerman opined that their duties would be very light. At his factory the men were working overtime on supplies for farmers, and all other companies were busy. "The manufacturer will tell us to get out," said Mr. Ackerman. Possibly men might be secured outside the plants.

C. E. Adams, a union representative, said the time had come for a firm stand. The crops would have to be put in or the people would starve. He argued that crops were more important than manufacturing and that production in the shops should give way to some extent in order to release men who would help the farmers.

Mr. C. E. Pennefather suggested that recruits might be secured from the staffs of the banks. Some of the young men ought to be able to pitch hey.

Mr. G. A. Gillespie, M.L.A., who is a member of the legislative committee on Organization of Resources, said the prominent men in Toronto, manufacturers and others, had taken up the work, and the heads of manufacturing concerns went through the factories taking the names of men who would volunteer for farm service, to show that they themselves were behind the scheme. Mr. Gillespie said that unless production on the lands was increased, food would be very high.

Earlier in the evening Mr. Gillespie outlined the work of the committee, whose one great aim is to come to the aid of the farmer by providing help for him in seeding time and harvest. The committee will also endeavor to encourage the eating of apples in order that the 1917 crop will not be wasted. The embargo on apples will leave Canada with one million barrels on its hands, and Canadians will be urged to eat apples instead of imported foreign fruits which come to Canada annually to the value of $10,000,000.

REV. J. P. WILSON, B.A., D.D.
Who, at a convocation in Divinity at Victoria College, Toronto, last night, received the honorary degree of Doctor of Divinity. Dr. Wilson was introduced by Judge Huycke, a member of Senate of Victoria College.

LIEUT. QUINN OF 247th BN. WEDS

MISS BERTHA BRYANS OF HAVELOCK HIS BRIDE.

Lieut. Theodore Quinn of the 247th Batt. and Miss Bertha Bryans, younger daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Bryans, of Havelock, were married at Havelock this afternoon. Only the members of the bride's family were present at the ceremony.

The bride is very popular in Peterborough, where she has a large circle of friends. Congratulations and best wishes will be extended to the young couple.

GET TRAFFIC REGULATIONS

MAY BE THE MEANS OF AVOIDING FINE IN POLICE COURT.

In order that owners and drivers of motor cars and other vehicles may have no excuse to offer when caught breaking the law, copies of the city regulations may be had at the police station free of charge.

Chief Thompson will have his traffic squad busy in the next few days watching for violators of the speed and other regulations.

Agreement With Quaker Oats Co.

ALD. McINTYRE IS BUSY WITH THE CITY SOLICITOR.

Ald. McIntyre, chairman of the Manufacturers' Committee, is very anxious to see the Quaker Oats Co. get busy in rebuilding their plant, and he has spent considerable time with City Solicitor Gordon during the past week going over the agreement which is being prepared, so as to have the bylaw submitted to the people at an early date.

The plans for the overhead bridge are being arranged so as to give as much track room to the new works as possible.

DUKE AND DUCHESS HERE ON FRIDAY MAY 25TH

A Civic Reception in Early Part of Morning.

The Duke and Duchess of Devonshire will visit Peterborough on Friday, May 25, according to a letter received today by Mayor Duffus from the Governor-General's secretary. The Vice-Regal party will arrive on the night of May 24th and will remain the guests of the city until 4 p.m. of the following day. The secretary's letter suggests that the civic reception be held in the early part of the morning of the 25th and also that a visit to one of the large manufacturing firms manufacturing munitions would be of much interest to His Excellency.

REPORT ON WATER

The water report for the month of March as furnished by Mr. C. A. G. Spence to the Utilities Commission says: "Thaw set in on the 15th with rain on the 17th and general springlike conditions during the rest of the month, practically all the snow having disappeared by the end of the month. The water has shown no sign of bacterial or organic infection during the month.

Milk Tests Satisfactory

Nearly all the milk men have been held up by the officers of the Board of Health and samples of milk taken and tested. So far these tests are eminently satisfactory. In only one case was the test for butter fat just equal to the mark. The rest were all above.

This will be good news to the citizens generally and amply repays the trouble taken to get the samples.

GOVERNMENT WILL BE ASKED FOR MEASURE

MAJORITY OF COUNCIL IN FAVOR OF DAYLIGHT SAVING.

The Dominion Government will be asked to adopt daylight saving. The city council by resolution last night asked them to take such action.

Ald. Worth, who is strongly in favor of the scheme, asked for an expression of opinion from the aldermen. Everyone except Ald. McIntyre and Saunders was in favor of it. If the idea could be made universal either in the Province or Dominion.

Ald. Worth and Smith were in favor of the scheme from a purely local point of view.

PETERBOROUGH, TUESDAY, APRIL 3, 1917

JUMPING AT CONCLUSIONS.

THERE ARE MEN in Peterborough today who have to their credit a record of lifelong devotion to the principles of the Conservative party, men who have never voted on the opposite side, who are disgruntled at present with the attitude of the Borden Government on the question of conscription. These men do not hesitate to express their disappointment and to criticize the Government for what they are pleased to regard as a lack of energy in raising a military force to represent Canada in the war.

Would it not be as well to withhold criticism and suspend final judgment, and in the meantime watch closely the development of the Government's policy?

One of the characteristics of the Administration, especially since the war broke out, has been extreme reticence. Sir Robert Borden does not take the public entirely into his confidence, it may be, until his plans have developed. This may be due to his determination to avoid party politics, to observe a political truce, while the war is in progress. He has said that the time to speak will come, and that when it arrives he will not lack justification for his every public act.

When Mr. Kyte made his famous charges in the House, no attempt was made to anticipate a defence. All discussion of the matter was withheld by the Government, and a commission was appointed to investigate. When the evidence was submitted the charges were shown up as lacking foundation.

The Government were criticized with regard to the manufacture of the Ross rifle after it had been adjudged as lacking by actual military test. Under this criticism the Government remained silent until the time came to take over the Ross rifle factory. Then the course of the Government was shown to be one based on sound business principles, and the Department have come out of this difficulty with flying colors.

It may be that the country is nearer conscription than the most ardent advocate of compulsion imagines. The Government is leading up to it by easy stages, while at the same time adopting the really logical and legal procedure. Everyone knows that it is one of the most delicate questions ever handled by a government in Canada. Indiscreet action might easily throw one section of the Dominion into open revolt, something to be avoided if Canada's patriotic reputation is to be maintained. If there is on the statute books, as some claim, sufficient legislation to provide for raising an army of defence, then it would be folly to adopt new measures. Conscription may have been enforced in England, but England is a military country compared with Canada, the inhabitants of which have lived strangers to war and in a paradise of peace for over a century.

Under the Militia Act every unit can be raised to full strength, if not by voluntary enlistment, then by a resort to harsher methods. The young men of the country should understand this point. In this way every man now under arms can be released for duty overseas. The members of the militia can, it is held by those whose opinion is worth consideration, be required to defend their country, whether that defence is necessary within the borders of Canada or at some point in Flanders. The Government has since the beginning of the war handled a Titanic task in a manner that entitles it to at least a measure of public confidence. The Administration has been charged indiscriminately with undue haste and excessive caution. Of the two the latter is the more excusable. Problems that have arisen in Canada are such as have confronted the governments in other parts of the Empire and they have been handled here with equal wisdom and with the same results.

The Government is not idle. Every day evidence is given of a tightening of the regulations. Officers have increased out of all proportion to the number of enlisted men. The charge has been made that officers have been sent across the seas in numbers far beyond the necessary demand, and returned to Canada after what was really a pleasure trip at public expense.

No later than yesterday the announcement was made that no more officers are to be sent overseas except such as are absolutely required to take the various units across. Some local officers are likely to be shorn of their commissions and separated from the payroll unless they can be employed to some purpose.

THAT OLD GUARD.

THE WEAKNESS of the local Liberal party is easily located among the leaders themselves, or the self-constituted leaders. Three or four men have assumed the reins of authority and set up as the guides, philosophers and friends—more or less—of the rank and file. But the day of the political boss is over. The common people no longer consent to surrender the right to think for themselves. When a handful of men arrogate the leadership and attempt to coerce their following, then the doom of that party is assured.

The so-called "Old Guard" of the local Liberals have had their day of success and failure. They have been found wanting. The distinguishing characteristic that has been left to them is inordinate jealousy. They suspect rivals on every side. The man who shows any signs of advancement is at once catalogued with their enemies, and measures are taken to suppress him. Wherever a head shows up above the masses, for that head the Old Guard have a bludgeon.

It makes no difference how growing popularity is shown. It may be that a man is coming rapidly to the front in municipal life. Then the leaders who feel the ground slipping from under their feet lay for the man who has found favor. If he runs for a high office in the gift of the city, they have a knife for him. If he succeeds, they work in the dark and plant a mine under him.

A new star has arisen on the Liberal firmament. No sooner does G. N. Gordon become a menace to the Old Guard, than Mayor Duffus looms up as a popular favorite and a likely candidate for honors in a wider field. The troubles of the Old Guard, in very truth, do not come singly. Accordingly Mayor Duffus becomes a marked man and the leaders give the knife an extra polish on the grindstone.

AHEAD OF THE AGE.

THE PACIFIST these days, no matter in what country he is found, is generally regarded as a crank, but that term has been applied to reformers in all ages. He is not really a man necessarily out of his mind. His preaching shows the growth of the sentiment that holds war in horror. The pacifist is the first preacher of a policy of universal international peace, of a sane method of settling quarrels between nations, as between individuals, not by a resort to arms, but by quiet and dignified arbitration.

The only trouble with the pacifist is that he is several laps ahead of the rest of humanity. At this crisis pacificism is inopportune. It is no time to talk of prevention when a patient is dying, or to discuss the best methods of avoiding fire when the house is in flames.

NO SYMPATHY WASTED.

THERE WILL BE little sympathy extended to the London doctors who were recently fined for violating the Ontario Temperance Act by illegally prescribing liquor for their patients. There will be infinitely less for the Western Ontario druggist who was penalized to the extent of $1200 for selling opium to Chinamen and others among his customers. The meanest kind of a human being is the one who will debase an honorable profession by using it as a cloak to cover up a crime.

Members of any profession are the best agents to maintain its reputation. In Peterborough, druggists and doctors are living up to the law. Long before prohibition the former protected themselves even from suspicion by refusing to handle liquor except, as formerly, under the Pharmacy Act. The Western Ontario man who sold opium will be further punished by losing his standing in the profession that he brought into disrepute.

AN EXEMPLARY PATRIOT.

W. A. COLE OF OTTAWA, a successful business man, beyond military age and otherwise physically unfit, has set the country an example in practical patriotism that is worthy the emulation of all who are in the same class as himself. Mr. Cole has advertised for a suitable substitute to take his place in the army, and offers to pay him a handsome salary to supplement the army pay. Not only will he do this, but he will, in addition, take care of the dependents of such a substitute in the event of anything happening to him while in the service. Mr. Cole believes that there are plenty of business men in Canada who will make the same offer when this matter is called to their attention.

The same custom prevailed in the United States in the Civil War, but it fell more or less into disrepute because some men eligible for military duty adopted the plan of purchasing a substitute. Mr. Cole, however, is above suspicion in this regard. Not only is he too old, but he has the use of only one arm. He has been a liberal contributor to all patriotic schemes, but even that has failed to satisfy his sense of duty.

Mr. Cole's offer has already been accepted, not by an adventurer tempted by the monetary consideration, but by no less a personage than Col. C. B. Spittall, of the Army Service Corps. He has offered to revert to a private and go to Europe as Mr. Cole's substitute, provided the necessary permission is given by the Militia Department.

What man in Peterborough will be the first to follow the example of Mr. Cole of Ottawa?

NOTES AND COMMENT.

THE STORY OF MONTENEGRO

The members of the Women Teachers' Guild were entertained at a Montenegrin tea at the King George School on Friday, March 30th, the tea-room being very nicely decorated for the occasion. The following paper on Montenegro was prepared by Miss Dorothy Sage and read by Miss Eva Fusee:

"When God was making the world He carried all the mountains in a great sack, and placed them here and there as He thought best. While passing over ontenegro He halted, in ordr to make a gift of a mountain to the country, when, by great misfortune, the sack burst, and the mountains, rocks and stones came tumbling down pell-mell on poor Montenegro, where to this day they form a bewildering mass."

So runs the popular legend, which has grown up in the land to account for the existence of that great assemblage of bleak and rugged mountains that constitute the Montenegrin Kingdom and the endeared home of a warrior race. It is situated upon the western side of the Balkan Peninsula, and possesses a small coast line on the Adriatic Sea. The name Montenegro means "Black Mountain," and it is drived from the dark appearance of Mount Lochven, the culminating summit of Montenegro proper, of which the northern and eastern slopes, those viewed from the country itself, are in shadow for the greater part of the day. The dusky pine forests which once clothed the mountain, and of which remnants still exist on its northern slope, also contributed to its sombre aspects. Montenegro is about one hundred miles in length from north to south, and its greatest breadth from east to west is eighty miles.

Most of us know the history of Robin Hood and his merry men, how they were outlawed by powerful barons, who, in the Lion-Heart's absence, took upon themselves to oppress the weak, and how desperately hard, but in vain, these feudal lords tried to kill brave Robin and his sturdy band. Montenegro, to speak figuratively, is the Robin Hood of Europe, a dauntless champion of liberty, that, with Freedomn's clarion cry ever on the lips, has for hundreds of years stood facing fearful odds, fearless of men, fearing God alone. Meanwhile, her valiant sons, with all the fierceness of their nature, hav fought for their very lives; the might of the most powerful armies in the world failing to quench their matchless courage, or to break down their unwearied defence.

For full five hundred years did the little band of Montenegrin warriors sustain the unequal fight against the powerful army of the Turks. The Turks were a brave people, who spent their lives in fighting, and at one time undortook the gigantic task of conquering Europe. Arriving at the country of the Black Mountain, and feeling confident that no people, however great or powerful, let alone a few mountaineers, could stand against them, they sent an enormous army into Montenegro.

The children of the "Crnagara," which is the native name for the Black Mountain, retreated into the steep, rocky valley which leads to Cetinje. Up this valley the Turks marched, but behind every rock stood a Montenegrin, ready to shed his blood in defence of hearth and home. Charge after charge the Turks made, fighting, slaying and dying, but never succeeding in varrying the valley. The years rolled on, generation after generation of warriors fought and died, yet still did the fierce conflict rage. Imagine how angry successive Sultans were to think that, though they ruled over the greatest and most powerful empire in the world, yet in the middle of their own country a mere band of mountaineers still upheld the Cross, despite all Moslem efforts to drag it down.

Between the wars with the Turks, Montenegro had often Christian enemies to face. When Napoleon Bonaparte was sweeping almost irresistibly as conqueror over the face of Europe, only two countries were able successfully to withstand him. One was England, the other was Montenegro. Even little Montenegro did not hesitate to defy the great Napoleon. So enraged was the emperor when his army was repulsed that in his anger he threatened to turn Montenegro (the Black Mountain) into Monterosso (the Red Mountain), meaning that he would do so with her people's blood; but, like most people who say things in a rage, he subsequently found himself unable to carry out his threat, and was forced to march away just as the Sultan himself had to do.

Until about thirty years ago Montenegro was continually at war with Turkey, unrecognised as a nation by the Great Powers of Europe, but, as is was impossible for these same Powers any longer to overlook her centuries of heroic struggles, they in the year 1876 formally recognized Montenegro as a country, and acknowledged her ruler as a king. Her frontiers were strictly defined, and two seaports were bestowed upon her, Turkey being forbidden to attack her smaller neighbor without just cause.

In this rough and terrible way was the Montenegrin nation made, and we can understand why today the people carry loaded firearms, and, walking with the proud step of a conqueror, look you fearlessyl in the eye. (Jus Gladu) By the Right of the Sword, is the nation's motto, since the aind has been won, and is still held, by the might of arms alone.

It has been truly said that the Montenegrin is the exact opposite of the Bulgarian. Put both in a drawing-room, and the Montenegrin, who has never bowed his neck to a foreign master, will look and behave like a gentleman, while the Bulgarian, but lately set free from the Turkish bondage, will look and behave like a boor. But put the two upon a waste plot of ground, and the Bulgarian will convert it into a garden of roses, while the Montenegrin will look on. This is the result of their national history. For five centuries the Montenegrins have had to fight for their existence. War has become the great object of their lives; their annals one long series of heroic struggles for independence, and even now they have not emerged from the military to the industrial state of society.

The Montenegrins present all the characteristics of a primitive race, as yet little affected by modern civilization. Society is still in that early stage at which personal valor is regarded as the highest virtue and warlike prowess constitutes the principal, if not the only claim to pre-eminence. The chiefs are distinguished by the splendor of their arms and the richness of their costume. The Montenegrins take great pride in personal adornment. The men wear a red waistcoat embroidered with gold or black braid, over which a long plaid is sometimes thrown in cold weather; a red girdle in the folds of which pistols are placed, loose dark blue breeches and white stockings which are generally covered with gaiters.

The women, who occupy a subject position, are generally clothed in black, and wear a black head dress or veil; on Sundays or holidays, however, a white embroidered bodice, silver girdle and bright silk skirt are worn beneath an open coat. Over this is placed a short, sleeveless jacket of red, blue, or violet velvet, according to the wearer's age.

The Montenegrin baby must of necessity be the hardiest little being in the whole world. If once a Montenegrin survives infancy, the roughest existence can henceforth hold no terrors for him. Baby is strapped tightly into its great wooden cradle, which has a flat, box-like bottom and rockers. If baby cries, and babies mostly do, he is covered with several folds of thick blanket, resembling a piece of felt, and is rocked in a way that would reduce any ordinary child to a condoltion of chronic hysteria; one could picture his little body a mass of bruises, and with some dislocated limb; but he emerges from the ordeal scot free, and crawls over the rough rocks, as healthy young crabs might. Tumbling here and there, he soon begins to walk, and quite quickly becomes as nimble and sure-footed as a mountain goat.

Women cannot, of course, fight like men, and are not regarded as their equals; consequently the birth of a daughter is looked upon more as a misfortune than a blessing, and therefore meets with no rejoicing as does the advent of a baby boy. Women are regarded as of vastly less importance and value than man; for instance, no woman, unless he is of high rank, is ever allowed to sit at the men's table, nor must she even sit in man's presence. In the remoter parts of the country a woman leaving a roomful of men does so backwards, while universal custom denies to woman a man's kiss. Men kiss one another, women kiss men's hands. On the other hand, no woman in Montenegro is ill-treated, nor may man lift hand against her. She may be compelled to work until she

Bathing Suits

New rules and regulations for bathing suits to be worn at Chicago beaches were decided upon at a meeting of the aldermanic committee on small parks, playgrounds and bathing beaches.

The regulations adopted by the committee follow:

"No all white or flesh colored suits permitted or suits that expose the chest lower than a line drawn on the level of the armpits.

"Blouse and bloomer suits may be worn, with or without skirts, without stockings, providing the blouse has one quarter arm sleeve or close fitting arm-holes, and providing the bloomers are full and not shorter than four inches above the knee.

"Jersey-knit suits may be worn, with or without stockings providing the suit has skirt or skirt effect with one-quarter arm sleeve or close fitting armholes and trunks not shorter than four inches above the knee. The bottom of the skirt must not be shorter than two inches above the bottom of the trunk.

"Men's suits must have skirt effect, or shirt worn outside of trunks, except when flannel knee pants with belt are worn. The trunks must not be shorter than four inches above the knee and the skirt must not be shorter than two inches above the botton of the trunk.

"All life guards must wear scarlet shirts with blue flannel pants and white belt; the shirt must bear the words 'Life Guard' in white, three inch block letters."

The rules will go into effect on June 1; violations are to be punished by fines of $5 to $20.

The Crucial Question.

"But can you cook?" asked the prosaic young man.

"Then what is the first?" he demanded.

"Can you provide the things to be cooked?"

EDITOR'S MAIL

KEEPING DOWN DUST

Editor Review: An editorial in a local paper last night deals with the dust nuisance and suggests that flushing is the only satisfactory method of keeping paved streets clean. This is indeed a new one.

Flushing paved streets sweeps all the dirt into the sewers and eventually clogs these outlets, adding a new expense upon the city. The matter of keeping the paved streets clean was satisfactorily settled last year. The dustless sweeper is the true solution. It does the work thoroughly and removes the dirt instead of forcing it into the sewers. There is no trouble on this score any longer possible. The dustless sweeper has it on every other contrivance, expense included.

DEALERS PREPARING TO SELL 100,000 BICYCLES THIS YEAR

For the Bicycle Show Week, March 31 to April 7, which will be celebrated throughout Canada as the formal opening of the 1917 bicycle season, a catchy slogan, "Ride a Bicycle," will be brought to the attention of the Canadian public in a number of attractive and spectacular ways. The main idea of the bicycle enthusiasts will be, however, to demonstrate that there is health, pleasure, utility and economy in riding a bicycle.

Second Annual Celebration

No attempt is being made by the 3,000 Canadian bicycle dealers to "boom" the wheel, because it has already gained considerable popularity as a practical means to an end. This is the second annual celebration of the spring show week in Canada, and the bicycle has gained many friends during the last twelve months since cycling was brought prominently to the attention of all classes of people.

There is no intention on the part of the members of the trade to encourage cyclists to take part in tests of endurance or to engage in freakish stunts, it is declared, because the furious riding of other days had its baneful effect upon wheeling. It is urged that the bicycle is not excelled for healthful exercise, while it is self-evident that cycling has real economic advantages.

C. R. BANKS OFFERS BICYCLE AS PRIZE TO BOY OR GIRL TAKING HIGHEST STAND AT ENTRANCE

Contest is Open to Every Pupil in Peterborough County---History of Rise and Fall of Bicycle in Popular Favor---A Revival to Mark Coming Season.

Mr. C. R. Banks was not slow to recognize the revival of popular interest in the bicycle and, in order to encourage it makes a liberal offer which will appeal to all the school children in Peterborough county. Mr. Banks will give as a prize a $40 bicycle, the Cleveland make, to the boy or girl who takes the highest standing at the approaching entrance examination. Here is an excellent chance to secure free an up-to date wheel.

It is over a quarter of a century since the bicycle as a vehicle came into popular favor. The old fashioned velocipede had been invented years before that but its use was a flirtation with disaster and all save the reckless were shy of it. When the safety bicycle was devised all things changed. The only objection was to the price, as a bicycle which carried the rider at a safe distance from the ground when it first came out, sold for as high as $150, which put it far out of the financial reach of the majority. When competition and modern methods of manufacture cut down the price, the bicycle became one of the most popular means of travel and the livery business received its final jolt.

It was in 1893 that the American continent really went bicycle mad. Every young man who could raise the price had a wheel and bicycle clubs were organized everywhere. The ladies took up bicycle riding as a pastime and the wheel became, too, a valuable factor in business. Grown up men sold their horses and carriages and bought a "safety." The receipts of street car companies fell off and the driving horse came to be looked upon as something due for a place among the world's relics.

At the beginning of the present century a formidable rival to the bicycle arose in the automobile and ever since the progress made by that style of vehicle has been simply marvellous. But the man who cannot afford an auto or who despairs of ever acquiring the art of handling one, still has the bicycle to carry him around. The latter vehicle is again coming into favor and this summer is likely to find more bicycles in use than have ever been on the roads since the days before the auto was invented.

The agitation for good roads did not come into life with the automobile. It started years before, when the value of paved thoroughfares was recognized by the man astride of a wheel and when by-laws were necessary to keep the bicycles off the sidewalks. In those days the "scorcher" was a public menace and a constant source of public revenue, exceeded since by the autoist who does violence to the speed limit. But the one is a light danger today compared with the other.

The Dunlop Road Race

Bicycle races soon became the vogue. The first contest for the Dunlop Road Race Trophy was on September 29, 1894, when, after weeks of preparation, 50 of Toronto's speediest wheelmen met at the Woodbine to contest for the honors in what has proven to be the "blue ribbon" event of Canadian bicycledom. It was a most exciting race. The Athenaeums finished first and the Royal Canadians second. The Torontos, who had been prime favorites, took third place. The other teams entered were the Wanderers and the Queen Citys. Amongst the riders for the latter club was Robt. Falconer, who has virtually been official starter of every Dunlop Road Race since 1895. The riders went four miles in a bunch around the Woodbine track before taking the journey up the Kingston Road hills. Veterans W. Hyslop and T. B. McCarthy were first out on the road and on the return Carman, McCarthy and Robertson of the Athenaeums and Hensel of the Royal Caandians, were bunched as they entered the track. S. Gibbons of the Royal Canadians, and W. Hulse and H. Thompson of the same club, were in the party, and the finish showed: L. C. Robertson, A.C.C., 1; T. B. McCarthy, A.C.C., 2; W. R. Hensel, R.C.B., 3; W. Carman, A.C.C., 4; S. Gibbons, R.C B.C., 5. Despite a protest that McCarthy "did not turn the barrel" the trophy was handed to the Athenaeums; but so tremendous was the interest in the victory that this decision was taken into the courts. The verdict of the race judges was upheld by the bench. Thus the first Dunlop Race started off in a blaze of glory.

Blind Use Bicycles

The interesting news has come from the old country that soldiers blinded in the present war are not denied the healthful and pleasing benefits of cycling. In the vicinity of one of the military hospitals sightless veterans are daily seen riding bicycles on the streets with the aid of a guide. This is accomplished by hooking five or six bicycles into a "train" which is steered by an attendant. The blind soldiers have to look after their own balance, which they do with ease, and a speed of four to eight miles per hour is attained on the trips. Except for the manner in which the wheels are fastened one behind the other, a spectator would not judge that all but one of the cyclists are blind.

In a number of institutions, the convalescents make use of bicycles on rollers in order to regain leg strength and a quick return to good health. After this exercise, the invalided men ride bicycles on the road for health and pleasure. In Canada many returned soldiers are riding bicycles for their health, and one point in this connection is that the bicycle is so cheap and so economically maintained that the returned men can easily afford to cycle.

It is not generally known that Helen Keller, the woman who is deaf, dumb and blind, learned to ride a bicycle, thanks to the tuition and guidance of a former racer and trick cyclist. She enjoyed her cycling experiences greatly.

Princes are Bicyclists

The eyes of the world have been focussed on the Russian Government on account of the revolutionary activities and, at this time, it is interesting to note that the princes of the Russian royal household are keen bicyclists. These royal lads, Princes Vasili, Rotislav, Nikita and Feodor Alexandrovitch, have been able to have anything their hearts desire, but they have spent a great deal of their play time on bicycles. There is scarcely a royal child in Europe who is not an ardent cyclist.

Modern Advantages

The bicycle enthusiasts also point out that both city pavements and country roads are far better than they were twenty years ago, while the legislative restrictions upon cycling are now practically negligible. There are also various features to show that the modern wheel is superior in design, make-up, and material to what it was a decade or two ago. In addition, bicycles do not cost one half what they did in the nineties, when the riders, it is said, ran to killing fads.

Preparations are being made to sell 100,000 new bicycles in Canada this year.

Growers in the French Riviera, who ship millions of boxes of cut flowers every year, have found that they keep fresh much longer if placed in cold storage a day or two before shipping.

Amusement for the occupants as well as utility are combined in a South Carolina inventor's carriage for children in which two seats are alternately raised and lowered between wheels five feet in diameter.

IMPOSITION ON CHILDRENS' AID SOCIETY

The Children's Aid Society met yesterday afternoon in special session to consider a matter of imposition on the society.

At the last meeting a case was report where the mother of five children must of necessity undergo an operation immediately. It was requested that the children be allowed to board at the Shelter. The father of the children is "doing his bit" and the request was granted.

Since that time it turned out from information received that the mother was going to work for $2 per day at Trenton.

Mrs. Gibbs reported that the children had come to the shelter with beautiful clothes and should not be there. They showed no signs of neglect and the Shelter was not a boarding house for children.

A resolution was passed that unless the mother goes to the hospital this week the children be returned to her.

The family come from Bethany and Mr. Spence reported that the information that the woman was going to work was news to him. He understood that the operation would be performed this week.

LICENSE MUST BE TAKEN OUT

Under the head of general business the council took action last night on the following matters:

Refused to grant a free eating house license to Mrs. C. Reed, Townsend St. The finance committee reported that the applicant was quite able to pay.

Acceded to the request of the City Trust approving of the adjusting of the city's interest in the fire loss in the Court House. The amount involved was $3,500.

Asked the board of works to remedy the condition of the sidewalk on the north side of Charlotte between Stewart and Rubidge Sts. and on Elm St. north of Cambridge St.

The sanitary inspector will take immediate steps to remedy the nuisance caused by deposits of ashes at Murray and Aylmer Streets and on Lynch's lot on Weller St.

Everyone Should Drink Hot Water in the Morning

Wash away all the stomach, liver, and bowel poisons before breakfast.

To feel your best day in and day out, to feel clean inside, no sour bile to coat your tongue and sicken your breath or dull your head; no constipation, bilious attacks, sick headache, colds, rheumatism or gassy, acid stomach, you must bathe on the inside like you bathe outside. This is vastly more important, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, while the bowel pores do, says a well known physician.

To keep these poisons and toxins well flushed from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels drink before breakfast each day a glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it. This will cleanse, purify and freshen the entire alimentary tract before putting more food into the stomach.

Get a quarter pound of limestone phosphate from your pharmacist. It is inexpensive and almost tasteless, except a sourish twinge which is not unpleasant. Drink phosphated hot water every morning to rid your system of these vile poisons and toxins; also to prevent their formation.

To feel like young folks feel, like you felt before your blood, nerves and muscles became saturated with an accumulation of body poisons, begin this treatment and above all keep it up! As soap and hot water act on the skin cleansing, sweetening and purifying, so limestone phosphate and hot water before breakfast act on the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels.

How many telephone users have given thought to the study of what might be called "telephone courtesy"? There are various phases of it, and many of them are important. Do you ever speak impatiently to the "hello girls" at the central? Perhaps you were at fault yourself, after all. Did you ever, on finding you had given or had received the wrong number, snap out something not real nice to the other party? Did you ever tell your assistant to call up someone, then let [illegible] wait until you had finished a conversation or a letter, regardless of the value of his time? Of course you never swear through the telephone—that is a misdemeanor, and would bring you into court; yet it has been done, for the man who is low-minded enough to be habitually profane is just as apt to so express himself at the phone as elsewhere. The telephone is becoming a home and business institution, so that telephone courtesy is as important as table manners, and should be as generally observed.

Telephone Courtesy--

A CORDIAL, kindly manner and a cheerful, smiling voice—everywhere people are awakening to the value of these in telephoning.

Not that anyone ever meant to be rude or discourteous. Many of us were just thoughtless, forgetting how sensitive the telephone is, reflecting our every mood.

And in addition to telephone courtesy, it is very helpful to speak distinctly and directly into the mouthpiece of the telephone, with the lips about half an inch from its rim.

And then, of course, we should always make sure of the number by consulting the directory before calling.

COMMUNICATIONS TO CITY COUNCIL

The following communications were received and dealt with by the City Council last night.

City Treasurer Adams reported on the receipts and expenditures of the city since the first of the year and it was referred to the finance committee.

The request of Bennet and Goodwill to have bay windows over the street on their building at 375-379 Water Street was granted.

Tax Collector Green reported that he had collected $358,086.71 out of $379,677.96, the amount of the taxes due in 1916. The balance has to be in and the roll returned by April 15.

Take Over Olive Ave.

The residents of Olive Avenue asked the city to assume that roadway so that the property holders could take advantage of the local improvement privileges of the city. The Board of Works will report on the matter at once as it was the opinion of the aldermen that the request should be granted.

Increased Production

The National Service Board asked further co-operation of the council in the matter of increased production and making suggestions. The letter was ordered turned over to the local committee on conservation.

Will Not Sell This Year

The Hydro-Electric Commission wrote informing the city that the sale of the street railway or gas plant to the city would not be considered until after the close of the 1917 season.

The condition of Roger Street in front of F. Mesley's residence was complained of and the Board of Works will take action at once.

R. G. Kingan wanted the city to remove some trees at the corner of Dalhousie and Aylmer St. The city engineer will report to the Board of works.

Save Young Cattle

Some time ago the city council passed a resolution asking the Dominion Government to prevent the slaughter of cattle under twenty months old. The Department of Agriculture replied that they had a scheme on foot which would result the same but would not be so drastic.

The city of Kingston are quite in accord with the city's resolution regarding the collection of income tax and increasing the poll tax and expressed a willingness to send a delegation to the legislature.

Provincial Treasurer McGarry informed the city that its request for a return of fines collected by the city would be acted on at the first meeting of the Lieut.-Governor in council.

Hoisted

The Dominion Alliance asked the assistance of the council in the prohibition movement by signing the "on to Ottawa" petition. The matter was left over for future consideration.

G. A. Gillespie asked permission to remove two trees in front of his garage on Aylmer St., to instal a gasoline tank and pump and to build an approach from the curb to the sidewalk. The request was granted provided the work is done under the supervision of the city engineer.

Premier Hearst wrote promising consideration of the city's request that city roads connecting suburban roads be partly paid for by the government.

BYLAWS PASSED

By-laws were passed by the city council last night dealing with the following matters:—

1.—Consolidating the health by-laws of the city and adopting a new nightsoil collection system. Under the new rate, a regulation box will be cleaned for 40c. Just how often it must be cleaned depends on the sanitary inspector, who is the arbitrator.

2—Placing a tax of 74-100 mills for patriotic purposes on property now exempt from general taxation.

3.—To allow the mayor and treasurer to borrow up to $350,000 for current and ordinary expenses until the taxes are collected.

TELEGRAPHIC BRIEFS.

So successful have wireless telephones proved on Italian warships that the government plans to instal them on merchant and passenger vessels.

CITY WILL PURCHASE MOTOR FIRE APPARATUS AND OTHER EQUIPMENT

Recommendations of Special Committee Are Adopted.

Ald. F. H. Dobbin, chairman of the special sub-committee named to deal with the election of fire apparatus and to recommend to the council as to its purchase, reported as given below, and the report was adopted.

The recommendations were:

That a combined hose waggon and pump, motor driven, with capacity as to pump 500 gallons (Imperial) per minute, to carry from 1,000 to 1,200 feet of hose and six or seven men, and with ample power for service and all weather emergencies, be procured.

That, as to accessories and fittings that the new piece come fully equipped and that such fittings and supplies as now in use be retained as a reserve stock and to maintain equipment of the horse drawn pieces now in use.

That the purchase of two stroke helmets, a safety net and deluge nozzle be made, if the appropriation provided sufficient money to cover the cost. And that further consideration be given to the matter of the deluge nozzle, and if deemed that it may not be advisable to buy this fitting, that it be left out.

That under the direction of the committee, the city clerk invite tenders for supply of the apparatus from standard builders, on a general form of specification to be determined as to capacity, power, etc. That such tenders be submitted to the committee of the whole to determine final acceptance.

That a Ford car chassis be ordered, of the usual size as in the regular touring car, that it be fitted with a body suitable to carry the pulmotor, chemical extinguishers, tools and four men (driver, and one man in front seat, two on rear seat). That prices be procured for the fitting up of the body of the car, painting, etc.

WAR BY THE STATES AGAINST GERMANY

Neutrality no Longer Feasible or Desirable President Wilson Says in Address Before Congress.

WASHINGTON, April 3.— President Wilson last night urged Congress, assembled in joint session, to declare a state of war existing between the United States and Germany.

In a dispassionate but measured denunciation of the course of the Imperial German Government, which he characterized as a challenge to all mankind and a warfare against all nations, the President decired that neutrality was no longer feasible or desirable where the peace of the world was involved; that armed neutrality had become ineffectual enough at best and was likely to produce what it was meant to prevent and urged that Congress accept the gauge f battle with all the resources of the nation.

"I advise that the Congress declare the recent course of the Imperial German Government to be in fact nothing less than war against the government and people of the United States," sadi the President, "that it formally accept the status of belligerent which has thus been thrust upon it and that it take steps not only to put the country in a more thorough state of defence, but also to exert all its power and employ all its resources to bring the government of the German Emipre to terms and end the war."

When the President had finished speaking, resolutions to declare a state of war existing were introduced in both Houses of Congress, referred to appropriate committees and will be distributed today. There is no doubt of their passage.

Ojects in Entering War

The objects of the U.S. in entering the war, the President said, were to vindicate the principle of peace and justice against selfish and autocratic power. Without selfish ends, for conquest or dominion, seeking no indemnities, or material compensations for the sacrifices it shall make, the United States must enter the war, the President said, to make the world safe for democracy, as only one of the champions of the rights of mankind, and would be satisfied when those rights were as secure as the faith and freedom of nations could make them.

The President's address was sent in full to Germany by a German official news agency, for publication in that country. The text also went to England, and a summary of its contents was sent around the world to other nations.

To carry on an effective warfare against the German Government, which he characterized as a "natural foe to liberty," the president recommended:

Utmost practical co-operation in counsel and action with the governments already at war with Germany.

Extension of liberal financial credits to those Governments so that the resources of America may be added so far as possible to theirs.

Organization and mobilization of all the material resources of the country.

Full equipment of the navy, particularly for means of dealing with submarine warfare.

An army of at least 500,000 men, based on the principle of universal liability to service, and the authorization of additional increments of 500,000 each as they are needed or can be handled in training.

Raising necessary money for the United States Government, so far as possible without borrowing, and on the basis of equitable taxation.

All preparations, the President urged, should be made in such way as not to check the flow of war supplies to the nations already in the field against Germany.

Measures to accomplish all these ends, the President told Congress, would be presented with the best thought of the executive departments, which will be charged with the conduct of the war, and be besought consideration for them in that light.

CHILD'S SEVERE STOMACH TROUBLE

Harriston, Ont., Father says Dr. Cassell's Tablets Saved his Child's Life.

Mr Corby, Harriston P.O., Ont., writes: "Our little girl was weak from birth, and though we tried doctors' medicine and other things she got no better. She just lay in her cot and cried, and neighbors all said we could not save her. The doctors said she had stomach trouble, and that her chances were small, yet Dr. Cassell's Tablets cured her. They have been worth their weight in gold to us, for we were just giving up hope of saving our little daughter. I don't think there is any other medicine for children like Dr Cassell's Tablets. Publish this letter if you like; it may help others as the Tablets helped us."

A free sample of Dr. Cassell's Tablets will be sent to you on receipt of 5 cents for mailing and packing. Address: Harold F. Ritchie & Co., Ltd., 10, M'Caul St., Toronto

Daylight Saving

The result of a referendum vote of members of the Boston chamber of commerce on the daylight saving plan just made public showed 990 members in favor of setting the clock ahead for the whole year if this could be done on a nation-wide basis. A proposition to apply the plan to eight months of the year beginning April 1 was favored by 611 members. Seventeen members opposed any change in the present system.

THE STORY OF MONTENEGRO

drops, but never will she be struck. In Montenegro, during the fervent heat of a great vendetta, women go scot free, and even a man is safe so long as he is in the company of woman-folk.

There is no such things as privacy in Montenegrin homes. For the most part the houses are built of stone, and have no upper storey. The street door of the house opens into one big room, which is bedroom, drawing-room, dining-room, nursery, and kitchen combined, a wonderful saving of space to say the least of it. In one corner is a bed, in the middle of the room a table, and on one side a fireplace; and not infrequently the chimney is merely a hole in the roof.

Two of the popular amusements are playing musical chairs and listening to the "Gushla." This is a one-stringed instrument, a cross between a violin and a banjo. It is played with a bent bow, and the most talented performer in the land finds it almost an impossibility to extract the faintest resemblance of music from its interior. Dancing is also a favorite pastime, the characteristic form being a lively measure in which the couples face one another, leaping high into the air, while each man encourages his partner by rapid revolver firing.

The Montenegrin possesses a wonderful gift of long distance talking; they can speak with one another over a space of five miles. It is not by the mere volume of sound, but by a peculiar use of the throat. In fact, it is a kind of national human telephone, and very valuable it has often proved.

A remarkable trait in the Montenegrin character is that of absolute honesty. To be called a thief is the greatest insult that can be inflicted. It is no exaggeration to quote the strict law, and that is, that if a man drops his purse filled with gold pieces, the first person passing will place it upon a bowlder at the roadside, so that the loser has only to retrace his steps in order to recover his property. Theft is considered as terrible a sin as cowardice. If a Montenegrin founds his only son a coward, he would not hesitate to shoot him.

There are many queer superstitions among the wilder mountaineers, who believe in sorcery and wizards, and have great faith in talismans, charms amulets, and so forth. On Christmas night you must hang an ivy branch over the door; on St. Jean's Eve, if you rub your chest with pure oil it is a sure preventative against sorcery for a whole year. The ringing of bells quells storms and tempests by putting to flight the witches hiding in the clouds. If you see a snake, do not touch it, for its business in this world is to live over and guard buried treasure. It is unlucky to spill salt or to cross knives, to enter a house left foot first, or to sit down seven or thirteen at a table, by which you will see that the Montenegrins include several of our own superstitions.

The Montenegrins are deeply religious, and in the large room in every house hangs a sacred image or some holy relic before which the members of the household pray. They are adherents of the Greek Church, which is also the national church of their staunch friend, Russia.

Tennyson has summed up the chief characteristics of the Montenegrins in the following poem:

They rose to where their sovran eagle sails,
They kept their faith, their freedom on the height,
Chaste, frugal, savage, armed by day and night
Against the Turks, whose inroad nowhere scales
Their headlong passes, but his footstep fails,
And, red with blood, the Crescent reels from fight
Before their dauntless hundreds in prone flight
By thousands down the crags and through the vales.
O smallest among peoples! rough rock throne
Of freedom! Warriors beating back the swarm
Of Turkish Islam for five hundred years,
Great Crnagora! Never since thine own
Black ridges drew the cloud and broke the storm,
Has breathed a race of mightier mountaineers.

Shields read the following address, after Mrs. Kendry had been personally welcomed back by every one of the members present.

Dear Mrs. Kendry: Eliza Cook in one of her poems has said:

"Sweet is the hour that brings us
Where all will spring to meet us;
Where hands are striving as we come
To be the first to greet us.
Oh, joyfully dear is the homeward track
If we're but sure of a welcome back.

Prompted by the spirit of love, and of appreciation of your faithful and valuable services as our leader, we, the members of the Women's Missionary Society of George Street Methodist Church, wish to extend to you, our beloved president, a most cordial and hearty welcome home.

We wish you all the good, all the happiness that makes life so well worth while and again on behalf of every member of our society, I extend to you a hearty welcome home.

The visitors were hospitably entertained by Mr. and Mrs. Kendry and a very pleasant hour was spent.

ANOTHER EFFORT TO GIVE SOME STREETS NEW NAMES

From time to time the city council has been asked to have certain city streets renamed but no action had been taken.

Mayor Duffus brought the matter to the attention of the city council last night and on a motion of Ald. Duncan and Worth a by-law will be prepared to re-name certain streets. Some of them are:

Brown St. to Auburn St.
Park Place to Park St.
Princess St. to Gladstone Ave.
Cedar St. to Murray St.
Elm St. to Brock St.

The mayor also thought it would be a good idea to have the streets running east and west numbered instead of named. This was referred to the city engineer and city solicitor to give an estimate of the cost and its feasibility.

FRENCH REACH ST. QUENTIN OUTSKIRTS

FRENCH AT SOUTHWESTERN OUTSKIRTS OF ST. QUENTIN AND OTHER PROGRESS MADE

Capture Village of Mont Sur Oise and Penetrate La Faux Where Germans Contested Every Yard of the Ground---Counter Attacks Broken up.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, April 4.—(Official Statement.)—"East and west of the Somme our troops continued to make progress over the entire front attacked by us yesterday. Beyond Daollon, French reconnoitering parties pushed forward as far as the southwestern outskirts of St. Quentin.

"Northeast of Castres our troops reached a line south of Grugies.

"On our right, the village of Mont sur Oise was captured.

"Everywhere the enemy was subjected to violent artillery fire, especially in the region of Essigny.

"South of Aillette fighting was continued on the outskirts of La Faux and in the village, which we penetrated in spite of violent resistance of the enemy over every yard of ground.

"South of Vauveny, German counter-attacks were broken up by our fire, which inflicted heavy losses on our opponents. We easily repulsed two attacks on small posts northeast of Prosnes and east of Auberive.

"There is nothing to report from the remainder of the front."

A series of powerfully organized points of support held by large German forces and about eight miles in extent, were yesterday capturd by the French to the south of St. Quentin. Various villages and heights fell into French hands.

The official communication from the war office announcing this successful operation reports that the town of Rheims has been violently bombarded by the Germans, more than 2,000 shells having been thrown into it, resulting in some casualties to the civilian population.

Prolonged fighting for the village of Henin-sur-Cojeul, southeast of Arras, has ended in the capture of the place by the British, according to the official report last night from headquarters in France. Maissemy, northwest of St. Quentin, and Ronssoy wood, further to the north, have also been occupied.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

BERLIN, April 4. — British and French reconnoitering operations in force on the present battle front in France have resulted in extremely heavy losses to the Entente troops engaged, according to today's army headquarters statement.

CITY HAS REASON TO BE PROUD OF TEACHING AT COLLEGIATE INSTITUTE

A Record Second to None Says Report of Inspector.

Mr. A. H. A. Colquhoun, Deputy Minister of Education, sent to the Board of Education some extracts from the report of Inspector J. A. Houston. Under the heading of "accommodations," a very high grading is given, and in his remarks the inspector says: "A motor driven fan has been installed, and the ventilation now appears to be satisfactory. Cases have also been provided for exhibits. When the walls are cleaned and tinted this coming summer, the ceilings should be made a cream color instead of the present objectionable green."

Under the head of "organization" the report says: "The organization is very satisfactory, and the timetable makes adequate provision for the work in the various departments. The only department which does not meet the requirement is that of physical culture, and this is not the fault of the principal or the staff, but of the conditions."

The character of the teaching is one that the city has reason to be proud of. In every one of the ten subjects the grading is No. 1, and the inspector, in his foot note to the Department, says: "This is a record second to none." Good work is done in physical culture as far as it goes.

In the general remarks the report says: "General conditions in this school, so far as they can be controlled by the principal and his staff, are particularly good. The management is excellent, the staff is exceptionally strong, and the tone of the school impresses a visitor favorably. I am pleased to find that the question of ventilation has apparently been satisfactorily solved. The other problem, regarding proper accommodation and provision for physical culture, will, I trust, receive consideration as soon as conditions justify action. I had the pleasure of discussing matters with the chairman and a delegation of the Board."

MR. H. R. H. KENNER
Principal of the Collegiate Institute.

NEW LIFE FOR BOARD OF TRADE

J. J. Turner Takes the Reins of President.

The Peterborough Board of Trade held its annual meeting last night and the increased interest that was shown speaks well for the support that will be given the new officers this year.

It is thirty years since the local organization took out a Dominion charter and for some years there was no livelier organization of its kind in the Dominion. Lately not so much interest was taken but last night the dormant spirit was aroused and the following officers elected and they are all ready to assist in any movement that will advance the business interests of the city.

The officers elected are:

President—J. J. Turner.
Vice-President—Frank Whitehouse
Secty.-Treas.—B. D. Hall.

The officers and Mayor Duffus, James Hamilton and J. John were appointed to select the standing committees for the year and for this purpose will meet in the City Clerk's office on Thursday at 5 p.m.

High School Boys to be Enrolled for Service on Farms---Competitions for Younger Boys and Y.M.C.A. Farm.

"PLOW OUR HOPE" SAID LLOYD GEORGE

Recruits for the farm and back garden were called for at the meeting in the Opera House last night and parents were urged to co-operate with and encourage the boys and girls in the production movement this summer. Attention was directed to the camp and farm which will be conducted by the Y.M.C.A. boys. Each lad will be allotted a piece of land on the Y.M.C.A. reservation, prizes will be offered and the products will be exhibited at the Peterborough Fair.

Mr. Joseph Wearing, the chairman, stated the purpose of the meeting and gave the audience some records to break, he having had some unusual success in his garden. But he excels, or rather his hens do, as egg producers and on Monday he marked up a red letter day, the occasion being five eggs from five hens.

Prof. C. B. Sissons of the University of Toronto, the first speaker, paid high compliment to the boys of the Collegiate Institute whom he had addressed that afternoon. He had not found an audience more earnest and more attentive in all his addresses to high schools boys and, said the speaker, "I congratulate the principal on the hearing the boys gave me this afternoon."

"The Plow Our Hope"

Farmers who have not responded as they should have responded, and who have kept their boys at home; farmers who have given their boys and now find themselves without help to go on with the farm work; and farmers who have no boys and with a young family are trying to keep things going, were the three classes of farmers referred to by Prof. Sissons. He pointed to Lloyd George's words, "The plow is our hope," and explained that the fighting men cannot exist without food and that unless produce can be forthcoming, it will not be possible for us

FEW OPPOSED TO WAR RESOLUTION

Senator Lodge Declares States Should Seize and Use German Ships Interned in American Ports.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

WASHINGTON, April 4. — The House foreign affairs committee today accepted the Senate's war resolution in the place of its own, and favorably reported the resolution for passage. If it ~~is not~~ taken up in the House late today it will be considered as the first business tomorrow.

Senator Lodge, in supporting the war resolution, today declared that the United States should seize German merchant ships now in American ports and use them to replace the ships Germany has sunk by submarines.

WASHINGTON, April 4.—The war resolution was debated in the Senate today with speeches of support from both sides, and the prospects were that the opposition would be confined to very few. It was the plan to pass it before adjourning.

The resolution was not reached in the House of Representatives, however, as had been planned, and is to be taken up at 10 o'clock tomorrow morning under an arrangement to remain in session until it is passed. After the debate in the Senate had proceeded for two hours Democratic leaders expressed the belief that the vote would be reached early this evening and that only an unusually long speech by Senator La Follette would postpone action beyond that time.

A. H. STRATTON PRESIDENT AND GENERAL MANAGER OF REVIEW COMPANY, LTD.

James Kendry, Ex-M.P. is Vice-President, E. A. Peck Ex-M.L.A., T. F. Matthews and James Lynch the Other Directors---New Linotype Added to Review Plant.

The Board of Directors of the Peterborough Review Company, Limited, which was recently incorporated, was held yesterday for the purposes of organization.

Mr. A. H. Stratton was elected President and General Manager and Mr. James Kendry, ex-M.P., Vice-President. The other directors are Mr. E. A. Peck, ex-M.L.A., Mr. T. F. Mathews, and Mr. James Lynch.

No more enterprising and representative body of citizens were ever united in a business venture, and The Review is now in a better position than ever to render the public efficient and satisfactory service. A new linotype machine has just been installed in the newsroom and wou'd have been put into operation last Monday morning but for the fact that the company from which the machine was purchased failed to send with it some small but essential parts.

This addition to the resources of The Review is the last word in type-setting machinery. It will increase the capacity of the plant nearly fifty per cent. No better machine can be purchased, for the simple reason that it is the best of its kind manufactured. There is nothing to approach it in Peterborough. It will prove as useful in the job work department as in setting matter for the newspaper. The equipment of the machine consists of four magazines of matrices, from which the type is cast, three universal adjustable molds, liners and ejector blades for any specified body of type or length of line, and the machine is so constructed as to make it possible to set any size of type, from the smallest print in a newspaper to the largest heading type, upon it, with only a few seconds necessary to make the required changes.

The operator of the machine will have at his instant command 180 characters in two different faces. The "magasine" which contains the matrices is easily removable from the front of the machine and can be quickly replaced by another containing a different set of metrices.

The Policy of The Review

The Review announced its policy some weeks ago when the new company was incorporated. It will continue to support the Conservative party and will in its columns recognize no sect, class or creed. It notes, however, that the workingmen and the farmers have been practically ignored by the newspapers in this district and will employ every legitimate method to supply this want. Labor's cause will be accorded the same consideration as every other department of modern progress. Special attention will be given to agricultural topics as the weekly issue of The Review, especially, enjoys an extensive circulation in the farming community.

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

PETERBOROUGH, WEDNESDAY, APRIL 4, 1917

OUR COLLEGIATE INSTITUTE.

THE REPORT of the Government inspector on the conditions which exist in the local Collegiate Institute was laid before the Board of Education, and the statements contained therein must afford the deepest satisfaction to the members of that body. It should, too, be a source of pride to the ratepayers, and to all those who take an interest in the educational affairs and are zealous for the reputation of the city.

The local Collegiate is second to none. That is as far as any inspector ever goes, although the chances are that he could as truthfully have said that the Peterborough Collegiate Institute is the best in Ontario, and the schools of this Province lead all those in the Dominion. The organization is complete, and the method of instruction all that could be desired. The ventilation system now in use in the building is perfect.

There is only one thing lacking. No physical training quarters are provided, but even a remedy for this condition does not appear to be insisted upon, as the use of the Y. M. C. A. as an adjunct to the Collegiate in this respect answers the purpose fairly well. At all events, the physical training is as satisfactory as it is possible to make it under the circumstances.

Principal Kenner and his highly efficient staff, who are directly responsible for these conditions, and whose intelligent and faithful efforts have made this gratifying report possible, are to be congratulated upon their success. But the members of the Board of Education provided the building and the appliances and appointed the teachers. The best in every respect was considered none too good for the public, and the results are before those who were called upon to foot the bills.

The Collegiate Institute has not been just recently brought to its high state of efficiency. These satisfactory conditions have existed for years. In order to attain the present high standard it was not necessary to take any chances and elect to the Board some so-called reformer, about whose right to hold office there was any question. The Old Guard on the Board were above reproach, and their reputation as public servants was firmly established. There was no crying necessity, according to their record, for hurling anything in the nature of a firebrand into their midst in order to wake them up.

On behalf of the Old Guard, too, it must be said that they rendered at all times disinterested as well as efficient public service. Not one of them was ever suspected of using the school system of the city as a ladder by which to climb into some position higher up.

THE OUTLOOK FOR LABOR.

IF THE UNITED STATES goes to war and raises from three to five million men for the army, by conscription or otherwise, the labor situation on the American continent will become more serious than ever. So long as the big Republic remained neutral, there was always the hope of aid from the Americans, that recruits for the ranks of labor could be found on the other side of the border. The industrial situation in the United States is as much of a problem as it is here. Labor is scarce in every line, and especially on the farms. If the country goes to war, conditions will be worse than ever, and Canada will be obliged to rely entirely upon her own resources.

Professor Sisson of Victoria College, who spoke in the Grand Opera House last night, delivered a practical address to the students of the Collegiate Institute yesterday afternoon. He did not attempt to arouse enthusiasm, for enthusiasm at all times is likely to be effervescent. What he was intent upon was to impress the boys before him with the seriousness of the situation, and to show them how much they can do to help the nation in this emergency. First of all, the people at home and the soldiers of the Allies in Europe must be fed. The necessity for an adequate food supply transcends even the necessity for men and munitions. The supply of the latter is fairly up to the demand. The men, even if they are numbered by the millions, are useless unless their physical wants are supplied. The boys who are too young to fight are old enough to help raise food for those who are under arms.

The students are not asked to render their services for nothing. They will be paid for their work and will be benefited physically besides by the experience. Some of the most successful men in business and professional life today owe their physical vigor to work performed in the open air in their youth. But better than the money and other material advantages to the volunteer farmers will be the feeling that they are doing what they can to help their Empire over the roughest road it has ever been called upon to travel.

To leave a comfortable home and take up new duties, onerous, and it may be uncongenial, no doubt involves sacrifice, but what is that sacrifice compared with the one made by the young fellows who, in the uniform of their King, have crossed the seas?

Professor Sisson's plain talk to his young auditors at the Collegiate will not be so many words wasted. They listened to him with the closest attention and they were generous and hearty in their applause. Great things are expected of these youths. The Collegiate may be disorganized by their leaving for the country, but think of the thousands of homes that have been desolated by the war!

THE UNITED STATES AT WAR.

AGAIN A CONCESSION made by a democracy to the minority has been abused. Senator La Follette tied up for a day the business of the United States Senate and gave Germany another twenty-four hours' respite by objecting to instant action on the resolution declaring war against Germany. Under the rules of the Senate, he had a right to insist upon delay, and his single objection was sufficient.

It is evident that the people of the United States: from President to senators and representatives down to the masses, are in favor of war. The effectiveness of the declaration will depend upon the celerity with which the resolution is passed through the House and Senate. If no time is wasted in debate, but if action is prompt and unanimous, the decision will do more to impress the world with the sincerity of those behind the movement than all the flambuoyant oratory that could be reeled off in a month. There is no occasion for excuses or explanations. Any representative of the people will simply weaken his own case by attempting either. War was declared against Spain without a word of debate, and war was practically declared against Britain in 1894 over the Venezuela boundary dispute within a few minutes after President Cleveland's famous message to Congress had been read.

When the United States gets into the war, formally and finally, the navy will be used to keep open the highways of the seas. The submarine blockade will be rendered ineffective, and the British navy will be relieved of duty to that extent. It is likely, too, that the United States will in a short time be represented by a number of war vessels keeping the vigil in the North Sea.

There is little likelihood that the Americans will remain passive as far as land operation are concerned. Col. Roosevelt has already offered his services in any capacity as a member of an army corps, which he recommends be sent to Flanders. The work of making munitions will be speeded up more than ever, and so long as American shells are available against the Germans, it matters little by whom the explosives are fired.

The relations between Canada and the United States, amicable for a century, will become more friendly then ever. The war is likely to be shortened by the entry of the American nation into the conflict. The German people have all along been made to believe that nothing was to be feared from the most powerful neutral nation on earth. The fact that blundering diplomacy has caused a rupture with that power may be the last straw required to break the backs of the patient and deluded German people and that they may be driven into open revolt. At all events the war party will find it no longer possible to inspire the masses with hope when the whole civilized world is in battle array against them.

THE RIGHT KIND OF IMPERIALISM.

> A free, voluntary, elastic co-partnership, something greater and more intimate than an alliance and less rigid than a federation, appears to be the natural and proper goal of British Imperial evolution.—St. Thomas Times.

OF ALL THAT WE have heard or read of Imperial relations after the war, the above, taken from the columns of a contemporary that of late has developed an editorial spirit that is Conservative without Tory adulteration, appears to state the case the most aptly. There is a healthy and independent, but withal a patriotic ring, in the utterance. There is nothing of sycophancy, nothing of the fulsome adulation that some Imperialists seem to regard as essential to devotion to the Empire; nothing of the tendency so manifest in other quarters to belittle all things except those which appertain directly to the heart of the Empire.

The ultra-Imperialist is satisfied to bask in the light of the Central Power, instead of making an illumination on behalf of his own country, even though he may have been born as well as raised in Canada. This country must develop national characteristics of its own. A resident must be satisfied and proud to regard himself and to be regarded as a Canadian, instead of a member of the Imperial family, which connection is really only an incident after all. His nativity and the welfare of his own Dominion should be the first consideration with every patriot.

Senator Nicholls, at the banquet tendered him by the citizens of Peterborough the other night, said that, while he was proud of being a British subject, he was prouder still of being a Canadian. More men with that principle as their creed are required to make this country truly great. No closer union between the different parts of the Empire is required after the war is over than that which now exists. The war itself has proved this to a demonstration. With every section of the Empire under arms, no higher type of unity could be desired or attained. Al that is necessary is that some arrangement be made to adjust the burden of a common defence among the various Dominions.

What purpose would be served by forming an Imperial Parliament, which would be a breeder of discord from the very nature of the divergence of interests represented? The tendncy of modern times is in the direction of decentralization and autonomy rather than the reverse. Nations can live in peace without a common law-making body. Britain, France, Russia and the rest of the Allies lived in harmony for a generation, and united at last in a common defence without being knit together under one parliament. Each managed its own affairs in its own way. Canada and the United States, with four thousand miles of unfortified boundary line between them, have been amicable neighbors for over a century, each living the while under a different form of government.

The son leaves his home, the daughter the house of her parents, each to follow a separate career. The fact that they manage their several household affairs independently does not imply a severance of family ties.

The man who aspires to what he calls a wider citizenship may not mean to do so, but the fact remains that he is disparaging his present station. Men like Senator Nicholls ask for nothing greater or better, and the affairs of the nation are safe in the hands of such Canadians.

FEAST OF UNLEAVENED BREAD BEGINS FRIDAY AT SUNSET

Passover, or the Feast of Unleavened Bread, begins this year Friday evening, April 6, at sunset, and continues for seven days. Orthodox Jews celebrate it for eight days, that is, until sunset Saturday, April 14. The feast commemorates chiefly the deliverance of the children of Israel from their slavery to the Egyptians, and so most of the ceremonial and ritual of Passover is intended to be reminiscent of the events and circumstances of that ancient deliverance. Thus, in the Temple at Jerusalem, Paschal lambs were sacrificed to remind the people of the lamb sacrificed by their ancestors at the command of Moses before they departed from Egypt; because the children of Israel, in their haste to leave the land of bondage, did not have time to permit their bread to leaven, it is the law to this very day that during the entire Feast of Passover nothing but unleavened bread (Mazzoth) may be eaten. On the seventh day of the feast the scriptural portion read in the synagogue is the song of triumph sung by the people at the Red Sea, because this day is considered to be the anniversary of the dividing of the Red Sea.

The characteristic feature of the feast is the ceremonial meal, called the Seder, conducted on the evening of the first day. The ceremony endeavors to recall the events of the deliverance of old. The bitter herbs are eaten to indicate how bitter were the lives of the slaves in Egypt. A lamb bone is kept on the table to recall the Paschal lamb offered in Egypt and in the Temple. A pastelike compound of nuts and fruits called "Haroseth" is eaten; this is considered to be a reminder of the mortar used in building the treasure cities for Pharoah. Four cups of wine are drunk, because four were the expressions of redemption used in the Exodus episode. And as it is obligatory to tell the story of the Exodus every year, the youngest son of the household asks four sets of questions as to the nature of the feast, and the father answers, telling the story of the Deliverance from Egypt.

In Palestine, Passover also commemorates the ripening of the barley, the earliest crop, and so marks the close of the winter. Thus, the general message of the feast is freedom, the freedom of nature from the thraldom of winter, and the freedom of Israel from bondage.

RECRUITS FOR

to succeed in the war. The Empire is looking to Canada more than any other country and we must do our share in meeting the situation.

Briefly discussing the advent of the United States into the war, Prof. Sissons expressed the opinion that President Wilson had waited until he was sure public opinion was solidly behind him. That was now the case and, said the speaker, "we hope very good results will come out of it. But it will aggravate the food situation."

Sources of Help

Prof. Sissons took up the sources of help for the farmers and laid special stress on the part the high school boy can play. No boy who is willing to work in the country this year can engage in any occupation where he can help so much as serving with a farmer who otherwise will not be able to sow and reap his crop. The situation this next winter will be serious unless we do our part in production. Besides assisting in the production of food the experience would build up a rugged body and character so essential in good citizenship. The boys will come back better boys than when they went away. In later years when these boys enter business and professional life they will be able to understand the rural problem and treat it with sympathy and understanding.

Plans of the Y. M. C. A.

Mr. J. E. Smith told of the plans of the Y. M. C. A. for summer work and said there were three phases of the work. First, the encouraging of boys to go out from the schools for farm service; second, to start the boys of the city in garden work on their back yards; and third, to place boys on a small farm outside the city with the idea of giving the boys a summer outing and emphasize that while they play they may also take part in production for the Empire. Parents will receive reports on the work of their boys.

In the back yard gardening scheme a series of prizes was being arranged to encourage the boys. "Start your boy as a gardener and if he is successful he will never lose his love for the garden," said Mr Smith.

Mr. Walter Oke had offered a gold watch for a competition among twelve boys not older than sixteen years. He will supply Irish Cobbler seed, giving one peck to each boy. The crops will be exhibited at the Peterborough Fair. Other prizes would be offered for best back yard gardening, the best showing in vegetables at the Fair, and others to be announced later.

Mr. Smith, in making a point, said that the secret of Germany' power to withstand up to this date against the Allies, apart from her military strength, was that the nation had learned how to feed the people by production from the soil.

He drew the attention of the audience to government bulletins, one No. 10, touching on potato growing, which was available free from the Department of Agricultuure, Ottawa and a bulletin on vegetable gardens for every home, which could be obtained free from the Department of Agriculture, Toronto.

Mr. Walter Stocker, president of the Peterborough Garden Club read a report of the nominating committee for the club.

The illustrated address by Mr. Allan of Toronto was highly interesting as well as educational. Mr. Allan answered many questions and imparted information that will doubtless be put to good advantage.

Two vocal solos were given in good voice by Mr. Arthur Milton, soloist at St. Paul's Church, Mr. John Allan playing the accompaniments.

"Why," she replied, "it would have interested me exceedingly. I have been a martyr to freckles all my life."

"No, I believe not," said Mrs. Johnson, "but I understand that she calls on my cook."

GET THE HABIT

There should be a hundred per cent. increase in the vegetable gardens in Peterborough this year over last year.

These gardens mean a fresh supply of vegetables for the family table.

They mean also a reduction in the cost of living.

They will help to create a greater supply of provisions for other parts of the Dominion and for our soldiers at the front. The greater production the better service all round.

They provide good healthy exercise for the man who is confined to an office, or store, or factory all day. The outdoor life will improve the health.

They will bring us closer to Nature and lift our thoughts to higher places.

So it is evident the back garden or vacant lot garden habit has very many beneficial advantages. Get the habit!

Tells in Following Letter How She Was Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Milwaukee, Wis. — "Before taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I was a physical wreck. I had been going to a doctor for several years but he did me no good. A friend told me about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, so I decided to give it a fair trial, and it gave me relief from bearing down pains which had been so bad that I would have to lie down. I also used the Sanative Wash and it has done me a great deal of good, and I am not troubled with a weakness any more." — Mrs. P. L. BRILL, 1299 Booth Street, Milwaukee, Wis.

SAVE but HOW?

You are daily admonished by Bankers, Cabinet Ministers, Judges, and by all the Press of the Country, to save and be thrifty. In fact, the stamps on our letters are cancelled by the admonition to "Save, Save, Save, etc."

Outside of the Bankers' Association, who have recommended the Banks, very few other suggestions have been made.

Why has no person suggested or recommended the greatest thrift producer and the greatest anti-poverty institution known to the Public?

For instance, let us suppose two thousand men at say age 25 propose to test this principle for say twenty years, and one-half of them invest a small sum annually in a bank and the other thousand deposit an equal amount annually with this anti-poverty institution. Now, if I can show you that those who deposited with the anti-poverty institution not only received more than those who deposited in the bank, but that the anti-poverty institution paid to the beneficiaries of the unfortunate depositors who were unable to continue their payments, the large additional sum of $159,000.00 which the banks kept for their stockholders. WOULD THAT INTEREST YOU?

The banks are all right, but if I can show you that this anti-poverty institution not only gave better security and actually gave better returns, but in addition they gave a Bond that if anything unforeseen, such as Death, happen you, they would protect you and your estate to any extent desired, WOULD IT INTEREST YOU?

The above facts can be verified to you by calling at, 'phoning or writing the Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada, 402 Water Street, and such action on your part places you under no obligation whatever.

IN SPRING YOUNG MEN'S FANCY RUNS ON BICYCLES

C. R. Banks Dealer in Bicycles in Ontario Since 1893---Notes a Revival of Interest in the One Time Fad.

Mr. C. R. Banks, who has made himself more popular than ever by his offer of a bicycle as a prize to the boy or girl in Peterborough county who stands the highest at the next entrance examination, has been in the bicycle business longer than any other dealer now in Canada. It was in 1893 that he first embarked in the venture and at that time he was not quite eighteen years old. He has been in the business ever since and what he does not know about a bicycle is not worth acquiring. Mr. Banks believes that a revival has set in and that the bicycle will again become as pupular as it was in the nineties, when wheeling almost developed into a craze.

Mr. Banks will take up the matter of awarding a cicycle as a prize with the educational authorities and complete details will be announced later.

Twenty Years Ago

No other sport in the history of the world took such a large hold on such a large number of people simultaneously as cycling. That is a broad statement, but those who have lived through the many seasons of sport since 1894, or who have kept in close touch with various sporting innovations from time to time will, we believe, confirm us in the above declaration.

It might be said that automobiling has become a greater craze, or that the motorcycle and the automobile have outrivalled the bicycle in totality of acceptance, but take a glimpse over the history of the past twenty-three years; scrutinize some of the events that are directly associated with bicycle riding, and it surely becomes patent that this sport at one and the same time was practically universal wherever civilization ruled and that its adoption by mankind as a means of pleasure was a degree never before known in sporting proclivities.

The readers of this paper are, of course, directly interested in bicycling as associated with Canada, and some remarks on the important phases of the history of bicycling in this country will probably not be amiss.

The success of the bicycle in its present form hinges on the introduction of the pneumatic tire principle, which, as noted previously, undoubtedly has been one of the most beneficial events that man's genius has brought about.

This statement ought to clear up a point that does not seem to be appreciated by as many people as it might be: that the automobile itself, as far as the tire proposition is concerned, is not basic, but is an evolution of the pneumatic tire idea, which was brand new with the bicycle. Therefore, in dealing with bicycling we are getting to the bottom of conditions and principles that brought in the use of the pneumatic tire, and which by making riding comfortable immediately made it universally popular.

MR. C. R. BANKS

In Racing Days

To get a clear idea of just what a tremendous interest was centred in bicycling in the early nineties one has simply to recall some of the things that happened in the racing end of the sport. When you consider the great amount of time and exertion required in training and that the great interest in the vent was largely centred in the personality of the teams, it is certainly amazing to find that thousands of people would walk any distance imaginable to see a bicycle race.

In the nineties not only was bicycle riding very popular with men, but it was also taken up on a large scale by women. Then we had the quads and tandems, and the huge number of stores that rented bicycles to men who took a holiday trip on the "bike" because they wanted, at least, to have one day's sport in this line. Social clubs were started up in various places, most of them, of course, being a part of a bicycle club which would, naturally, have a team contesting the various races then in existence.

Interest Revives

Last year and this year attempts have been made in the States and Canada to revive the interest in bicycle riding amongst those who have not ordinarily been associated with the sport. Last year in the States the slogan was "One Million Bicycles," and in Canada "One Hundred Thousand Bicycles." These figures, of course, were not reached but it is amazing what progress was made towards greater sales.

This year "Bicycle Week" extends from March 31 to April 7 practically in all Canada, and in some cities prizes are offered for the best dressed window and such like. Newspapers are showing a wide interest in the campaign, and it is surprising how many of the bicycle dealers are whipping up their forces to measure up to bigger things. Altogether such enthusiasm speaks well for an industry which a great many people thought had long ago passed into the discard, and which really all along has been holding its own, and right now is actually growing larger day by day.

WAYSIDE NOTES

When the bursting buds and singing birds beckon a welcome to your outdoor fancy, answer the call by a spin on your wheel.

* * * *

You are master of the crowded, stuffy car or delayed traffic when you own a wheel. The cost is trifling as compared with the manifold benefits to be derived therefrom.

* * * *

"Late" because of inefficient car service is never the excuse of the man or boy who rides a wheel to work. Therein lies great satisfaction, and not least is the pleasure and welcome exercise wheeling gives whether on business or pleasure bent.

* * * *

If you cannot own an auto why deprive yourself of a wheel? The cost is far from prohibitive and the benefits and increased health are manifold.

* * * *

It is much easier to ride than to walk and far less tiresome, too. Now that the country roads are hardening up an excellent opportunity is afforded to everyone to hie away for a spin which will be productive of both health and pleasure.

* * * *

Fill your hungry lungs with the fresh, invigorating ozone of spring. Satisfy that winter longing for a dash into the great outdoors.

ELLIOT'S

LAWYER SCHOOL TRUSTEE WHO SHOULD KNOW LAW

Should Not be There If His Act is Illegal.

"Being a resident of your ward and a lover of our public school system, and particularly pleased with the choice the Board made in selecting you as their chairman, being, as I know, an honest and fearless gentleman in all your details, I have read a decision given in the papers concerning a member of the City Council sitting on our School Board as trustee thereof," writes Mr. W. Hartley to Mr. Vincent Eastwood, chairman of the Board of Education. The letter was read at the meeting last night.

Continuing, he says: "There is at present a gentleman who is a lawyer and should know the law in this matter, sitting on our Public School Board, who is getting a salary from our City Council, and if his action is illegal, then he should not be there, and he must know it.

"The Board of Education should be properly constructed, else your proceedings are illegal. The law says no 'officer' of the City Council is qualified to sit on the Board.

"This question should be decided without delay, as Mr. Gordon is surely an officer of the City Council.

"What, then, is your duty?"

Other communications were read and dealt with as noted:

From Miss Rae Gallagher, declining appointment on the public school teaching staff.—Received.

From Mrs. R. Hamilton, Miss L. Maudsley and Miss V. Chapman, accepting appointments on the teaching staff.

From Miss E. Kennedy, school nurse, asking leave of absence for one year or during the duration of the war, without salary, owing to her having been appointed to the overseas nursing corps. The request was granted on a motion of Messrs. Crane and Denne.

From Misses M. Jory, M. Drope, M. Clinscale and A. N. Price applying for the position of school nurse. Referred to the committee on appointments; in the meantime the work is being done by Miss Clinscale until Easter.

From J. Cooper, secretary of the Great War Veterans' Association, asking permission to canvass the school children for funds in aid of the association. The collection will be on Friday, the 20th, the day before the veterans' tag day. On a motion of Messrs. Gordon and Denne the request was granted.

From the Ontario Educational Association asking that the Board be represented at the annual meeting. This was left to Chairman Eastwood to arrange as good a representation as possible as technical educational

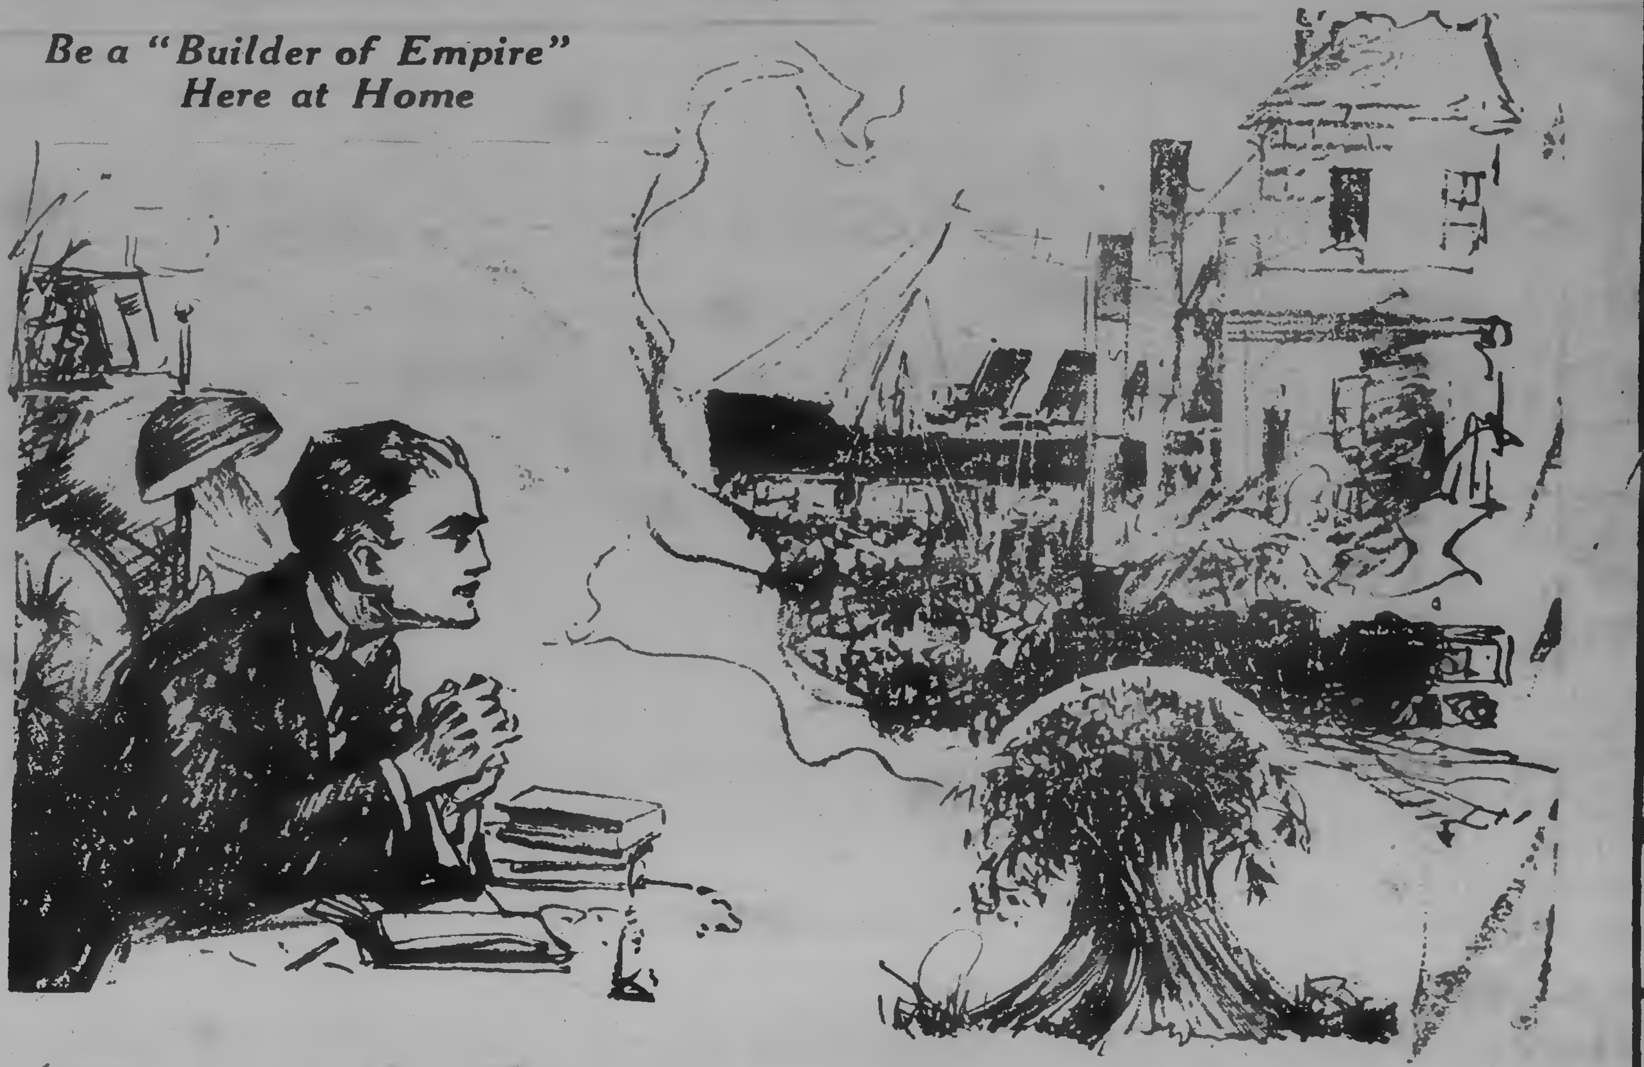
RESTORE THE NATURAL SIGHT



Be a "Builder of Empire" Here at Home

High School Boys--the Empire Calls You

You strong, free, patriotic youths of Ontario, props of Empire—here and now is a man's part for you to play. Help to feed this people—hear the CALL of the Motherland for more food. Let your sturdy young shoulders at this time of seeding lift the menace of want from our gallant soldiers, from our people, our women and children—your own parents, brothers and sisters.

Ontario's Farms Need You at This Seed-Time

"Our food stocks are alarmingly low," is Lloyd George's warning. This is Great Britain's appeal to Ontario for more food. And not only is the beloved Mother Country short, but our own available surplus of food is exhausted.

This coming harvest must not be a failure if human hands can prevent it. YOU can help to prevent it.

But— there is less than 1 man per 100 acres left on Ontario farms, due to the calls of War. What will we do?

YOU High School boys are the Country's hope. Now, at the time of seeding, you are asked to help, so that the crops may be sown. Without you they may not be.

Parents—Let Your Boys Help

Their country calls them—it is an honorable duty to help feed the people. Your boys will be paid. They will be well treated. They will gain in strength. They will learn something of the land and the farmer's point of view—advantages of great value in your boy's education. The work will be suited to the age and strength of your son.

Revise Rules of Education Board

DR. NEAL'S SUGGESTION GOES TO COMMITTEE.

Dr. Neal fathered two resolutions which passed the Board of Education at its meeting last night.

One was that a committee be appointed by the chairman to revise the rules and regulations of the board. The sponsor pointed out that the rules had not been revised since 1903 and were not up to date.

Chairman Eastwood appointed Messrs. Crane, Gordon, Hill, Neal and Denne as the committee.

The other was one requiring the principals to report to the inspector at least once a year on the co-operation of the teachers in maintaining discipline and regulating the actions of children during recess and after school.

PEG-O-MY HEART

When "Peg o' My Heart" comes to the Grand Opera House on Saturday next, April 7th, theatregoers of this city will see one of the most successful and popular plays of recent years. J. Hartley Manners, the author, is well known through his previous offerings, "Zira" and "The House Next Door." "Peg o' My Heart" is termed a "comedy of youth," and has for its central character an exquisite little diamond who shocks the haughty, aristocratic family who are trying to educate her. Throughout the story "Peg" moves a winsome, irresistible, dominating character, like a fresh breath of Old Erin. The United Producing Company has given the play a perfect production, with an excellent cast of players, including Marion Dentler in her original role of "Peg."

CARD OF THANKS

Mr. and Mrs. Iredale, 544 Dewart St., wish to thank their many friends for their sympathy in the loss of their only child; also for the lovely floral tributes sent.

ONE OF UNCLE SAM'S DAUGHTER'S FLAYS PRO-GERMAN SPEAKER

The following is an extract from a letter dater April 1, 1917, from one of Peterborough's former residents, now living in N.Y. State, to a friend in Peterborough. She says:

"Who can tell, we may be in war—tomorrow is the day that the President hands in his decision to Congress. We are in just a 'nest of Germans' and I have had some words with them, but I have the Stars and Stripes floating. I bought a flag and I never would a Union Jack, although I always intended to get one and put it off. We had a speaker in our Sunday School (a doctor) last Sunday, who had been abroad and of course those who go about these times are pretty well watched and thoght of as spies. He was relating some of his experiences when he was in England and among some of the things he said was that England had no love for the United States and her colonies were getting tired—Australia—and he did not know but what Canada was, too, and I called out to him, "Canada is loyal and will remain so," and he got confused. He was not expecting an answer and he came to me after and tried to smooth things over. I told him I did not consider him a good citizen of the United States or he never would say the things he had after the way Germany treated the United States. I said, "You are a pro-German." We cut short his address. I do get so hot over this question.

EMPLOYES ON STREET RAILWAY TO ANSWER CALL FROM THE FARM

All Men Employed on Cars Are Recruits From the Land.

It is possible that the Greater Production movement will be stimulated in a practical way by the introduction of returned soldiers and A. R. men on the street cars, thus releasing practically the whole force of carmen now engaged for work on the farms. Nearly every man now employed on the street cars is a retired farmer or the son of a farmer who is calling for help.

As the Government owns the system, something may be done in the near future. Prompt action could be taken were the railway service in the hands of the local Hydro department, as it eventually will be.

ASK $3,400,000,000 FOR U.S. ARMY AND NAVY

Increase Enlisted Strength of Sea Force to 150,000 Men and Marine Corps to 30,000.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

WASHINGTON, April 5. — Requests for the immediate appropriation of $3,400,000,000 for the army and navy were made to Congress today by the executive department. Provision is made for increasing the enlisted strength of the navy to 150,000 men, and to increase the marine corps to 30,000. Of this great sum little more than $2,980,000,000 is asked for the army.

RELIEF SHIPS SENT DOWN

SIX HOSPITAL SHIPS SUNK SINCE BEGINNING OF WAR.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

NEW YORK, April 5—A Belgian relief ship, the Feistein, has been sunk in the North Sea while approaching Rotterdam, according to a cablegram received here today, by the Belgian Relief Commission. It is believed she struck a mine.

LONDON, April 5— The Belgian steamer Trevier, from New York, with a Belgian relief supply, was torpedoed without warning on Wednesday. While her boats were being lowered the submarine fired on them, severely wounding the captain and several others.

LONDON, April 5.— Six hospital ships have been torpedoed or mined by the Central Powers since the beginning of the war. Thomas MacNamara, Financial Secretary to the Admiralty, stated in the House of Commons today. In consequence, he added, 247 lives were lost and 73 persons injured.

ADVANCES BY FRENCH

All German Attacks Are Without Success.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, April 5—(Official statement): Between the Somme and the Oise the enemy undertook no counter-attack against our new front which we occupiel yesterday. During the night our reconnoitering parties advanced north of Gauchy and north of Mov as far as the enemy lines, which they found to be occupied strongly.

Intermittent cannonading occurred east and west of the Somme yesterday and last evening. The fire of our batteries chcekde quickly a counter-attack which was under preparation by the Germans on the front between Laffaux and Margival. Artillery fighting continues in this sector.

North-west of Rheims the Germans made an attack without success on our lines between Sapigneu and the Godat Farm. Some German detachments were able to gain a footing in our advanced posts but were driven not at once by a counter-attack.

In Alsace we caught under our fire and dispersed a group of Germans in the region of Ammertzweiler.

Elsewhere the night was calm.

BREWERS MAKE AN ADVANCE IN DRY WET GOODS

$1 PER BARREL ON LAGER AND $1.10 ON PORTER AND ALE.

In common with the public, the proprietors of standard hotels are face to face with advanced prices and the latest increase affects the 2 1-2 per cent. lager beer and ales. The natural explanation of the brewers is that they must raise the price because of the cost of labor and materials from which the prohibition drinks are made.

This advance is not at all appreciated by the trade. There is no way by which the retail dealer may jump his selling schedule. With him selling prices must remain stationary. The consumer will not and can not be made to pay more than a nickel for his glass of lager ber or al. And if the dealer serves a smaller glass, it's a 100 to 1 shot that he won't sell anything at all. It's hard enough to coax the thirsty consumer up to the prevailing size of the 2 1-2 per cent.—he hasn't been educated to the use of that stuff yet, and he might abandon it altogether upon the smallest provocation. So there you are.

The new prices are: Lager, per barrel, $8.20; ale and porter, per barrel, $9.10; lager, per dozen pints, 60 cents.

This means an increase in the price of lager of $1 per barrel and $1.10 in the price of porter and ale. The increased cost for a dozen pints of lager is five cents.

BUSINESS MEN JOIN HANDS WITH LABOR TO TAKE ACTIVE PART IN THE NEXT MUNICIPAL CAMPAIGN

Effort to be Made to Elect Labor Man as Mayor and Two or Three Aldermen of Same Party---Capt. Burnham's Letter to Trades Council Critizing The Review Proves a Boomerang.

Secretary Stevens of the Trades and Labor Council, at the regular meeting last night, reported a conference that he had had with Mr. T. C. Elliot of the Retail Merchau's Association. Two weeks ago a deputation of the latter organization had waited upon the Trades Council to ask the delegates to co-operate in the matter of getting a free market. Mr. Elliot said the deputation had been agreeably surprised. They had expected to meet a bunch of Socialists and other rabid agitators, and instead had found an orderly and intelligent gathering, interested and posted in public questions.

On behalf of the merchants Mr. Elliot asked the Trades Council to appoint a committee to collaborate with the business men in municipal problems. The men who opposed a free market will not be forgotten. At the next civic election an effort will be made to elect a labor man as Mayor and to put two or three men of the same association in the City Council.

This suggestion was favorably received by the delegates last night and at the next meeting President Hartley will appoint a committee for the purpose indicated.

Capt. Burnham Heard From

Capt. Burnham, M.P., sent a letter volunteering the somewhat unnecessary information that he was not responsible for the article which appeared in The Review March 24 dealing with the local labor situation. The Captain declared that the article was ill-advised, improper, and that the statements contained in it were not correct.

The communicationed proved to be something in the nature of a boomerang. One delegate voiced the sentiments of the Council when he declared that th article in The Review was correct in every particular, having been supplied by representative labor men. On his motion Secretary Stevens will write to Capt. Burnham informing him that organized labor is more familiar with its own internal affairs than Capt. Burnham apparently is, a polite method of asking him to concern himself with his own business.

The Trades Council asked the Government to remove the embargo on oleomargarine and this memorandum was forwarded to Ottawa by Capt. Burnham. A copy of the reply fo Minister of Agriculture Burrell was sent to the Council last night, the following communication:

It was stated that the Department was being just as numerously requested to maintain the embargo and no hope was held out that any change is likely. With the copy of the letter Capt. Burnham sent in

To the Trades and Labor Council: If I were you I would dance upon or down on the enclosed letter. A thing which is not beautiful in itself and cannot be made beautiful should not be prohibited. We are beginning to legislate for the weak in this country and it will necessarily provide a lot of weak legislation. When people abandon principle they abandon God and when they know so much as to be able to supersede His laws with those of their own of course we may look out for foolishness and we have it here. This is not Protection, not in any sense whatever. I am afraid to use the other word for fear I might be misunderstood.— J. H. Burnham.

Routine Business

A long list of business matters was disposed of. The free market committee was discharged and the aldermen who voted against and for that proposition will be duly remembered at the next election.

President J. J. Hartley was appointed to represent the Council on the Soldiers' Aid Commission.

Preparations for the celebration of Labor Day were advanced another stage and an effort will be made to have every union in the city take part.

The City Council will be asked to put up the names of the streets on the different corners so that strangers to the city will be able to find their way around.

The delegates also declared for the election of aldermen by general vote instead of by wards and for the stopping of street cars on the near side on all paved thoroughfares.

The Council also placed itself on record as opposed to daylight saving and a communication to this effect will be sent to the aldermen and to the Government, the latter to be asked to ignore the request to make the system general. Only one delegate favored putting the clocks one hour ahead.

Delegate A. B. Meyer, of the Typographical Union, who leaves next week for the West, was tendered a complimentary resolution with every wish for success, this being adopted by a standing vote.

Two boys just past the age of 14 were charged in police court this morning with stealing 225 gran bags from the store room of F. White some time last month. The boys sold the bags in lots to local dealers.

They will have a chance of explaining to the court why they bought grain bags in such quantities from two small boys, without making a thorough inquiry.

A SEIZURE OF WHISKEY MADE BY THE POLICE

AN EXPRESS MAN HELD UP AND QUERIES ARE IN ORDER.

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

PETERBOROUGH, THURSDAY, APRIL 5, 1917

CAPT. BURNHAM AND LABOR.

CAPT. BURNHAM sent to the Trades and Labor Council a somewhat irate communication, which was read at the regular meeting last night, and in which he took The Review severely to task for discussing labor matters with relation to the political situation. Capt. Burnham took it upon himself to declare without reservation that the course of this paper was ill-advised and improper. Not satisfied with volunteering this opinion, he went further and asserted that the entire statement was incorrect.

The Captain had his trouble for his pains. All the result of his correspondence will be that the Trades Council secretary, acting on instructions, will send him a letter in reply stating that organized labor knows more about its own internal affairs than Capt. Burnham apparently does. His criticism of this paper served only to bring out the fact that the article in question was correct in every particular.

Two representatives of the new labor party that has been formed, with headquarters in Toronto, had been busy in this city talking up the organization and laying plans for the running of an independent candidate in West Peterborough. A mass meeting was held in Labor Hall, at which the matter was openly discussed. The leaders of the Liberal party in this riding opened negotiations with the Labor men to secure their allegiance, but their peace offerings were rejected.

The Review thought at the time, and still thinks, that this was a legitimate and interesting matter of news. This was the only consideration that induced it to publish it. It never occurred to The Review to consult with Capt. Burnham, and it has no apology to offer now. Capt. Burnham, in his letter to the Trades Council, renounced all responsibility for the article or for the policy of The Review. This was hardly necessary as no one, so far as heard from, held him accountable. He generously concedes that if Labor elects to take an active part in politics it has a right to do so, but it appears to be his opinion that before doing so Labor should consent to be guided by outside advice.

The point scored in this matter by The Review, as a supporter of the Conservative party, was in showing that the attempt of the Liberals to woo organised Labor to its side had failed, and that the record of that party as a friend of the workingman was decidedly against it. We believe that we made this fairly clear, and we are unable to understand how Capt. Bunrham failed to comprehend the matter, as he apparently has.

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

THE GOODD WORK which was started by Mayor Duffus at his three civic banquets is not likely to be abandoned. The organization of business men and citizens which he suggested has been perfected, and a mass meeting under their auspices will be held in the Grand Opera House on Monday night. All [illegible] are invited to attend and to make suggestions for the improvement and development of Peterborough. A constitution for the new organization has been drawn up, and will be discussed at the meeting.

There are none more interested in the development of the city than the ladies. This fact is recognised by the promoters of the movement, and seats in the balcony will be reserved for members of the fair sex.

Mayor Duffus has started the citizens on the right road to attain greater things, and it is now up to them to follow the trail which he has so clearly blazed for their benefit.

HOW TRADE INCREASED.

SIR GEORGE FOSTER, Minister of Trade and Commerce, made a commercial treaty with the West Indies in 1912, and this is one source of the recent remarkable increase in the trade now carried on by Canada. Recent returns show that the imports from this country to the West Indies increased 85 per cent. during the first three years of the treaty.

The preference has greatly benefited the trade with Canada in articles such as boots and shoes, butter, cheese, condensed milk, cordage, fish, flour, lumber, oats, paints and colors, paper, potatoes and soap.

The four products which have been particularly affected by the treaty have been fish, flour, oats, and lumber. In these products there has been a remarkable transference of trade from the United States to Canada. From 1912 to 1915 the exports of fish from Canada to the West Indies increased 52 per cent., while the American export of the same articles decreased 36 per cent. The increase in Canadian flour exports has been no less than 195 per cent., while the American exports decreased 64 per cent. The Canadian export of oats increased 52 per cent., the American decreased 53 per cent. In lumber there was an increase in American exports of 66 per cent.

THE UNITED STATES AT WAR.

THE UNITED STATES at last is at war with Germany, the Senate, by a vote of eighty-two to six, having adopted the resolution prepared by President Wilson himself and declaring that a state of war existed between the two countries. This brings the most powerful of all nations so far neutral to the side of the Allies. The very reluctance of the Americans to enter actively into hostilities gives this move especial significance. The cause of Germany must be desperate indeed when President Wilson was brought to the point of declaring open hostilities.

The Senate in the United States is the body really invested with authority to declare war, but beyond a doubt the lower House of Congress will take the same action. The six pacifists who voted against the resolution cannot be regarded as representing the sentiments of Americans in any way. They are men elected in States in which th population of German descent is in the majority.

THE LATEST POLITICAL COMBINE.

THE FIVE ALDERMEN who voted against free markets, and Mayor Duffus, whose casting vote decided the matter, are not likely to hear the last of the matter. It wil come up against them in the event of their ever asking the electorate for further preferments.

The Merchants' Association and the Trades Council, who co-operated to secure a free market and who failed together, have decided to perpetuatet heir alliance, and will work side by side in the next municipal campaign. The business men have stacked the deck, and it is on the cards to elect a mayor from the ranks of labor as well as two or three aldermen of the same affiliations. Every member of the present Council who voted against the free market proposition is to be a marked man.

The officials who opposed this proposition seemed to regard it as a trifling matter. It begins to take on a more serious aspect.

WOMAN'S NEW CHAMPION.

A MEMBER of the Board of Education comes to the rescue of the lady teachers in the schools by taking the stand that, grade for grade, they should be paid the same salary as men. Is this gallantry, a highly developed sense of justice, or is it merely a play for the support of the new voters, political expediency in short?

The public will be inclined to accept the latter as the true explanation. The equal franchise is already bearing fruit. The women of Ontario had few champions among the politicians, actual or with prospects, before they were given the right to vote. Now gallant knights are springing up on all sides to espouse their cause.

Great is the power of the ballot. Great is the influence of Ontario womankind, now that they are to have a part in the making and unmaking of public men.

A PROPHET AWAY FROM HOME.

THE LIBERAL PRESS of Canada criticize Sir Robert Borden's conduct of the war, while disinterested and experienced authorities in England approve of it. The London Times, for example, says: "The time which Sir Robert Borden will have before the serious business of the Conference begins will not be wasted and it is sound judgment on his part to have come so soon. His last visit was during the summer of 1915, and a very valuable visit it was, not only for Great Britain but—as he was quick to say—for himself and for the Dominion which he has led in the difficult pathway of war with such straight determination and unsparing labor."

FEDERAL DEPARTMENT ACTIVE IN INTERESTS OF FARMERS

The Federal Department of Agriculture is carrying on a vigorous campaign for an increase in food production. It is not a last minute propaganda, but a carefully worked out plan having in mind the certainty of greater demands than ever for food supplies for the Allies.

In October, 1916, when it first became apparent that large quantities of wheat and oats that would make first-class seed and that were likely to be required to produce the next year's crop would be sold and shipped out of the country, a special commission of departmental employes was appointed to purchase and store grain for seed in the Government elevators of the West. This timely action proved to be very wise and as a result many million dollars will be added to the value of our next harvest.

Owing to a large number of cattle, immature and unfinished, being shipped south from Winnipeg to the United States at great loss to this country, the Live Stock Branch of the Department secured the co-operation of Western bankers in support of a movement to encourage the feeding and breeding of live stock.

In October an organized endeavor was made to make this movement more effective. Farmers were advised that the Department would pay their personal expenses in going to stock yards in Western Canada to purchase cattle for feeding and breeding purposes, either for their own use or on co-operative order, for their neighbors. The headquarters of the officers representing the Live Stock Branch, in charge of the campaign, was located in Winnipeg, while officers were also in close touch with the live stock markets at Calgary and Edmonton. Buy orders were placed with commission firms approved by the Live Stock Exchange while the officers of the Department wer available to advise with purchasers and to render any other assistance possible. At the same time officers of the Department were supplementing the work throughout the Western Provinces, visiting the different localities with the view of stimulating the purchase of steers and heifers and personally meeting those who were in a position to carry over the winter breeding females and feeding cattle. The banks actively supported the movement and encouraged farmers to purchase cattle by offers of credit facilities to responsible men.

The policy has proven a very popular one, and has secured the attention and support of the press, of the bankers and of commission men. That it has been acceptable to the farmers is shown by the number who have taken advantage of the policy and the numbers of cattle shipped into Western Canada, instead of south into the United States. The work was initiated early in the month of October, and as would be expected, was very effective, especially so as its operation became more generally known.

STORIES FROM THE STREET

"Kinship is a matter of association, of environment. There is no foundation for the saying 'blood will tell' in the sense of spiritual union." The man in the horn-rimmed glasses had assumed charge of the conversation as usual.

"The term 'related'," he went on while his companion in the pearl gaiters listened, "is merely a technical description used to define physical limitations or to explain physical possibilities. I'm speaking of the sentimental state, the fatherly, motherly, brotherly and sisterly attitudes upon which we are accustomed to place so much stress.

"Look at that gang of boys and girls," he continued. "I venture to say that there are half a dozen brothers and sisters mixed up in it; and yet you wouldn't know the difference so far as any so-called 'blood ties' are concerned between any pair in the lot, unless you saw them herded in at a supper table. Home to most of them means only a place to eat and sleep. These little boys and girls in the streets form associations with outsiders just as strong and enduring as if they were brothers and sisters—stronger perhaps in many cases."

Just then an automobile lurched out of an alley, blasting a passage with its terrific tooting. A street car screamed along and caught the scrambling youngsters and the two men from the other side. The car stopped and so did the auto. A group centred around a little, twisted form close by the track.

The man in the pearl gaiters gently turned the fallen boy upon his back, straightened out the limp figure, and wiped away the blood from an ugly wound upon the lad's forehead.

"Get a doctor, quick," he ordered, "and an ambulance." A dozen leaped into action in obedience.

"That proves I'm right," said the owner of the horn-rimmed spectacles, after the lad had been carried away. "I watched particularly that gang of youngsters to see the effect upon them of the injury to one of their number. They say the boy belonged to a large family. Undoubtedly some of his brothers and sisters were there. Not one of them showed any unusual signs of grief. All were curious, of course, and sobered by the accident, but there was no reaction present springing from those great fundamental ties of blood that we hear so much about. I maintain that it's only the depth, length and thickness of any association that determines its personal affections."

Then they both paused. Crouched down, almost hidden in the shadow of a huge signboard, lay a young girl, her head buried in her arms. Not a sound came from her but a paroxysm of grief shook her little body.

"Oh, my dear!" they cried, lifting her to her feet and calming her sobs with sympathetic touches. "The boy isn't badly hurt. They have taken him to the hospital and he will soon be just as well as ever. You mustn't feel so—why do you cry so hard?"

"He—he's my b-bruvver!" wailed the little girl.

SEVENTEEN YEARS AGO

From The Review of April 5, 1900:

The bill to exempt from all taxes—except for schools—the C. G. E for ten years passed the Private Bills Committee of the Legislature. The deputation that represented Peterborough included Mayor Kendry, Town Solicitor Edwards and Town Clerk Armstrong.

Easily Arranged.

Alice—I am sorry, Frank, but it is quite impossible. We should never agree. You know I always want my own way.

Frank—Oh, that's all right, dearie. You could go on wanting it after we were married.

Misery.

"I'll bet this severe winter has caused a lot of misery in the world."

"I know it has. The water in the radiator of my car has frozen four times already."

His Excuse.

"How did you come to be a collector of antiques?"

"I'll tell you, I was broke one year and had to think up some excuse for not buying up-to-date furniture."

Unnecessary.

The town council of a small Scotch community met to inspect a site for a new hall. They assembled at a chapel, and as it was a warm day a member suggested that they should leave their coats there.

"Someone can stay behind and watch them," suggested another.

"What for?" demanded a third. "If we are all going out together what need is there for anyone to watch the clothes?"

WOMAN IS SUPREME IN UNIQUE SPHERE

Little Girls "Playing Mamma" Indicate Esteem In Which the Race Holds the Home-maker

The following is from Madge Arthur: Have you ever noticed when you find a group of children at play that the game which seems always to be first favorite is that of "playing mamma?" Even the little ones recognise that to be "like mother" is one of the highest things to which they can aim. They are always trying to copy her sayings and doings, and are never happier than when they are surrounded by their dolls, speaking to them and comforting them, as a real live mother does. It is doubtful whether those who have the care of children always realize the position they hold in a child's mind. Mothers and grown-up sisters would need to be very watchful over themselves if they would always remain on the pedestals to which the little ones raise them. In the child's heart at least, the mother reigns supreme, while the "big sisters" hold a high place there too.

Her Unique Place

We often hear people talk about "women's rights." Some women will spend all their time and energy in trying to obtain what they consider their "rights," forgetting all the time that instead of increasing their domain they are losing much of their old inheritance. They forget that they have a kingdom to govern which no one but themselves can govern, and which, if left to other hands, must ultimately go to ruin or be lost. One of the grandest "rights" that woman has is that of being queen in her own home and of making it a place of beauty, and her "subjects" happy. No man can ever fill her place there; there she reigns supreme. It is within her power to make it the most attractive place on earth. Her duty lies there, and her greatest joy. It may be humble, even a poor place, but it is her kingdom, and while she is doing her utmost to make it the happiest spot on earth for her dear ones, she has as much right to be called "queen" as any sovereign on the throne.

Everyone must admire girls who, when it is necessary, have the pluck to go out into the world in order to earn their daily bread; but admiration is just as great for the one whose duty lies at home. She is there in her true woman's sphere. She is doing the work for which woman was always intended. Some girls fret because they cannot go out into the world and work for money as many of their friends do. They grow restless and discontented because they must always "help at home." Now, if these girls would only realize it, they are doing the very noblest thing they can do.

To Become Queens

Does it never occur to them that they are under a great big debt to their fathers and mothers, and that anything they can do, ought to be done to make the "old folks" happy as they become less active and able for work? It often happens that we can help best by working and carrying home our earnings to add to the household exchequer; but often, too, we shall find that our clear duty lies right in the home itself. And when that is the case let us go to work with a right good will. We have been told that we are all born princesses and that some day or other we shall be queens in our own right in our own homes. Let us try then to prepare ourselves for the honor which is to come to us.

MISSIONARIES AND WAR

Canadians Give Money and Lives—Averted Revolutions

That had it not been for the missionaries Great Britain might not have been able to hold India, and that had it not been for the missionaries Africa would have been in a blaze of insurrection at the time the European war broke out was asserted by Rev. Dr. Endicott, general secretary of missions for the Methodist Church in Canada, who labored for nearly twenty years as a missionary in the Oriental field.

Dr. Endicott said the heathen of the world was praying not for the downfall of the British Empire in the present war but for its success, because the heathen was favorably inclined towards the Union Jack. This feeling was due to the work of the British missionary who while ultra-loyal to his own country and the empire, was absolutely devoted to the country in which he labored. He championed the cause of the people among whom he worked and therefore won their sympathy and confidence.

Dr. Endicott said the missionaries of his Church had contributed very largely of their salaries to patriotic work. There was not a son of a foreign missionary of eligibility for military service who was not at the front. Some of the missionaries themselves had donned the khaki.

SAVE but HOW?

You are daily admonished by Bankers, Cabinet Ministers, Judges, and by all the Press of the Country, to save and be thrifty. In fact, the stamps on our letters are cancelled by the admonition to "Save, Save, Save, etc."

Outside of the Bankers' Association, who have recommended the Banks, very few other suggestions have been made.

Why has no person suggested or recommended the greatest thrift producer and the greatest anti-poverty institution known to the Public?

For instance, let us suppose two thousand men at say age 25 propose to test this principle for say twenty years, and one-half of them invest a small sum annually in a bank and the other thousand deposit an equal amount annually with this anti-poverty institution. Now, if I can show you that those who deposited with the anti-poverty institution not only received more than those who deposited in the bank, but that the anti-poverty institution paid to the beneficiaries of the unfortunate depositors who were unable to continue their payments, the large additional sum of $159,000.00 which the banks kept for their stockholders, WOULD THAT INTEREST YOU?

The banks are all right, but if I can show you that this anti-poverty institution not only gave better security and actually gave better returns, but in addition they gave a Bond that if anything unforeseen, such as Death, happen you, they would protect you and your estate to any extent desired, WOULD IT INTEREST YOU?

The above facts can be verified to you by calling at, 'phoning or writing the Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada, 402 Water St., and such action on your part places you under no obligation whatever.

NOGI'S ADVICE TO BOYS

Some Gems of Wisdom From Famous Japanese General

General Nogi, idol of Japanese soldiery, wrote sometime before he died the following note of instructions to the pupils of the Peers' School:

Keep your mouth closed. He who has always his mouth open shows that his mind is blank.

Mind what you are looking at. One whose eye is always wandering tells that his mind is also wandering.

Do not forget your coat-of-arms, family standing and ancestors. Due respect to your ancestors is important.

A boy should act like a boy. Avoid becoming effeminate.

Never indulge in luxury. There is nothing that makes a fool of a man like luxury.

How many of you wash your face with cold water in the winter? You should not use warm water.

It is a shame to wear torn clothes without mending them. But to wear the torn part patched is nothing to be ashamed of.

Know what is shame; he who does not know what is shame is inferior to dumb animals.

Become a man useful to your country. Whoever cannot be so is better dead.

SELECTING COCKERELS

Consider Size, Shape, Habits—Keep Only the Best For Breeding

The selection of male birds should be more rigid than in the case of pullets, for not only is there no demand for mismarked cockerels for breeding purposes, but even first-rate birds are not required in anything like such numbers. One male bird only is needed for every six, eight or ten pullets, and thus, however good the birds may be, their sale is naturally very restricted. It should be remembered in selecting breeding stock that the male bird exerts a greater influence upon the external characteristics of the progeny, and, thus determines in a large measure the size, shape, color of plumage, and the general appearance. While this is true, however, at the same time he is responsible to a certain degree for the internal qualities, and this point must never be lost sight of when selecting the breeding stock. In choosing a male bird, therefore, size and shape should be specially considered, and he should possess a large frame, be clean and tall on the legs, and active in habits.

APPLES, ORANGES, FIGS AND PRUNES

Are The Four Fruits Used in Making "Fruit-a-tives

"FRUIT-A-TIVES" is the only medicine in the world that is made from the juices of fresh ripe fruits. Thus, it is manifestly unfair to say, "I won't take Fruit-a-tives because I have tried other remedies and they did me no good". On the other hand, the fact that "Fruit-a-tives" is entirely different from any other preparation in the world, is just why you should give it a fair trial, in any trouble of the Stomach, Liver, Bowels, Kidneys or Skin. "Fruit-a-tives", is composed of the active principle of fruit and the greatest nerve tonic ever discovered. 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c. WILL DO KITCHEN WORK

Even Actresses Must Drudge—A Girl's Complaint Met

"I am so tired of kitchen work. I hate it!" She is a pretty, blue-eyed girl, but at this moment she did not look pretty, writes Ada Patterson. Her eyes seemed black instead of blue. She looked down at the hands reddened by their association with hot water and the dishpan. The girl wasn't having an attack of the blues. So delicate a hue would not fairly represent her mood. She was in the blacks, fathoms deep in them. She was pitying herself and pitying herself, most of all, because of those reddening hands.

"Did it ever occur to you that every one in the world does kitchen work?" I asked.

"How can you say such a thing? That beautiful girl in the movie I saw last night? Do you mean to say she does kitchen work?"

"Of a kind, she does. And it's hard kitchen work. The hardest is getting her job. And when she has got it there is a hard painstaking exhausting work, the kitchen work of her occupation to be done every day.

"This motion picture actress has had to thread her way through these crowds, has had to visit the cavern-like offices in the big buildings, the oldest of them as ill lighted as some East Side tenements. She has met rebuff and insult. 'I'd rather die than make the rounds of those offices again,' an actress said to me. 'I never know whether I am to sit there for hours, until I'm faint with hunger, or whether I will be bundled out of the place as though I were a tramp. Sometimes I am so heartsick and disgusted that I can't go back for a week. It takes that long to get over my nausea of it.'

"Isn't that kitchen work? And when at last she has her job, which she calls an engagement, she has weeks of rehearsals in the back part of a theatre, reached by an alley. The big dim stage is a less cheerful and comfortable spot than your barn. She rehearses all day, and as the opening of the production nears, she works part or all, of the night. She doesn't work all the time. She would be glad if she did. But, having rehearsed her own scenes, she has to sit hour after hour while others rehearse theirs. Every actress loathes rehearsals. They call it the prose of the stage, or something worse. The little girl half crying over her red hands, hates kitchen work no more than a player hates the weeks of preparation for the play."

Novelty in Veiling

The horizontal white stitching in contrast on the black veiling proves a clever detail in veiling novelties. The spacing is so arranged that the eyes and mouth are clear of the design. The wing trimmed turban over which the veil is arranged is simple but attractive.

Rice Plant

Stew and strain a can of tomatoes, season to taste and add a cupful of water. Bring to the boil, add one cupful of rice and cook until soft, adding more liquid if necessary. Season with salt, pepper and melted butter. The liquid should be entirely absorbed.

STUDY YOUR CHILD

Hints to Mothers on Dressing Their Children

Although a child looking like a small overdressed woman of the world is a far less common sight here than in Europe, still children showing every sign of their mother's lack of taste are not wanting. The dressing of children needs the combination of simplicity, utility, artistic design in keeping with the youth of the wearer and the fashions of the day, to say nothing of comfort which will afford free movement and the unrestricted play of the body.

One-piece garments are the best because they can be slipped over the head and fastened without undue fuss. They are, too, the simplest to make as well as the most comfortable for the child to wear.

The skirt must always hang straight and be more or less full; armholes must be always large, tightly fitting collars, closely encircling waistbelts must always be absent.

The trimming of the little frock must be conspicuous through its simplicity, and anything in the nature of the bizarre noticeable only by its absence. A child is peculiarly sensitive to ridicule.

When choosing a color consider your child's hair and eyes, and not your own complexion. Pinks for the nut-brown maid, blue for the flaxen haired baby, or dark linen or serge lightened with white collars and cuffs are color schemes which always spell success.

Avoid the brick red and scarlet and bishop's purple youth-destroying colors, which excite ridicule for the mother and pity for the unfortunate victim of bad taste.

CORRECT TABLE LINEN

Tables May be Left Uncovered Except For Doilies

A fine damask tablecloth is always in order for dinner. There is a wide range in values up to the elaborate dinner cloth with a centre of heavy lace, a wide band of real linen falling well over the edge of the table and a deep edge of real lace bordering this. Dinner napkins, which are always very large, may be either with or without a monogram in the centre of one corner.

Providing the table itself is made of fine wood and kept in faultless condition, it is most beautiful for breakfast and luncheon when left uncovered, except for the doilies for plates and glasses at each place, and for the necessary centrepiece to match or harmonize. This may be of linen with drawn work of embroidery, or of old fashioned crochet lace according to the other appointments of the table. No doilies are more generally satisfactory than those of good linen embroidered with a neat design or having a scalloped edge.

SOIL FOR THE GARDEN

Proper Soil More Vital Than Water—Rules For Vegetables

What is more important than water or fertilizer for the home vegetable garden, is a deep bed of finely pulverized soil. It should be thoroughly dug with the spading fork and finely raked in the beginning, and the top soil should be stirred to the depth of one or two inches at frequent intervals during the season. It pays to sift the soil in small beds. A sieve is easily made by knocking the bottom from a shallow box and tacking wire mesh over it. If the soil is well pulverized the air moisture penetrates it, and the roots of the plants can find their way about more easily in their search for food.

Make the most of your ground by having a rotation of crops. By this is meant using the same ground for more than one crop a season. Lettuce and radishes are early crops that may be followed by late beans. Turnips are easily grown as a late crop, following peas, beans or other early vegetables. Grow vegetables for their roots, leaves, seeds, or seed pods. When rotating crops, always avoid having two vegetables of the same class occupying the same ground.

DARNING STOCKING HINTS

Holes in the knees of stockings are usually good sized and after they have been washed it seems impossible, in many cases, to darn them. They may be mended easily, however, if after the stocking is taken off, you wet the place where it is torn, then lay the stocking over some flat surface where it will dry quickly, and pull the threads together with your fingers while it is still wet.

The most efficient way to darn runs in stockings is to cross-stitch them on the wrong side. Care should be taken to bring the point of the needle back to the preceding stitch, and if the stitches are taken through the loops of the stockings stitch on each side of the run they prevent further dropping of the stitches.

For the larger holes, where the stocking supporter has torn, darn diagonally across the hole from both sides instead of straight, as it gives a neater and firmer darn.

PUBLICITY VS. ROMANCE

Courting "Before the Family" Tires the Family

There is nothing so exquisitely ecstatic on the known globe as an engagement. But the ecstacy is for two people only, though, unfortunately, relatives, friends, and acquaintances alike are expected to rejoice equally over the affair, writes Laura Kingston. Of course, everybody is glad, and nobody backward in saying so, provided always that the adoring he has money enough to finance the adoring she. But once the congratulations are offered and the engagement, by becoming commonplace, ceases to attract notice, other people would forget all about it, until a pointed invitation suggested the necessity of purchasing a wedding present. This, however, is exactly the course the average engaged couple refuse to let their social circle pursue, for the petty telltale they themselves commit render them absolutely [illegible] ance for the time being.

The engaged girl at home expects that one room shall be reserved for her exclusive use [illegible] later is expected; and when, owing to the limited number of rooms in the parental domicile, or from any other reason, the privilege is denied her, she bills and coos unblushingly for hours in the presence of her assembled relations.

Now, there is nothing more awkward for a casual outsider than to be expected to witness, unmoved, the progression of a love affair. Pater familias may snore unheeding behind his newspaper, despite the unmistakable sound of kissing that flutters around the room, mother may endeavor to diminish the contents of the family mending basket without seeing anything unusual; but it is the maiden aunt who is tortured at the sight "of what might have been," but wasn't, in her own young life; while youthful brothers and sisters take a huge delight in the doings and sayings of "Sis and her young man." But, act as they will, no one is quite comfortable, not even the children, in their presence, for each and all, young and old, has an undefined feeling that the love which should have been sacred to two has lost its mysticism by being dragged through their midst.

The lovers themselves, needless to relate, knew nothing of this feeling. And if they are a nuisance at home, they are even more so abroad. Should they secure an empty seat on the trolley [illegible] their two selves on the space destined for one, and their solitude invaded by another traveller, the glance the pair bestow upon the intruder conveys the impression that they [illegible] at least the expected [illegible] line.

URGES EVERYONE TO QUICKLY GET ON WATER WAGON

Drink Glass of Hot Water Before Breakfast to Wash Out Poisons.

To see the tinge of healthy bloom in your face, to see your skin get clearer and clearer, to wake up without a headache, backache, coated tongue or a nasty breath, in fact to feel your best, day in and day out, just try inside-bathing every morning for one week.

Before breakfast each day, drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it as a harmless means of washing from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour bile and toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach. The action of hot water and limestone phosphate on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It cleans out all the sour fermentations, gases and acidity and gives one a splendid appetite for breakfast.

A quarter pound of limestone phosphate will cost very little at the drug store but is sufficient to demonstrate that just as soap and hot water cleanses, sweetens and freshens the skin, so hot water and limestone phosphate act on the blood and internal organs. Those who are subject to constipation, bilious attacks, acid stomach, rheumatic twinges, also those whose skin is sallow and complexion pallid, are assured that one week of inside bathing will have them both looking and feeling better in every way.

"VANITY FAIR" IS VOTED THE BEST NOVEL IN THE ENGLISH LANGUAGE

What, in your opinion, is the best novel in the English language? Tastes differ and opinions differ. Our own tastes and opinions change with the passing years. The novel that entranced us in our youth would bore us inexpressibly now. The New York Times, with commendable enterprise, recently induced twenty-eight present-day novelists to answer this question, "Which, in your opinion, are the six best novels in the English language?"

The result is surprising in some respects. Not one of the twenty-eight considered the novels of the present day worthy to be compared with the novels of the last generation. The popular novels of our day are not considered great even by their own authors. Yet the young people of our day entirely neglect the classics and the masterpieces. This jury of literary men sitting on the merits of our novels rendered the following verdict. The parenthesis gives the number of votes received by each novel, and the date is the year in which the novel was written. The first in the list were winners in the order given, while the last four received the same number of votes:

Vanity Fair, by William Makepeace Thackery, 1861 (14).

Tom Jones, by Henry Fielding, 1784 (11).

David Copperfield, by Charles Dickens, 1850 (7).

The Scarlet Letter, by Nathaniel Hawthorne, 1850 (7).

Robinson Crusoe, by Daniel Defoe, 1719 (6).

Ivanhoe, by Sir Walter Scott, 1820 (4).

Lorna Doone, by R. D. Blackmore, 1869, (4).

Tess of the D'Urbevilles, by Thomas Hardy, 1891 (4).

Tristram Shandy, by Laurence Sterne, 1759 (4).

It is remarkable that none of the novelists settled upon Dumas' "The Count of Monte Cristo," which still holds its place as one of the great masterpieces of fiction; or Wilkie Collins' "The Woman in White." It seems strange, too, that none of the authors asked to pass an opinion did not give "The Tale of Two Cities" the preference over "David Copperfield," even though the latter was the favorite work of the author himself. Sidney Carton's sacrifice must always stand out as among the best creations of the novelist, modern or otherwise.

Coal Prospects for Next Year

It is with extreme satisfaction we announce to our trade that our order for the coming season's supply of Hard Coal has been again placed with the D., L. & W. Coal Co., whose excellent service to the Province of Ontario was so marked during the past winter months and who, when the Canadian railways found themselves unable to grapple with the existing conditions in transportation, were able to arrange with the D. L. & W. Railway, who in turn supplied for several weeks sufficient engines and train crews to deliver in D. L. & W. cars to Toronto and Brantford for distribution in these and outlying centres two solid train loads of 51 cars each per day of hard coal.

This action modified and relieved largely what was probably the most difficult situation the Province has ever faced.

Competitive companies have attributed this action to the fact that Mr. D. E. Russell, general sales agent of the D. L. & W. Coal Co., is a Canadian by birth, as is also Mr. E. H. Read, the assistant sales agent, and the Ontario trade being in the hands of Mr. W. A. Martin, born and educated in the coal business in London, Ontario.

Whether or not these facts prompted such a generous spirit to the Ontario trade, it has at least placed in us the maximum of confidence that we will be able during the coming year, as we did in the past, to fill every order and every obligation we undertake.

It might not be out of place to say in this connection that we distributed during the past year about 3,000 tons more coal than under normal conditions. Our only regret is our inability, through lack of equipment and stock, to supply every demand made on us.

We are unofficially advised that a reduction in the price of hard coal shipped from the mines will be effective this month, which we will later announce.

THE CENSUS MAN.

"How old are you?" he asked of me,
"And is your color white?
How many in your family?
Can you both read and write?
How much a week do you bring home?
How much goes to your wife?
How often downtown do you roam?
Have you insured your life?

"What was your great-grandfather's name?
At what age did he die?
When was it your ancestors came
From Germany and why?
What color was your grandma's hair?
Was she brunette or blond?
And did your great-grandfather swear
And did he ever abscond?

"How many times do you eat meat?
What is your favorite dish?
Is your wife's cooking fit to eat,
And do you care for fish?
Do you pay rent or own this place?
Have you stored up your pelf?
When whiskers grow upon your face,
Say, do you shave yourself?

"How many times have you been wed?
How oft sued for divorce?
How many of your wives are dead?
Do you bet on a horse?
And do you smoke or drink too hard?
And do you keep a pup?
Have you a garden in your yard,
And are your sweet peas up?"

I answered him right patiently,
I told him all I knew,
I gave to him my pedigree
And swore that it was true.
With courage he performed his task,
Nor ever wavered from it,
But one thing he forgot to ask—
"Have you seen Halley's comet?"
—Detroit Free Press.

Not the Same.

"Mother," queried the pretty daughter, "did father have his salary increased when he married you?"

"No, dear," answered the mother.

"How much was he getting?"

"Only $10 a week."

"But I suppose he had a lot of money saved up, didn't he?"

"Not a dollar. He spent his money as fast as he earned it."

"Did you get along comfortably?"

"Yes, and we were very happy."

"Well, mother, you know dear George hasn't been able to save a cent, but"—

"See here, young lady, if that poverty stricken dude dares show his face around here again I'll get your father to kick him into the middle of next week."—Chicago News.

King George Good Democrat.

King George of England has won the hearts of his subjects by his character as displayed during the war. A writer in London Opinion is very sure that "King George is in a very real sense of the word a good democrat. He is the very opposite of the Kaiser in his perception of the change in modern sentiment towards kingship. He has never departed by a hair's-breadth from the constitutional doctrine of kingship. If anything, he has erred on the side of modesty, reticence and self-abnegation. He has pushed simplicity to its extremest point. If the British empire were a republic it could not possibly elect a president with a character more austere, more unselfish, or more averse from posturing in the limelight. The court of King George and Queen Mary is every whit as simple and as pure as the household of any republican president that ever breathed. The White Court of Britain need not fear comparison with the White House at Washington. In saying this, I am not using the language of the courtiers; I am saying what everybody knows to be true."

Scriptural English.

Those who listened to Mr. Lloyd George's speech at the Guildhall must have been impressed with the way in which the poetry of the Bible has permeated the English language. Nearly every metaphor used by the Prime Minister was one culled direct from the Psalms. Probably Mr. Lloyd George, with all the Celtic feeling for beauty, is particularly attracted to the rhythm of Seventeenth Century English. He is not, however, the only Minister in the British Cabinet with a feeling for Scripture. Mr. Prothero, the Minister of Agriculture, is, though it is not generally realized, "the Prothero of the Psalms"; the man who, fourteen years ago, sent out his book, "The Psalms in Human Life," into the highways and byways for the delight of wayfaring men.

Irish Saws.

"The priest was forty, but he lost his boots," Miss Katharine Tynan mentions in her engaging reminiscences as being the Irish equivalent of the proverb, "There is many a slip 'twixt the cup and the lip." To English readers the saying must seem as cryptic as that in a recently published letter from an Irish soldier, "The enemy has the knave, but we hold the fingers." They both find their origin in the card game beloved of Hibernians known as "forty-five." "The fingers" are the five of trumps, which is the best card in the pack, the knave ranking second in value. The object of the game is to score forty-five points, a piece of good fortune that seldom fails the player, reverend or otherwise, who has succeeded in making forty.—London Chronicle.

The Only Dry Place.

A stingy angler was fishing on a Scottish loch on a pouring wet day. He had been consoling himself from his flask and forgetting his gillie. Presently he asked the gillie if there was a dry place in the boat on which to strike a match. "You might try my throat," said the gillie. "It's dry enough!"—Fishing Gazette.

Canal Doesn't Pay

Whatever may be said of it, the Panama Canal is not making money. A deficit of over 55 per cent. confronted the canal at the beginning of the calendar year, according to advices received at Washington. That is the expense of operation and maintenance of the waterway from the opening to Jan. 1 exceeded the tolls by $5,255,355. The total expenses for the period were $14,717,072.

Liberty for Russia

Geo. Kennan, the best authority in America on Russian affairs, writing in the New York Outlook on the effects of the Russian revolutions, says:

"The present Ministry and the liberal mapority in the Duma are virtually pledged to secure 'universal education," and the new schools required will be opened as fast as possible. An end will quickly be put to anti-Jewish restrictions and limitations. The Pale of Settlement will be abolished and Jews henceforth will enjoy all the rights of citizenship. When the Jews are fully emancipated, as they almost certainly will be, every field of Russian life is likely to be enriched by the efforts and contributions of this gifted race. Finland, whose ancient liberties were taken from her and whose Diet was almost deprived of legislative power by a faithless monarch, will again receive the autonomous rights granted her by Alexander I. a century ago. Finally, the Russian revolution in its relation to the welfare and progress of the world seems likely to be an almost unmixed blessing. Not only will it sow the seeds of democracy in other despotically governed countries but it will add greatly to the world's material and intellectual resources."

"King George's Keys

An extremely quaint and curious ceremony is still gone through in the Tower of London every night, says London Answers. Some few minutes before 11 o'clock the yeoman warder on duty calls to the main guard for the "escort of the keys."

The main guard immediately turn out under charge of an officer and on their approach the sentry challenges "Who comes there?" The yeoman warder answers, "Keys." The sentry again challenges, "Whose keys?" and the warder replies. "King George's keys."

The sentry then calls out, "Advance King George's keys. Guard, turn out!"

The officer of the guoard then gives the command. "Guard, present arms!" and the warder advances, and standing in front of the guard holds up the keys in his hand and calls out, "God preserve King George!" to which the guard respond with a volley of A'mens."

The yeoman warder then proceeds to the Governor's house and there deposits the keys.

POINTED PARAGRAPHS.

"There is no telling" would be an appropriate motto for a sewing society—if the members would live up to it.

Life is said to be a game of give and take—and most people give a lot more trouble than they are willing to take.

Married men as a rule do not lie from choice, but their wives persist in asking them everything.

Conscience tells a man when he is doing wrong, but it is too considerate to inform the neighbors.

Every man knows how a wife should be managed, but few are able to give a successful demonstration.

The average man thinks he would have been a perfect terror in war if business had not kept him at home.

Transgressors seldom realize the hardness of their way until they look at it from behind the bars.

Fuel waste collected from the smoke boxes of locomotives on a railroad is used to produce gas to drive generators for electric light and power at two cities.

Naturalists in Argentine are trying to find out whether the wild horses of that country are descended from those imported by Spanish conquerors or of prehistoric origin.

Most photographers would have to shut up shop if people could see themselves as others see them.

FROM THE WIDE WORLD OVER

Canal Doesn't Pay

Whatever may be said of it, the Panama Canal is not making money. A deficit of over 55 per cent. confronted the canal at the beginning of the calendar year, according to advices received at Washington. That is the expense of operation and maintenance of the waterway from the opening to Jan. 1 exceeded the tolls by $5,255,355. The total expenses for the period were $14,717,072.

Liberty for Russia

Geo. Kennan, the best authority in America on Russian affairs, writing in the New York Outlook on the effects of the Russian revolutions, says:

"The present Ministry and the liberal majority in the Duma are virtually pledged to secure 'universal education,' and the new schools required will be opened as fast as possible. An end will quickly be put to anti-Jewish restrictions and limitations. The Pale of Settlement will be abolished and Jews henceforth will enjoy all the rights of citizenship. When the Jews are fully emancipated, as they almost certainly will be, every field of Russian life is likely to be enriched by the efforts and contributions of this gifted race. Finland, whose ancient liberties were taken from her and whose Diet was almost deprived of legislative power by a faithless monarch, will again receive the autonomous rights granted her by Alexander I. a century ago. Finally, the Russian revolution in its relation to the welfare and progress of the world seems likely to be an almost unmixed blessing. Not only will it sow the seeds of democracy in other despotically governed countries but it will add greatly to the world's material and intellectual resources."

"King George's Keys

An extremely quaint and curious ceremony is still gone through in the Tower of London every night, says London Answers. Some few minutes before 11 o'clock the yeoman warder on duty calls to the main guard for the "escort of the keys."

The main guard immediately turn out under charge of an officer and on their approach the sentry challenges "Who comes there?" The yeoman warder answers, "Keys." The sentry again challenges, "Whose keys?" and the warder replies, "King George's keys."

The sentry then calls out, "Advance King George's keys. Guard, turn out!"

The officer of the guoard then gives the command, "Guard, present arms!" and the warder advances, and standing in front of the guard holds up the keys in his hand and calls out, "God preserve King George!" to which the guard respond with a volley of A"mens."

The yeoman warder then proceeds to the Govesnor's house and there deposits the keys.

HE WILL MAKE RESTITUTION

JAMES HIRD, ARRESTED HERE, PLEADS GUILTY IN TORONTO.

Hird was arrested here about two weeks ago by Detective Meagher at the request of the Toronto police.

POINTED PARAGRAPHS.

"There is no telling" would be an appropriate motto for a sewing society—if the members would live up to it.

Life is said to be a game of give and take—and most people give a lot more trouble than they are willing to take.

Married men as a rule do not lie from choice, but their wives persist in asking them everything.

Conscience tells a man when he is doing wrong, but it is too considerate to inform the neighbors.

Every man knows how a wife should be managed, but few are able to give a successful demonstration.

The average man thinks he would have been a perfect terror in war if business had not kept him at home.

Transgressors seldom realise the hardness of their way until they look at it from behind the bars.

While you are waiting for opportunity to knock at your door she is probably waiting for you around the corner.

T. A. S. AT HOME

Easter Monday night at 8.15 sharp. Admission 50c.

Doubtful Location.

During an inquest held in Cincinnati the following question was put to one of the witnesses by the deputy coroner:

"Where was the deceased struck by the motor car?"

Whereupon the witness, a surgeon, replied: "At the junction of the dorsal and cervical vertebrae."

The deputy coroner looked puzzled. "Will you please point out that on the map?" he asked, indicating one that hung on the wall.
